Chamberlain Says Seizure Of Danzig Means War

8,000 Women Cheer Pledge to Fight For Polish Liberty; Rumania Pact Drawn

Vote on War Supported

SUPPORT FOR the war referendum proposal in the Senate was given by three witnesses at yesterday's hearing, Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, Dr. Charles C. Tansill, of Fordham University, and Representative Caroline O'Day. Page 13.

MILITARY OFFICIALS here said consideration is being given to imposition of an embargo on scrap metal, petroleum and copper to Japan, a step which they are convinced would end the war in China. Page 4.

NAZI NEWSPAPERS praised Italian armed forces in an effort to offset doubts in the minds of German war veterans as to the courage of their axis allies. Page 4.

Intentions Stated

Special Cable to The Post.

London, May 11.—Prime Minister Chamberlain bluntly warned Adolf Hitler today that any attempt to change the status of Danzig by force in such a way as to threaten the independence of Poland, "would inevitably start a general conflagration," in which Britain would be involved.

At the same time, Chamberlain assured Der Fuehrer that Britain had no desire to enter "an unbridled competition" with Germany in armaments or trade, and would not refuse to discuss methods of improving the trade and economic conditions of both countries, on condition that the Nazis gave "unmistakable signs of a desire to restore that confidence which has been so severely shaken."

Chamberlain's declaration, which was couched in the most vigorous language he has used since his bitter condemnation of Hitler at Birmingham in March, was made before a mass meeting of 8,000 women members of the Conservative Party in Albert Hall.

Rumanian Pact Drawn

It coincided with two significant moves toward buttressing the anti-Fascist front in eastern Europe:

Agreement between Britain and Rumania on the main lines of a trade agreement, under which Britain will grant Rumania a £5,000,000 credit from the £85,000,000 "war chest" for the purchase of British arms and other manufactures. In return the British government will purchase for its reserve stocks, 200,000 tons of Rumanian wheat from the next harvest "if available at world prices"—wheat which otherwise might have gone into Nazi granaries to help the Reich withstand a blockade in case of war.

Japan Mediation Reported Offered To Poles, Nazis

Tokyo, (Friday), May 12 (AP).—The newspaper Asahi said today Japan had offered to mediate in the dispute between Germany and Poland. The offer was made Wednesday, after a previous consultation with Italy, Asahi said.

[The newspaper Kokumin, influential in army circles, reported that Great Britain recently made an effort at rapprochement with Japan, but that Britain now is shifting toward a stronger policy and is attempting to check Japan, according to the United Press.]

$3,000,000 Fire Razes Grain Elevators

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Fire which destroyed five grain elevators at Chicago is shown from the air after it had spread from the elevator where it started. A blast which started the conflagration rocked the city's South Side industrial district. The heat was so intense that water from fire boats (left) and ground apparatus turned into steam. The fire was the most serious in Chicago since the $8,000,000 stockyard blaze in 1934. Thirteen firemen and five workmen were injured by the fire yesterday, which caused damage of more than $3,000,000. Eight missing workmen were feared trapped and killed. (Story on Page 6)

3 Cutters Seek 40 Missing as 2 Boats Collide

9 Survivors Picked Up After Crash of 2 Fishing Schooners

By the United Press.

Boston, May 11.—Some 40 crew members of two fishing schooners which collided and sank 150 miles southeast of Boston were sought by three Coast Guard cutters tonight after the motorship Amecita reported rescuing nine survivors.

Those rescued were picked up 35 miles east of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, after they had drifted since 6 a. m. yesterday morning in two open dories.

[The rescued men expressed belief those who managed to gain the dories were still afloat, according to the Associated Press. They said they had experienced no trouble with the weather, rowing through a calm sea until the Amacita picked them up—Editor's Note.]

The ill-fated schooners were the Isabelle Parker, of Boston, and the Edith C. Rose, of Gloucester, both owned by Arthur L. Parker, of Winchester.

"Other dories and men missing," read the message relayed by radio to Coast Guard headquarters here by Acting Master Mallett, of the Nova Scotian lightship Lurcher.

Survivors said that Frank Nickerson, Argyll Sound, N. S., was fatally injured in the collision, and they feared that many sailors had been trapped in the forecastle of the Parker, going down with the ship. The vessels, they said, sank within 25 minutes after the crash.

Parker could not be reached, but Coast Guardsmen reported each schooner normally carried a crew of 25 men. It was explained that both were trawlers and a large crew was necessary to man the dories.

Five survivors were from the Rose and four from the Parker. Survivors from the Rose are Frank Hubbard, Boston; William Ross, Glouchester; Ventura Carbitra, Worcester; Charles Leblanc, and Thomas Bowbridge. Those from the Parker are Ambrose Douchette and Joseph Muise, both Gloucester; Fred Bourque, of Lynn, Mass., and Vincent Muise, of Malden.

Dispatch of the cutters Cayuga, Thetis and Argo indicated that hope for rescuing the other men, presumably drifting in some of the many dories normally carried by the schooners, had not been abandoned.

Engineer Wins $8,000 Verdict in Derringer Suit

New York, May 11 (AP).—A verdict of $8,000 was returned by a jury in Supreme Court today against Paul Derringer, pitcher for the Cincinnati Reds, who was sued for $25,000 by Robert E. Condon, industrial engineer, of Larchmont, N. Y.

Condon accused the ball player of attacking him in a Philadelphia hotel on June 27, 1936, during the Democratic National Convention.

Supreme Court Justice Philip C. Benvenga denied a motion by Derringer's counsel to set the verdict aside.

Derringer who was present when the day's proceedings opened had left the courthouse an hour before the verdict to go to Brooklyn, where he was scheduled to pitch against the Dodgers.

Condon asserted that Derringer, in his shirtsleeves and intoxicated, tried to "crash" a party in his room, with Secretary of War Harry Woodring among the guests.

Salaried Referees In Bankruptcy Urged

Murphy Completes First Phase In Drive to Reorganize System in Administration of Receiverships

Attorney General Murphy virtually has concluded the first step in a program of sweeping reforms in the administration of bankrupticies and receiverships, it was disclosed yesterday.

He will recommend to Congress in the next few days the enactment of legislation to place referees in bankruptcy on a salaried basis, thereby abandoning the antique fee system for these professional bankruptcy officials.

He announced the appointment of Francis M. Shea, dean of the law school of the University of Buffalo, to handle the research work of a committee named recently to formulate an up-to-date program for the administration of insolvent estates.

Hopes to Cut Costs

Murphy's object is, so far as practicable, to place receiverships and bankruptcies on a merit system basis. He hopes, by this means, to weed out political and personal favoritism in the appointment of persons to administer insolvent estates and corporations and in the amount of compensation paid them, to reduce the time required to put properties "through the wringer," and in consequence to curtail sharply the cost of these proceedings.

Solicitor Gen. Robert H. Jackson heads the group intrusted with the job of mapping out such a program. Jackson, however, has been extremely busy with cases before the Supreme Court.

Although the coming Supreme Court recess will give him more time, Shea is expected to take over

FBI Inquiry Starts in D. C. Police Court

Murphy Reveals Investigation 'May Affect Several'

An investigation of conditions in District Police Court—which will affect "several individuals"—was revealed yesterday by Attorney General Murphy.

At his press conference, the Attorney General said an inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation had been under way for several weeks and was nearly completed.

Confers With Pine, Hoover

As part of the inquiry, Murphy told reporters, he has been in conference during the last week with United States Attorney David A. Pine and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the FBI.

Pine last night refused to disclose extent of the inquiry, explaining it would mean a "breach of confidence." He indicated, however, that the investigation was confined to the lower court and in no way affected District Court nor the police.

In response to a question as to whether Judge Hobart Newman, subject of recent criticism in stories published by the Daily News, was personally being investigated, the Attorney General replied:

"I don't want to mention names."

He indicated, however, that both officials and attaches of Police Court were involved.

"The F. B. I.," said Murphy, "is investigating certain things, certain improprieties in the Police Courts, and these things may affect several individuals."

Warring Link Denied.

He denied the action was taken as a result of graft charges in the recent Warring trial.

"This is something which developed later," said Murphy.

The Attorney General, prompted by what he called past irregularities, said he has ordered all United States marshals to assemble here in September for intensive instruction on how to run their offices.

"The marshals are not to keep bankers hours, and certain practices ought to be stopped," he said.

Fog Slows Ship Bearing Britain's King and Queen

Aboard S. S. Empress of Australia, May 11 (INS).—At least eight hours delay due to heavy fog was logged by the ship bearing King George and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States tonight, but it was still hoped the vessel would dock on schedule.

The King and Queen saw movies of Canadian life to help while away the long hours during which the ship either crawled along at 10 knots, or stood still.

Barkley Urges Recess Study Of Tax Ills

'Too Late' for Full Revision, He Says; Disputed in House

By Robert C. Albright

A recess study of business tax deterrents looking to general revision of the corporate tax structure early next session, last night was urged by Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

Barkley declared it "obviously too late" for a thoroughgoing overhauling of corporate taxes this session. He said this was his personal view, and did not necessarily reflect the attitude of the Administration.

The Senate leader's proposal received a cool reception in the House. Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he saw "no great rush about getting away from here."

Doughton Would Stay

"I would want to know first whether business is satisfied with taxes as they are," said Doughton. "Nobody is proposing general tax revision. But if the tax laws need some changes that would help business a little, I am going to stay right here with the Ways and Means Committee and see what can be done."

The opposing views of the two Congressional leaders followed earlier indications by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that the Treasury will lay before Congress the results of is business tax deterrent studies.

Asked whether the President had virtually forbidden him to recom-

Zoo Lion Roars 9 Perfect Notes, But Falters on 8th in Descent

The lion crooning the scale. Inset, Eugene L. Harrison

By Scott Hart.

The strange case of a Washington Zoo lion that can roar nine perfect notes to a booming crescendo and fail, inevitably on the eighth note of the descent, was disclosed yesterday by Eugene L. Harrison, who lives near the Zoo.

Some years of research went into the case, revealed yesterday when Harrison said his tests were proven beyond any dispute. It was this way:

Harrison had lived so long beside the Zoo—his house is at 1820 Clydesdale place—that his ear became attuned, in the nighttime, to the lions' roars. He recognized that wherever two or more of any species are assembled together, that a prima donna will emerge. It was so, among the roars in the night, and Harrison detected the roaring star.

This roar, invariably, ascended nine sweet notes, then careened downward, to fail, as inevitably, on the eighth. The eighth note always exploded in something like a cough, leaving the nine-note scale off balance. Most often the explosion was like a cough, but sometimes it suggested an erratic barbershop minor, Harrison stated.

Now, despite this invariable mishap, Harrison still regards the nine-note lion as the prima donna, because three other lions, whose roars he can identify, can do only a seven-note scale. These lions can descend to a perfectly balanced scale, but they can't ascend above the seventh note.

Harrison said he never had watched the lions roaring, but knows the voice of each. He said that they roar each evening at 6:15 o'clock, and every morning at 7 o'clock, and it was during these hours that his study was made. Harrison, who is employed in the Press Digest Unit, Agriculture Department, is an artist, specializing in animal life.

House to Ask Who 'Fired' WPA Critic

Tennessee Official Who Said Lakes Aided Politicians Called to Testify

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, acting chairman of the House committee investigating the WPA, said last night that his group would investigate the "circumstances surrounding the dismissal" of a Tennessee official who was discharged 24 hours after he was quoted as stating that prominent Tennessee politicians had benefited from WPA construction of lakes near their property.

The official, Eugene R. Kuhne, of the State Conservation Department, said he was "fired," but Gov. Prentice Cooper, one of the politicians named by Kuhne as a WPA beneficiary, declined to comment. As soon as news of the case reached Washington yesterday, the committee decided to ask Kuhne to appear as a witness.

A Treasury Department engineer, William C. Spiker, who had investigated WPA construction projects in Tennessee, testified that the WPA had done "a good job" in view of the conditions under which it was forced to operate.

Spiker said that WPA labor was only 50 per cent as efficient as labor employed by private contractors. Labor, he said, accounts for 40 per cent of building cost.

He asserted that a WPA stadium at the University of Tennessee, on which the workmanship was "excellent," would cost $364,00 when completed, compared to a cost of $250,000 if it had been privately constructed.

Workers Accused

The committee heard from another of its investigators, Chris Doose, that he had been told that some Workers' Alliance members in Reading, Pa., had proposed to forcibly prevent Representative Moser (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, from speaking at a postoffice cornerstone laying tomorrow. Moser, who has voted against all increases in relief appropriations, said last night he would "welcome" any such attempt, as that "would bring this business to a head."

In a telegram to Representative Taylor, of Colorado, chairman of the investigating committee, David Lasser, president of the Alliance, denied the charge concerning Representative Moser as "absolutely unfounded." Lasser also sent a wire direct to Moser, promising that the members of the Alliance will "insure that your speech Saturday will not be interfered with by any hoodlums or stool pigeons that may have been sent into our organization by reactionaries to create a fake issue."

Attack Plan Voted Down

Doose told the committee he had been informed that at an Alliance meeting in Reading early this week an Alliance official proposed that Moser be removed bodily from the platform if he should appear at the ceremonies Saturday. The resolution was defeated after considerable discussion. Doose reported his informant as saying, but the members decided to picket the cornerstone laying.

The reported dismissal of Kuhne from his post as fish technician evoked comment both from the acting chairman and the ranking minority member of the investigating committee.

"The committee is very much surprised to see disciplinary action taken against a State official for giving information to the committee," said Woodrum; while Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, observed that "it looks to me like a direct attempt on the part of some politicians to scare people and prevent them from telling facts."

One of the Tennessee investigators, Harry S. Barger, testified that some private driveway had been built with WPA labor. He quoted a county treasurer as saying that "as you drive along some roads, you can tell which residents are Democrats and which Republicans by whether their driveways have been improved."

Russian Aviatrix, Brigade Chief Die In Plane Crash

Moscow, May 11 (AP).—The famed Russian woman flier, Capt. Polina Ossipenko, and Brigade Commander Anatole Seroff died today in an airplane crash.

Details of the accident were not disclosed. Capt. Ossipenko was one of three women who last September 29 flew non-stop from Moscow to the Far East to establish a distance record of 3,717 miles for women fliers.

The check was dated April 30, the day Barrymore ended the St. Louis run of "My Dear Children," and four days after he and Elaine Barrie announced their second separation, which culminated today when she sued for divorce in Los Angeles.

6,000 Return to Pits In Kentucky as 17 Companies Sign; Agreement in West

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11.—Soft coal operators and United Mine Workers leaders announced through a Government spokesman tonight they feel they may reach an agreement by 9 a. m. (E. S. T.) tomorrow to settle the Appalachian bituminous deadlock.

A spokesman for the operators said that "a large block of the tonnage has already reached a satisfactory agreement with the miners," and that the only remaining obstacle was a group of Southern operators opposing the union's "union shop" demand on principle.

Meanwhile, approximately 6,000 western Kentucky miners returned to the pits tonight following an agreement earlier in the day between operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

2-Year Contract Signed

W. W. Bridges, of Central City, president of the Western Kentucky Coal Operators' Association, and Ed J. Morgan, Madisonville, president of District 23, U. M. W. A., announced the signing of a two-year contract starting April 1 of this year.

The agreement, signed by 17 companies, includes the "union shop" clause. Wage and working conditions in the old contract which expired March 31 last were continued.

At Pittsburg, Kans., operators and union officials of District 14 of the United Mine Workers signed a new two-year contract for the Kansas-Missouri District. It was an extension of the old contract but granted the union exclusive bargaining rights and renewed the union shop principle.

Operators said some of the mines would reopen tomorrow.

However, meeting at Knoxville, Tenn., Southern Appalachian coal operators unanimously opposed today what they called a "closed shop contract." They instructed their representative in the New York contract conference, L. C. Gunter, "to continue indefinitely his unqualified support of the operators of the entire Appalachian area in refusing to sign a closed shop contract."

The tieup began when the union agreement expired April 31 and eventually threw nearly half a million miners out of work.

The Government spokesman, Dr. John R. Steelman, Federal labor mediator, said that in view of the anticipated agreement, "both parties have agreed, with Government approval, to delay any signing of contracts by districts or associations or individuals before tomorrow."

Local Contracts Authorized

The announcement came after union President John L. Lewis had authorized union districts outside

Mercy Killer Freed by Jury Of 12 Parents

Wife Reveals Plan To Adopt Child to Replace Slain Boy

By the United Press.

New York, May 11.—Seven men and five women, all but one of them parents of normal children, today granted mercy to Louis Greenfield, who killed his imbecile son because, he said, it was "the will of God."

The jurors acquitted him of a manslaughter charge four hours and four minutes after they had been given the case.

Mrs. Greenfield, tears streaming from her eyes, announced after the verdict that she and her husband would now seek to adopt a child "to replace our little Jerry." She said they wanted a boy "2 or 3 years old."

Prosecutor Touched

Judge Lester Patterson had charged the jurors, who during the trial had made no effort to conceal their obvious sympathy for the sorrow-aged defendant, that they should acquit him if they found that he chloroformed his 16-year-old son, Jerome, while his reason was affected by the child's suffering.

Even Prosecutor George Tilzer, while formally demanding legal justice, expressed sympathy for the defendant.

"I admit," he told the jurors this afternoon, "that inside me there is a veritable tug of war between heart and mind."

Seeks Conviction

Showing little taste for the law's requirement, Tilzer nevertheless asked for a conviction.

"Because the Lord has given this man a burden," he said, "a hardship, and visited adversity upon him, is he to thrust them aside? Mr. Greenfield was a man of strength of character. He knew what he was doing."

But the jurors carried into their deliberations a poignant memory of Greenfield, 46 years old but looking a half generation older, and his pale wife, both of whom told from

Plot to Blackmail Politician's Widow Charged by FBI

New York, May 11 (AP).—A man booked as Gerald Klein, 21, was arrested late today in a midtown hotel and accused by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the leader in a blackmail plot against Mrs. Edward L. Schneider, widow of a lieutenant of the indicted Democratic political boss of Kansas City, Tom Pendergast.

Schneider's body was found in the Missouri River at Kansas City recently after he testified before a grand jury which indicted Pendergast for income tax evasion.

Federal agents said Klein had written a letter to Mrs. Schneider in which he claimed to be an illegitimate son of her husband and asked for the continuance of a purported allowance of $50 a week which he said he had been receiving from Schneider.

Hopkins Names Oliver C. Short as Personnel Chief

Oliver C. Short, former employment commissioner of Maryland, yesterday was named personnel director of the Commerce Department by Secretary Hopkins.

He will succeed Edward J. Garner, acting personnel director.

For the past four years Short has been personnel director of the Census Bureau and formerly was associated with the State Civil Service Commission of New Jersey.

Gardner will be transferred to the Census Bureau as personnel director, it was announced.

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: A diplomat must necessarily be the most cautious of men . . . Personally he may be bold and reckless by nature; for his country he must never take chances, just as a married man can't take the chances a single man takes. To illustrate: The British Ambassador doesn't dare tell his government that we Americans would help England in a war; the German envoy dassn't tell Berlin that we wouldn't.

U. & U.

Sir Ronald . . . yields a wave

Rightly or wrongly, President Roosevelt got credit personally for the surrealist parade which escorted the Nicaraguan President from the Union Station to the White House . . . Just a few tanks and motorcycles, just a dab of fighting planes overhead; symbols of a lean nation, eager to be friendly. Those who predicted (or actually described) a nerve-wracking military display were left comically out on a limb.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: One reason Gen. Hugh Drum wasn't made Chief of Staff was that his friends have been arguing too loud and long for him . . . Why do some States keep sending men back to Congress after they're senile? . . . Seventeen years elapsed between G. Washington's first and second trips to New York, in case you're planning trips to the fair this summer.

"—Italia ruling the waves"

When Ambassador Lindsay attended the opening of the N. Y. Fair, he observed a fancy decoration on a far-off building, involving a woman, waves, sea monsters and so on.

"Ah," he said, "Britannia ruling the waves. Must be the British building." But somebody pointed out to him the Italian flag flying above the building.

"Ah," he said quickly, "then it must be the Italian building, with Italy ruling the Mediterranean!"

12,000,000 Security Cards Held by Women

Women hold nearly 12,000,000 of the 41,900,000 Social Security Cards.

The Social Security Board said yesterday that this was a higher proportion than the estimated number of employed women, but that there is a heavy turnover of feminine jobholders.

Of the applications for Social Security numbers last year, 56.7 per cent came from men and women under 30. Among these were more than 1,400,000 between 15 and 19 years old.

Rep. Woodrum Asks Farm Bill Increases Cut

To Ask Conferees To Turn Down Senate Proposals

In a move to block Senate increases in the farm bill, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, served notice last night he will block the usual unanimous consent motion sending appropriation bills to conference.

The $1,218,000,000 bill, carrying $225,000,000 for farm parity price payments, and $113,000,000 for farm surplus removal in an all-time high total of farm appropriations, is due to pass the Senate today.

Majority Leader Barkley forecast passage "within an hour" after the Senate meets. The measure will then be messaged back to the House, which had passed a greatly reduced measure, minus parity payment and surplus removal funds.

President Opposes Increase

Heartened by Presidential opposition to the $372,000,000 Senate increase over budget estimates, Woodrum said he will first oppose the routine conference motion. A special House-approved rule would be necessary to overcome his objection.

Later Woodrum plans to move to "instruct" House conferees to turn down the unbudgeted increases. Under such instructions, House conferees could not agree to either the parity price or surplus removal increases, without bringing the issue back for a separate vote.

The House Appropriations committee is almost evenly divided on both raises, but the House recently followed Woodrum and rejected both items when the chamber's "big city" bloc of 40 members joined forces with a bi-partisan economy coalition. If the Administration supports him, Woodrum predicted a reaffirmation of the former House stand.

Gen. Tyler Named Mississippi River Commission Head

Brig. Gen. Max C. Tyler, assistant chief of Army Engineers, was named by President Roosevelt yesterday to be president of the Mississippi River Commission, succeeding Brig. Gen. Harley B. Ferguson.

TYLER

Assistant Director general of railroads during the World War, Gen. Tyler is well known to Washington, having served here on numerous occasions. From 1919 to 1923, he was Army engineer for the District of Columbia, having charge of much of the local waterfront improvement.

Tyler was chief engineer of the Federal Power Commission here from 1929 to 1931. He became assistant chief of engineers in 1936.

Gen. Ferguson, whom he relieves at Vicksburg, Miss., will retire for age next August.

The Gallup Poll

Public Opinion Found Evenly Divided on New Deal Farm Program in National Survey

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, May 11.—With a joint committee of the Senate and House hammering out new legislation for the Nation's farmers, a survey of public opinion finds that American voters are about evenly divided on whether the Roosevelt Administration has done a good or a poor job in handling the farm problem thus far.

For more than six years the Administration has wrestled with crop surpluses and unstable farm prices. It has paid cash benefits, attempted to restrict crops, improvised soil conservation programs that would get by the courts, and generally tried to improve the lot of the farmer. To determine the public's general attitude toward the farm program, which is almost certain to be an election issue next year, the American Institute of Public Opinion interviewed a cross-section of voters throughout the Nation, both on farms and in towns and cities, asking this question:

"Do you think the Roosevelt Administration has done a good job or a poor job in handling the farm problem?"

The vote is:

Good Job	48%
Poor Job	52

Approximately one voter in four expressed no opinion.

The agricultural program has been one of the most controversial issues of the New Deal, and the close division of sentiment in the survey reflects this controversy. In contrast to such New Deal programs as the Civilian Conservation Corps, the social security act, the securities and exchange act, and the reciprocal trade treaty program—all of which have been found overwhelmingly indorsed by voters in Institute surveys—the farm program is apparently not among the more popular measures of the Roosevelt Administration.

Even among farmers in the South and Middle West, where the bulk of the Nation's farms are located, the agricultural program is favored by only a slight majority. Nearly all of these farmers are affected directly or indirectly by the program, and their opinions on what the Government has done divide as follows:

SOUTHERN AND MIDWEST FARMERS

Poor Job	47

The chief objection raised by voters throughout the Nation is that the program of crop-restriction and surplus control has met with only a "limited success." Many voters also say they object on principle to "paying farmers for not producing," while others, chiefly those living in cities, declare that the farm program is "too expensive for the rest of us."

Those voters who, on the other hand, think the Administration has done a good job with the farm problem argue that the farmers are much better off today than they were when President Roosevelt came to power in 1933. "Many farmers were saved from foreclosure and ruin," runs one typical comment. Reforestation, soil conservation and dust control were also singled out for praise by groups of voters.

The survey found that Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace is personally popular with a majority of voters despite the even division of sentiment on the Administration's farm program. With political commentators sometimes mentioning Wallace for the Presidency in 1940, the Institute asked voters throughout the Nation:

"Do you think Henry A. Wallace has done a good job as Secretary of Agriculture?"

The vote is:

Yes	58%
No	42

The most typical comments made by voters in answering this question were that "he's doing his best under handicaps," and that while some parts of the agricultural program are "bad," Wallace has been "a good administrator."

The farmers in the Southern and Midwestern area divide about the same as the Nation, 55 per cent saying they think Wallace has done a good job, while 45 per cent think he has not.

Florida Senate Votes White-Man Primary Bill

Tallahasse, Fla., May 11 (AP).—The Florida Senate yesterday passed a House-approved bill setting up a municipal primary for white persons only in Miami, where men in white robes recently paraded warning colored voters to stay away from the polls.

In Miami, B. Solomon, colored leader, said an attack on constitutionality of the act would be made by the Negro Citizens Service League if the measure is signed by Gov. Cone.

Under the measure a primary would be held only if more than six candidates qualified for the three commission offices to be filled. The six thus nominated by white voters would face further voting a week later in a general election in which colored citizens could participate.

Ad Campaigns Not Monopoly, Senate Told

O'Mahoney Points Out Congressmen Advertise To Get Re-elected

By the Associated Press.

Delievering a little lecture on how to sell tooth paste or win election to the United States Senate, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, chairman of the Monopoly Committee, asserted yesterday that the secrets of success lies in advertising.

"Like distributors of toothpaste," he told a tothpaste manufacturer-witness at a session of the committee, "we incumbents try to create a demand for our services and the successful candidate is the one who creates the most demand.

"That is largely a matter of advertising."

O'Mahoney, who is directing a study of consumer problems, disagreed with witness Jerome W. Ephraim, a New York toothpaste manufacturer, that expenditure of large sums for advertising by manufacturers of popular brands constituted a "monopoly."

"If Shirley Temple used your toothpaste," the Senator chuckled, "would you refrain from advertising that fact?"

Sex Appeal Emphasis

"Oh no," rejoined the witness. "There would be nothing immoral about advertising that Shirley Temple used my toothpaste—if people didn't mind paying 10 cents more a tube."

"They wouldn't," ejaculated O'Mahoney. "People are like that and there's no use trying to do anything about it."

The exchange followed a complaint by the New Yorker that although his product conformed to American Dental Association standards, he was unable to reach consumers because of a "stone wall" of advertising which, he said, "laid more emphasis upon sex appeal than quality."

Persia Campbell, of New York, executive secretary of the Consumers' National Federation, and Dr. Ruth W. Ayres, an economist on Mayor LaGuardia's milk committee, discussed housewives' purchasing problems.

Consumers Held Misled

Miss Campbell, who said her organization represented 30 consumers groups, charged that consumers were being misled by "phony" advertisements and certifications, that at least one manufacturer was promoting sales among school children by systematic distribution of advertising material among teachers, and that large distributing companies were organizing "consumer" groups tot boost sales of their own products.

DrD. Ayres complained that consumers are "confused and deceived" by the variety of containers used for common household commodities. A conscientious housewife would need a whole daq, she asserted, to choose intelligently one can of tomato juice.

2 PWA Contracts Let Here, Bidding Set for 3 Others

The commissioners yesterday awarded two contracts on local Public Works projects and set the dates for bid openings on three others.

The Chas. H. Tompkins Co., 1630 Connecticut avenue, will receive $468,000 to construct the foundations for the East Building at the Municipal Center development; and the Gamewell Company of Newton Upper Falls, Mass., was awarded $286,571 to install and transfer the present fire alarm centrel office in the District Building to McMillan Park.

Dates for the opening of other projects follow: Superstructure of the District Jail, May 16; estimated cost, $850,000. Outfall sewer, just above the new Bolling Field, May 19; estimated cost, $300,000. Oxen Run sewer, May 23, estimated cost, $50,000.

Special Buses to Horse Show Are Scheduled

Special busses will leave from Connecticut and Nebraska avenues, beginning at 9 a. m. Sunday, to carry spectators to the National Capitol Parks Bridle Path Horse Show at the equitation field in Rock Creek Park. Return busses will leave the equitation field immediately after the show. The round trip fare will be 25c.

James O'Brien to Talk

James C. O'Brien, promotions officer for the Civil Service Commission, will speak on "Competitive Promotions" before the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes, in the Hamilton Hotel tonight at 8 o'clock. All Federal employes interested in the subject are invited.

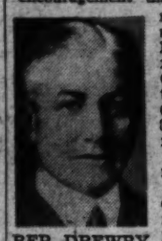
On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

Replies of Democratic Congressmen to a questionnairs on the political outlook have brought "more encouragement than discouragement" to Representative Drewry (Democrat, Virginia), Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.



REP. DREWRY

But he is not ready to make any prognostications about reelection prospects for House Democrats.

"Frankly, I don't know what they are," he said.

"About 60 members have answered the questionnaire, sent out several weks ago, Drewry said, and not one seems to think he will be defeated in 1940.

"Of course," he added, "after we analyze conditions we may find that some of them are too optimistic. Still, in 1936 and 1938, a good many men told me they thought they were going to be defeated and they weren't."

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee yesterday approved hte Towers to be chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Navy Department, succeeding Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, who blocked a favorable report on Towers' appointment last week, withdrew his demand for hearings on the nomination. The pioneer naval aviator, who has been ying since 1912, will have the rank of rear admiral in his new post.

The Senate received the Presidential nomination of Brig. Gen. Max C. Tyler, United States Army Engineers Corps, to be a member and president of the Mississippi River Commission.

Representative Martin (Democart), Colorado, who proudly admits in the Congressional Directory that we spent ten years "railroading,' has introduced a bill that would force the railroads to put electric lights in all cabooses.

"Those swinging oil lamps are dangerous," he said. "Besides, did you ever try to read a Western thriller by lamp light in a rolling caboose?"

The bill appropriating $172,279,765 for expenses of the Interior Department in the year starting July 1 was signed yesterday by President Roosevelt.

While the total was $4,853,328 less than the Budget Bureau recommended, it was $26,952,852 in excess of the amount for the current year.

Montgomery Dog Owners Are Warned

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Aroused by failure of approximately one-third of Montgomery County's dog owners to purchase license tags, the County Commissioners yesterday instructed Chief of Police Charles M. Orme to take steps against delinquents. Beginning May 22, owners who have failed to pay for their dog licenses will be arrested and in addition to the license fee will be fined not more than $25 and costs.

Several years ago the county commissioners ordered a similar drive and ordered that sale of tags be halted. Any person who was found without a license for his dog was forced to pay the fine before being permitted to buy a license tag. This procedure has not been ordered as yet but it is expected the commisisoners will issue a similar order.

Hearings on assessments on 125 pieces of property in the county were held yesterday by the commissioners, with 15 property holders present. None of these assessments placed by the county assessor was lowered. The commissioners announced a hearing June 6 at 7:30 p. m. at the Silver Spring County Building on changes in classification from agricultural to residential of properties in the following subdivisions: Northwood Park, Forest Grove, Reside Subdivision and Evans Parkway Subdivision. The change will bring the properties within the 30-cent suburban tax purview.

Ray Tucker Speaks

Silver Spring.—Ray Tucker, magazine and newspaper writer, addressed the first annual dinner of the Four Corners Citizens Association at Brooke Tea House. Tucker said he did not believe war is imminent in Europe, but that if the dictators become embroiled in war with the democracies, the dictators will have a 60 per cent chance of winning unless the United States enters on the side of the democracies.

President Joseph D. Buscher was toastmaster. County Commissioner O. W. Roby spoke briefly, and a quartet from Maryland University sang. Owens and Johnson sang hillbilly songs and Jean McCandlish played piano selections.

Salesman Arrested

Bethesda.—William H. Temple, 38-year-old salesman for Sears, Roebusk & Co.'s store in Bethesda, was arrested yesterday by Montgomery County police on charges of embezzlement and larceny sworn out by A. K. Jacobs, department store official. The salesman is charged with having kept for his own use $39.95 collected for a vacuum cleaner and to have taken another vacuum cleaner of the same value from the store without permission, police said. He was held in default of $2,000 bond at the Rockville Jail.

Family Flees Flames

Lay Hill.—A timely warning by a passerby that their home on the farm of George A. Willson, near here, was on fire is believed to have saved the lives of Asbury Williams, colored, his wife and five small children early yesterday. Members of the household were forced to flee in their night clothes. The Sandy Spring Volunteer Fire Department arrived too late to save anything.

Day Will Is Probated

Rockville.—The will of Frederick W. Day, formerly of the Forest Glen neighborhood, who died recently in San Antonio, Tex., has been admitted to probate in the Orphans' Court at Rockville. It bequeaths certain personal effects to the testator's brother, Frank L. Day, and leaves the residue to the Frost National Bank of San Antonio in trust in accordance with an agreement between Day and the bank.

Annulment Sought

Rockville.—In the circuit court at Rockville, Louis J. Dessaint, of Silver Spring, Md., has filed suit for annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Valona J. Babcock Dessaint, of Miami, Fla., which took place at Elkton, Md., March 23, 1938. He charges the defendant "fraudulently and unlawfully contrived and induced the complainant to enter into a marriage ceremony with the said defendant."

Mother-Daughter Banquet

Woodside.—Plans have been completed for the annual mother-daughter banquet of the Woodside Methodist Episcopal Church tonight at 6:30 p. m. Approximately 225 mothers and daughters have made reservations. Mrs. Ralph D. Smith, wife of the pastor, will act as toastmistress. A highlight of the program will be a playlet, "Uplifting the Heathen," directed by Miss Margaret Thomas. Members of the cast are Mrs. Howard D. Dozier, Anna Jane Senseman, Lucille Hendrick, Nan Elkins, Marjorie Reside, Betty Harlan, Doris Harlon, Jean Bauer, Jeretha McIntire, Helen Walters, Tilda Jones, Charlotte Keith and Gertrude Disney.

The program also includes vocal solos by Thomas Moore and Phyllis Howland, readings by Marjorie Reside and xylophone selections by Carolyn Rose Cowper.

Two Divorces Granted

Rockville.—Judge Stedman Prescott has granted an absolute divorce to Mrs. Mae Bonner Strobel, of Glen Echo, Md., from James H. Strobel, of Washington, and awarding her custody of the couple's daughter, Jean Bonner, 11. Desertion was charged.

Judge Charles W. Woodward has granted to Edward Lucas, of Silver Spring, an absolute divorce from Mrs. Dorothy E. Lucas, of Bethesda, Md. It was charged that the plaintiff was deserted September 25, 1935. The couple has no children.

Attorneys Urge Punishment To Fit Criminal, Not Crime

Law Institute Here Told of Projected Survey to Draft Code for 'Society Protection;' Ways to Deal With Young Offender Sought

As a step toward crime control, particularly among younger age groups, the American Law Institute yesterday announced a two-year study of the criminal law system of the country with a view to recommending changes that would make protection of society the primary object in punishment.

Dr. William Draper Lewis, director of the institute, said when announcing the study the United States "unfortunately" has inherited a system that makes "the punishment fit the crime and not the criminal."

As a result, he said, dangerous prisoners often are released at the expiration of their terms and others "recognized as almost certain not to commit another crime" kept in jail until their "debts to society" are paid.

"Treatment Board" Suggested

Especially is this dangerous to a nation in which the crime ratio is as high among youth as it is in this country, he declared.

The feasibility of committing convicted youths to a "treatment board" rather than to jails will be considered by the study group, he said.

It was pointed out by Dr. Lewis that crimes against property—such as robbery, auto theft, burglary and larceny—make up the majority of serious crimes committed in the United States and that youths "show an excessive participation" in these.

For this reason the institute committee will take the segment of criminal law administration which affects the youth group between the ages of 16 and 21 "and suggest those changes resulting from making the protection of society rather than the punishment of the convicted youth the primary object."

Receipt of a $40,000 contribution from the Carnegie Corporation to be used in the drafting of a "model code of evidence" was reported by the institute at yesterday's session of its seventeenth annual convention at the Mayflower Hotel.

More than 750 attorneys, judges and teachers of law from all parts of the country are attending the four-day session, which will end Saturday.

Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court, in an informal address that brought laughter, assured the delegates that when it comes to restatement of law—in which the Institute has done considerable work—"our court is far ahead of you" in the restatement of constitutional law.

In a letter that praised the work of the Institute "in this task of adapting the law to the requirements of modern society," President Roosevelt declared: "The simplification of Federal criminal procedure by means of judicial rule-making, is still to be attained.

"The Federal judicial system must be implemented by an adequate administrative machinery. I hope to see these two steps taken in the near future."

Former United States Senator George Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, presided.

Consideration of changes needed in property laws and of restatements of torts covering interference in business relations occupied the afternoon.

Father Gets 9 Months For Beating Infant

Martinsville, Va., May 11 (AP).—Trial Justice R. H. McAbryde yesterday sentenced Bennett Hayden to nine months in jail and imposed $250 fine on a charge of beating his 2-year-old daughter.

"The court regrets it is not empowered to punish you in comparison with the crime," the trial justice told Hayden.

Bandit Robs 14th Street Liquor Store

Escapes With $600 Loot in Downtown Rush-Hour Traffic

While rush-hour crowds streamed past the front door and policemen directed traffic a stone's throw away, a bandit late yesterday held up a liquor store at 730 Fourteenth street northwest, and walked away with more than $600.

Arthur Goldburg, of 1330 Montague street northwest, proprietor of the liquor establishment which is in the Trans-Lux Building, told police he was alone in the place when the man walked in. He asked for a bottle of wine displayed directly behind where Goldburg sat.

When the proprietor rose and turned to take down the wine, he said, the bandit moved behind the counter and menaced him with something concealed in his pocket.

"Get in that back room," the thug commanded.

In the back room was Goldburg's safe, stuffed with three days' receipts kept on hand to cash pay checks for employes of the bus terminal round the corner on New York avenue. More than $600, it was scooped up by the gunman who locked Goldburg in the room and calmly walked from the building.

Goldburg was released after five minutes by his colored messenger, Henry Champion, of 4951 Blaine street northeast, when he returned from supper. Champion then called police.

M. W. College to Add 11 New Instructors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 11.—Eleven new instructors are to be added to the staff of Mary Washington College next year to take care of an anticipated record enrollment it was said today. With the 1939-40 enrollment already near the school's capacity, college authorities believe it will touch a new high. They are now accepting students from the upper 50 per cent of high school graduating classes.

U. S. Reported Studying Tokyo Oil, Scrap Ban

Official Indicates Embargo Would End Chinese Hostilities

By Walter Fitzmaurice.
International News Service Staff Writer

A highly placed official yesterday disclosed the Administration is considering an embargo on shipments of American petroleum, scrap iron and copper to Japan.

The official said this Government's military experts have reported the position of Japan's armies in China would be made untenable by a stoppage of American supplies of the three vital war commodities.

As a probable consequence of the embargo, he added, the military experts believe Japan would sue for peace and accept adjustment of Asiatic questions at an intenational confeence.

Such a conference was proposed in a still-unanswered United States note of last winter reserving all American rights in China under the Nine-Power "open door" treaties.

Official quarters indicated imposition of the embargo may hinge upon the action Congress takes respecting the neutrality act and a resolution by Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, empowering the President to apply economic sanctions against Japan.

Japan's Life-Line

Barring enactment of legislation prohibiting sanctions against a single belligerent, these quarters believed, the President may move this summer to extend the current "moral" embargo upon aircraft shipments to petroleum, scrap iron and copper.

Such a move, they pointed out, would fulfill the President's advocation in his opening message to Congress of "measures short of war" to uphold the sanctity of treaties and international law.

Administration quarters consider the chances of legislative enactments forbidding unilateral sanctions to be remote. They are convinced Mr. Roosevelt would veto anti-sanctions bills, a step which would force proponents to muster a two-third majority of both houses to write the prohibition into law.

Studies of Japan's war economy by the State, Commerce and War departments in conjunction with the Tariff Commission disclose that American minerals constitute Nippon's "life-line" with regard to prosecution of the war in China, it was learned.

Shipments Listed

An official said the studies show that United States shipments of petroleum, scrap iron and copper to the island empire in the two war years, 1937-1938, totaled approximately as much as Japan obtained from every world source, including the United States, in 1936.

The official fixed United States scrap iron shipments at 1,904,768 gross tons in 1937, 1,381,901 gross tons in 1938, and 926,450 gross tons in the first three months of 1939.

Japan's imports from all sources during 1936, the last year the military authorities permitted their publication, totaled only 1,467,689 tons, the official said.

Similar dependence on American petroleum is shown, he said, by comparison of the 31,063,000 barrels of petroleum and petroleum products Japan imported from the United States in 1938, and the 33,321,000 barrels it imported from all sources, including the United States, in 1936.

Mexican Pact Factor

Effectiveness of a petroleum-copper embargo, an official said, depends upon prior settlement of the American oil controversy with Mexico. Without a settlement, he said, the administration was aware Japan could circumvent the embargo by purchasing both oil and copper from Mexico's inestimable supplies.

Analysis of the European military situation has convinced the administration Japan could get none of the three commodities there.

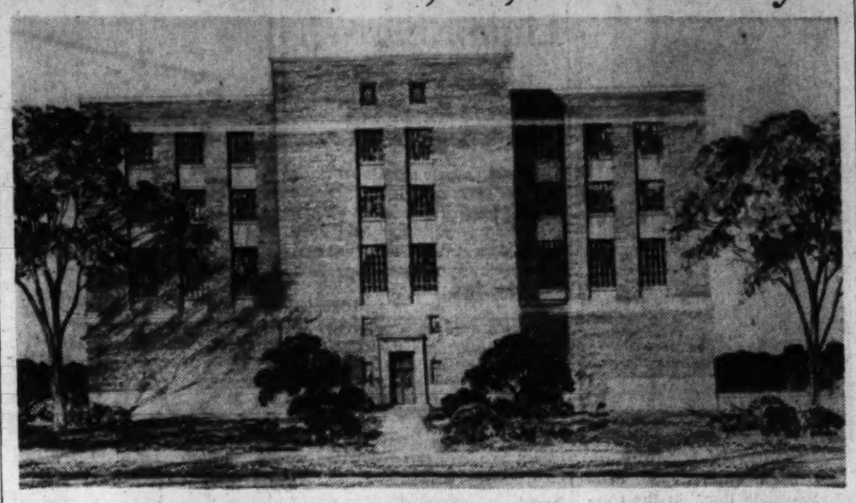
Officials said British-Dutch-Belgian co-operation was assumed on oil and copper. Neither commodity is produced by Japan's anti-comintern allies, Germany and Italy, and reports from the two totalitarian countries indicate domestic requirements absorb every ton they can procure of both these items as well as scrap iron, with none to spare for Japan, an official said.

Slovak Catholics Hit Dr. Benes' Activities

Pittsburgh, May 11 (AP).—A meeting of the Slovak Catholic Federation of America tonight adopted a resolution protesting against "the political activity" of Dr. Edward Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia, and opposing "a revival of" the republic "as it was during his presidency."

Dr. Benes is scheduled to discuss "Is European Democracy Going to Collapse?" at Syria mosque here tomorrow night.

New Standards Laboratory Will Study Way To Reduce Hazard to 1,000,000-Volt X-Ray



Architect's drawing of $350,000 Electrical Laboratory Building for which ground was broken yesterday at the National Bureau of Standards here

Expanded facilities for electrical studies and experiments pertaining to industry and certain phases of medical science were announced yesterday at the Bureau of Standards as ground was broken for construction of a $350,000 high-voltage laboratory.

Three primary projects at the bureau will be housed in the new building—studies to reduce dangers connected with the use of 1,000,000-volt X-ray apparatus, measurements of electrical energy and testing of electrical installations.

The X-ray experiments will be in charge of Dr. L. S. Taylor and electrical measurements and testing under Dr. F. B. Silsbee.

Dr. Lyman J. Briggs, director of the bureau, described the new laboratory as a "very definite step in the growth of the National Bureau of Standards and its possibilities of enlarged and improved service to the public industry."

The new laboratory will be completed about the first of the year, officials said.

Close proximity of the new laboratory to the National Cancer Institute and the United States Navy Medical Center will insure contact between workers in the field of X-rays.

Chamberlain Warns of War

neva, in order to allow Soviet Vice Commissar for Foreign Affairs Potemkin time to travel from Moscow. He will preside over the council, and will have important conversations "behind the scenes" with the British and French foreign ministers, Viscount Halifax and George Bonnet, designed to speed up the inclusion of Russia in the new collective security system which Britain and France have evolved independently of the League.

Daladier Stresses Soviet Aid

A third step—the adhesion of Turkey to the "Stop-Hitler, stop-Mussolini" movement through mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France which would guarantee freedom of passage through the Dardanelles for the British and French fleets—was expected in informed quarters to be announced tomorrow. Staff talks were expected to follow.

In Paris Premier Daladier emphasized the importance of Soviet Russia participating in the "Peace Coalition" in a speech to the Chamber of Deputies. He declared that England, France and Soviet Union were already agreed in principle about the necessity of forming a common front to safeguard the peace, and their divergencies related only to the details of the accord.

"We consider as essentially desirable the participation of the Soviet Union in this common work of mutual assistance," Daladier said. "The Franco-Soviet pact concluded in 1935, which is still in vigor, testifies that the maintenance of this participation on the basis of equality and reciprocity remains one of the constant premises of our diplomatic action. . . . The fundamental principle of the necessity of safeguarding, a common action, the higher interests of peace.") (Daladier's fighting speech earned for him a triumph that is rarely vouchsafed a French premier—he had the entire Chamber, from left to right, cheering him. Leon Blum, the outstanding opposition leader, several times led the cheers, and the Communists, of course, were pleased by his references to Soviet Russia.

Entire Chamber Cheers

France is on a war footing, said Daladier, having taken the necessary military measures. "We do not think of reducing them, but rather reinforcing them if beyond our frontiers certain massive mobilizations are maintained," he warned Germany and Italy.

Europe's preoccupation with the fate of Danzig—although no one is willing to predict where Hitler will strike next—was emphasized by Chamberlain.

"In many minds," he said, "the danger spot in Europe today is Danzig, whereas our assurances to Poland are clear and concise. Although we should be glad to see the differences between Poland and Germany amicably settled by discussion, although we think that they could and should be so settled, if any attempt were made to change the situation by force in such a way as to threaten Polish independence, why then, that would inevitably start a general conflagration in which this country would be involved."

Chamberlain affirmed Britain's desire to maintain the Anglo-German naval treaty, now scrapped by Hitler, as "symbolic of our desire that the two peoples never go to war with one another again." He said Britain is prepared to enter trade talks with the Reich.

Even while Chamberlain was speaking, Board of Trade President Oliver Stanley explained to Commons the terms of the Anglo-Rumanian trade pact signed at Bucharest today.

Offsets Nazi Concessions

Stanley disclosed that a portion of the $25,000,000 to be loaned to Rumania will go to buy British war materials and the rest to the purchase of other British goods.

Offsetting the concessions won by Germany in her recent trade agreement with Rumania, the Anglo-Rumanian pact also provides for the British purchase of 200,000 tons of the next Rumanian wheat crop if it is available at prevailing world prices.

Two other major provisions are incorporated in the pact. One provides for the establishment of organizations in both Britain and Rumania to promote mutual trade. The other calls for alterations in for British imports, such alterations for British imports, both alterations to ease the strain on Rumanian economics.

"Target of Rotten Eggs"

Chamberlain began by remarking that nowadays he seemed to be the "target of a lot of rotten eggs, but that does not keep me awake, because I believe I have the support of the women of this country." He added gallantly:

"They have a clearer vision than some of those whose sight is obscured by party or personal prejudice."

Passing rapidly to the international situation, Chamberlain continued:

"You have watched the old umbrella going around and you have, I believe, approved our efforts, strenuous and, up to now, successful, to keep Europe out of war. . . . It has never been part of our policy to be meddlesome busybodies, interfering in other people's concerns."

Yet when the Reich annexed the Czecho-Slovak provinces of Bohemia and Moravia, Chamberlain went on, "a widespread suspicion was created that we were watching only the first step in a policy which might be contemplating the swallowing of state after state, with the intention, ultimately, of dominating the world."

"It may be that the Nazi leaders have no such ambition," Chamberlain conceded. "If that may be so, then I say Germany has nothing to fear from British policy.

"Never has it entered our thoughts to isolate Germany or to stand in the way of the naural or a definite expansion of her trade in central and southeastern Europe, still less to plan some combination against her with the idea of making war on her."

Any suggestion to that effect, Chamberlain declared heatedly, was "simply fanatic."

"If it is repeated for the purpose of propaganda, well, it will not be believed anywhere outside of Germany."

Chamberlain next quipped a passage from Hitler's Reichstag speech which referred to the Anglo-German naval treaty. Hitler said the will and conviction that war between England and Germany should never again be possible was still alive even today, although that conviction no longer seemed to be shared in London.

"This is a very serious matter," commented Chamberlain. "I want now to make the firm and definite assertion that, so far as we are concerned, the basis of the treaty has not been removed. On the contrary I hold now, as I have always held that the Anglo-German naval treaty can be properly regarded as symbolic of the desires of our two peoples not to go to war with one another again. I believe that desire to be as firm as ever from both peoples and I am convinced that both peoples expect their governments to arrange their relations with one another and so to conduct their affairs that no question of war between us shall arise."

Chamberlain promised that the British government would give "the most careful consideration" to Hitler's expression of readiness to negotiate anew on naval matters and "in due course" would send a reply to Berlin.

Plan to Service Foreign Fleets Stirs Debate

Mott Challenges 'Radical Departure' In Dry-Dock Bill

Whether the United States should service the fleets of Europe's democracies in case of war abroad was debated before the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday.

Representative Mott (Republican), of Oregon, delayed committee action on a bill to construct a giant dry-dock in New York harbor by demanding an explanation from an Administrative spokesman of plans to make the dock available to foreign battleships in case of war in Europe.

He challenged a statement made by Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, that it would be desirable to have the dock to handle the largest foreign battleships in case European shipyards were bombed.

"A Radical Departure"

"The current international situation indicates that in case of war in Europe, England and France would be pitted against Germany," Mott said. "This statement indicates that we propose to service the fleets of European democracies. It is a radical departure in foreign policy."

Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, who appeared in support of the measure, said that taking care of foreign vessels was not the objective of the bill, but was incidental to the main purpose of providing facilities on the East Coast for the Navy's largest battleships. He said foreign use of the dry dock, which would be privately owned but subsidized by the Government, would depend upon the neutrality laws in effect, and promised to "throw further light" on the plan in executive session.

Cruisers to Leave May 17

On the other side of the Capitol, the Senate Naval Appropriations Sub-Committee prepared to conclude hearings today on the $773,000,000 Navy supply bill and bring it up in the Senate early next week.

Meanwhile, naval officials revealed that transfer of five new cruisers from the Atlantic to be part of the main fleet in the Pacific would start May 17. Four of the ships now at New York will sail then, followed by the Nashville when it completes a "good-will" mission to Brazil.

Laurel's Estranged Wife Appeals Jain Sentence

Beverly Hills, Calif., May 11 (AP).—For creating a disturbance in a cafe two months ago, Illiana Laurel, estranged wife of screen comedian star Laurel, was sentenced today to spend five days in jail and pay a $100 fine. She immediately filed notice of appeal and was freed on $1,000 bond.

"This is a different kind of drunk case and you have made it different by focusing public attention upon yourself," said Judge H. Leonard Kauffman. "It is my duty to make the penalty severe."

Nazi Press Countess Doubts On Worth of Italian Soldiers

By Louis P. Lochner.

Berlin, May 11 (AP).—The Nazi press today gave high praise to Italy's armed forces in what experienced observers considered an attempt to overcome doubts as to the value of Italy as an ally.

At the same time Gen. Franz von Epp, Adolf Hitler's deputy on colonial matters, used the lull in agitation over Danzig to reiterate Germany's demand for the return of her war-lost colonies.

Doubt as to Italy's military prowess is almost traditional among German veterans of the World War.

However, a decision to sign a German-Italian military alliance was announced Sunday.

Despite the new spirit of Italy under Premier Mussolini and the great increase in the Italian military establishment, foreign observers believed some doubts remained.

Wide inspired publicity was given to Admiral Domenico Cavagnari's recent statement before the Fascist chamber that Italy has far more than 100 submarines ready for immediate action.

The German press also told the public that Italy immediately could mobiliz 30,000 fliers.

Gen. Giovanni Marietti was credited with disclosing that Italy could mobilize twice the number of army divisions that were available in 1918; in other words, more than 100 divisions.

German readers were told, however, that in reality Italy's strength was greater than numbers could illustrate. Mussolini's address yesterday to Italian reserve officers was quoted in this connection:

"The strength of our arms undoubtedly is great. Even greater, however, is the strength of our hearts. When the hour comes we shall prove it."

Polish Corridor Called an Old, Old Question

Titulescu's Warning 'Revision Means War' Held Understood Now

By Wickham Steed

By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post

London, May 11.—Sometimes an old story is new. My old story began—or at any rate its beginnings became visible—in March and April, 1933. Hitler recited part of the sequel to it in Berlin on April 28, 1939, by denouncing both the German-Polish nonaggression pact of January 19, 1934, and the British-German naval treaty of 1935.

In March, 1933, Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Simon went to Geneva, where the disarmament conference was sitting. MacDonald laid before the conference a scheme for the military rationing of European nations and prefaced it by proposals for "security" so fantastically inadequate that they had forthwith to be dropped.

From Geneva MacDonald and Sir John Simon suddenly flew to Rome, where Mussolini gave them the draft of a four-power pact for "treaty revision." Its immediate purpose was to "short circuit" the League of Nations by linking Great Britain and France with Germany and Italy in an attempt to "revise" the frontiers of Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia.

Poland to Be First

Poland was to be put first on the operating table. The "intolerable Polish Corridor" was denounced as so unwarrantable an affront to German rights that unless it were to be peacefully "revised" out of existence the Germany of the Weimar Republic would be entitled, if not in duty bound, to clear the Poles out of it by force.

The intensity of this campaign against Poland equaled that of the later campaign in 1937 and 1938 against the "intolerable grievances" of the Sudeten Germans in Czecho-Slovakia. In vain did Poland prove that the so-called "Corridor" was the ancient Polish maritime province of Pomorze.

Ramsay MacDonald, to do him justice, felt some misgiving.

Meanwhile, Mussolini blundered. Fearing lest the prospective candidates for the operating table should guess what was afoot, he assured each of their representatives in Rome singly that the projected treaty revision was not aimed at his particular country, but only at others. He seems not to have foreseen that the representatives of Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia would compare notes.

"Revision Means War"

The Foreign Secretaries of the Little Entente — Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia — took counsel together and dispatched Titulescu, of Rumania, to London as their special ambassador while Dr. Benes went in the same capacity to Paris. In London Titulescu saw MacDonald, Simon and Neville Chamberlain. To them he said: "Kindly write in your notebooks that on April 6, 1933, Titulescu as special ambassador of the Little Entente warned you that treaty revision means war."

In Paris Dr. Benes spoke less dramatically to M. Paul-Boncour, the French Foreign Secretary. To him he said France was entitled to sign any four-power pact for treat yrevision that she might wish to sign, but that with the same stroke of pen as she would sign such a pact she would cancel signatures to her alliances with countries of the Little Entente and with Poland.

Paul-Boncour then asked what Benes really wanted. Benes answered that he wanted a letter from the French government giving assurances that no clause or feature of any four-power pact would be incompatible with the existing alliances of France.

In the following months Hitler renewed the furious German campaign against the Polish "Corridor," Marshal Pilsudski then inquired whether Hitler wanted war at once or in five years or in ten. Hitler understood this language, said he did not want war and was ready to conclude a nonaggression pact with Poland for ten years. This pact was signed in January, 1934.

Agreed to Sinister Conditions

But alongside of her pact with Germany, Poland agreed to some sinister secret conditions. One was that she should be neutral if Germany annexed Austria. Another was that she should not join the Little Entente. A third was that she should on no account come to any agreement with Czecho-Slovakia.

These secret conditions gave Hitler what he wanted. By propaganda and diplomacy he could isolate Austria. Chancellor Dolfuss could be murdered with impunity in July, 1934. Hitler then bluffed Great Britain into signing a British-German naval treaty signed to allay British suspicions while he built a strong navy and to make Germany mistress of the Baltic. Laval, the French prime minister, having sold Ethiopia and the League of Nations to Mussolini for a worthless military pact, winked at Italian aggression upon Ethiopia. The Hoare-Laval proposals of December, 1935, did the rest. British-French relations became so strained that in April, 1936, Hitler was able to walk into the Rhineland unmolested.

Today, after the frontiers between Germany and Austria and Czecho-Slovakia have been "revised" out of existence, some people are beginning to understand what Titulescu meant. Great Britain has been moved to give a pledge to Poland. By other pledges to Rumania, Greece and Turkey, British diplomacy is trying to build up an international front against aggression, and the President of the United States has put Hitler and Mussolini in a cleft stick by making it hard for them to "revise" more frontiers without stamping themselves as the aggressors.

War may or may not come. Hitler may choose Danzig and the Polish Corridor as his pretext. But the crux of the position is not Danzig or the Corridor or any territorial possession in and by itself. Nor can concerted resistance to aggression be more than the negative side of the true issue. The positive side of any cause in whose support the free nations of Europe should spring to arms can be nothing less than the creation of peace—not merely the prevention of war—in a world redeemed from the abominable anachronism of armed conflict by the steadfast and united resolve of civilized humanity.

This, to my mind is the abiding lesson of the present world crisis. If Hitler helps the free peoples of the earth to learn it he will, in spite of himself, have deserved well of the democracy he spurns and of the liberties he would fain trample underfoot.

Chamberlain Says Rotten Eggs Don't Keep Him Awake

London, May 11 (AP).—"The old umbrella" and its busy owner thus far have helped keep Europe at peace, Prime Minister Chamberlain said smilingly today.

"I seem to begin these days the target of rotten eggs but that does not keep me awake," he told a women's conservative party conference.

"You have watched the old umbrella going 'round and you have, I believe, approved our efforts—strenuous and up to now successful—to keep Europe out of war."

8 Feared Dead In $3,000,000 Grain Fire

Blasts, Flames Level 5 Chicago Elevators; 13 Rushed to Hospital

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 11.—A series of blasts and roaring flames destroyed five huge grain elevators today, wiped out all traces of eight missing men and caused damage far in excess of $3,000,000.

The fire—most serious in Chicago since the $8,000,000 stock yards conflagration of May 19, 1934—raged for five hours before it was brought under control by 400 firemen.

Even then the heat from the charred ruins was so intense that officials could not approach them to confirm their fears that eight workers had been trapped and killed in Elevator "A" of the Rosenbaum Bros. Grain Co.

18 Rushed to Hospitals

Eighteen men—13 firemen and 5 workmen—were rushed to hospitals. Eight of them were in serious condition.

Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan estimated the loss in property alone at $3,000,000. Uncalculated for the time being was the value of more than 3,500,000 bushels of grain that had been stored in the structures.

An explosion, believed to have been caused by dust, touched off the blaze in Elevator "A" of the Rosenbaum firm in the heart of the city's largest granary district at 102d street and the Calumet River. The roof of the building, 146 feet high and covering an area of a half square block, blew into the air. The storehouse became a geyser of flame.

Wood, metal, sparks and bricks rained down upon employes scurrying for safety. Accompanied by muffled booms, like the rumbling of a volcano, fire burst out in elevators "B" and "C." The fiery tongues darted across a 30 foot wide slip and ignited two elevators of the Norris Grain Co. A quarter-mile sector was transformed quickly into an inferno.

Two fire tugs and a half-dozen pieces of powerful apparatus spewed water upon the blazing skeletons while 50,000 spectators watched the battle.

Two barges, a dozen freight cars and five automobiles were burned or wrecked by collapsing walls.

The Missing Listed

The missing men, as listed to the police, were Ernest Barge, Albert Horner, Linn M. Keefer, Henry Kriel, Louis Colburg, Charles Regashus and Joseph Vedigh, all employes of the Rosenbaum Co.; and Ernest Lundgren, a weighman for the Chicago Board of Trade.

Firemen expressed the belief that only the ashes of the victims' bodies would be found in the debris.

W. H. Glaser, Rosenbaum superintendent, reported the razed elevators contained 3,500,000 bushels of wheat and corn. Norris Co. officials said their elevators had a total capacity of 2,450,000 bushels but did not estimate the amount stored.

Eyewitness Accounts

Chicago, May 11 (U.P.).—Floyd Pedone, State grain inspector and one of three men who had been reported missing at first but subsequently were found to be safe, gave this description of the blast which destroyed five grain elevators here today.

"I was working at the elevator. I heard the blast and started to run. Something hit me on the head. I crawled under a freight car. There was another man under there. I don't know who he was.

"When things quit falling I jumped out and ran again."

Pedone, who suffered only slight injuries, was found among spectators at the edge of the fire line.

Tony Maleto and Harold Barnes, both employes at the Rosenbaum Granary, also had been reported missing, but were located later. They suffered only slight injuries.

Two Fell With Roof

William Turmundy, a witness, reported:

"When I heard the explosion I looked up. Two men were standing on the roof of the first elevator. All of a sudden they disappeared into the burning building as the roof gave way."

George Hull, a clerk with the Rosenbaum Co., said he was in his office when the explosion occurred.

"I was walking toward the window," he said. "There was a rumble and a big boom. The whole window frame was blown into the building. It hit me and knocked me down.

"There were seven of us in the office at the time and the roof of the office building seemed to be falling on top of us. All of us jumped out of the window and ran across the railroad tracks before we stopped and looked around.

Man, Afire, Jumped

"As we stood there and looked, the building was burning. The fire seemed to be coming from halfway up the elevator. I saw a man jump from the third floor of the elevator. His clothes were burning. It was a horrible sight."

Peter Segler, an assistant superintendent, said he aided some of the men who came out of the building with their clothes in flames. He suffered burns of both hands.

Robert Thomas, clerk in a grain elevator two blocks from where the explosion occurred, said:

"The explosion shook our building, and I looked out the window.

"The roof of the Rosenbaum Elevator was rising in the air. It seemed to hang up there for an instant and then disintegrated. It fell apart and disappeared. Parts of the walls fell with the roof. A cloud of dust or smoke soared up and the flames broke through. Then the fire spread to the two adjoining units and in a few seconds the whole elevator was on fire."

Baltimore Pier Razed

Baltimore, May 11 (A.P.).—A 300-foot pier and warehouse were razed and 12 firemen were injured today by a fire which 175 firemen battled for more than three hours before bringing under control.

The flames roared through creosote-soake pilings and 1,800 tons of licorice root, stored in the warehouse owned by the J. S. Young Licorice Co.

Several hundred persons gathered at the waterfront to watch as fireboats and land apparatus were used in battling the spectacular blaze.

Seven firemen were injured when a sidewall of the warehouse gave way while they were standing on the roof. They escaped being thrown inside of the warehouse, but were injured in leaping to the ground.

None of the injured was seriously hurt.

The blaze started under the pier, in a difficult spot to fight, and gained headway quickly through the warehouse, which was about 250 feet long and two and a half stories high.

Forest Fires Rage

Plymouth, Mass., May 11 (U.P.).—Wind-fanned flames raged late today through dense pitch-pine woodlands between Plymouth and Carver and threatened to destroy scores of cottages bordering lakes in the area.

Constant changes in the wind made useless the backfires set by 500 volunteers aiding firemen from five communities.

Plymouth police said if the flames were not checked before they reached Federal Furnace road they probably would leap to the 8,000-acre Myles Standish State forest.

At Shawn, N. H., the population of 28 was helpless as the flames steadily advanced through the tall timber and hurricane-felled debris.

Hundreds of volunteers were hastening to the area from Nashua, Peterboro, Wilton, Milford, Jaffrey and other communities. The forces also were being swelled by youths from CCC Camps in the area.

the eight-State Appalachian area, center of the operators' disagreement, to begin immediate signing of individual agreements with operators not opposed to the "union shop."

The Appalachian operators' conference, covering 338,000 of the idle miners, operates under the "unit rule" of unanimity, binding, in the present situation, the entire organization to the resistance of the dissenting group.

Steelman said Lewis had agreed not to authorize individual contracts in the Appalachian area before the "deadline" set for tomorrow morning.

Asked if there was a chance of keeping the threatened Appalachian conference together despite its dissension and the unit rule, the operators' spokesman said:

"There is a chance."

"Everything Cleaned Up"

Dr. Steelman, strongly indicating his belief that a settlement was near, said he would remain nearby tomorrow, but "my services will not be needed."

"Everything is cleaned up," he added.

Announcing the new overnight deadline, Steelman said:

"The operators' committee now feels that 9 a. m. (E.S.T.) tomorrow the Appalachian conference as a collective bargaining unit and the United Mine Workers of America may reach an agreement, thus facilitating the opening of all, or at least practically all, of the mines in the shortest possible time . . .

"This postponement still leaves time for the mines to begin operation by Monday morning."

Lewis immediately announced that he had called back to New York about 90 men constituting the union's Appalachian scale committee "for any action that might come about tomorrow."

When the U. M. W. leader issued his individual-contract authorization for the regions outside the Applalachian area, Steelman pronounced the coal crisis "over."

U. S. Action Possible

As the situation rushed to a showdown here in New York, other significant developments occurred in Washington and elsewhere.

The White House disclosed that President Roosevelt himself had been considering "some steps" of a nature not explained, and Attorney General Murphy said Secretary of Labor Perkins had asked him for an opinion three days ago as to what further action the Government could take in the controversy.

"I can't say what action the Government could take," the Attorney General commented.

U. S. Theatrical Heritage Rich, Butler Declares

The rich theatrical heritage of United States cities was praised by Lee D. Butler, president of the Washington Civic Theater, at the opening luncheon of the first Congress of American Community Theaters.

"The American community theater has its roots deep in our past," he told the 100 delegates assembled at Wardman Park Hotel. "For over a century it has flowered richly at many and widely separated points in America."

Other speakers included Frances Starr, actress; Halley Flanagan, director of the Federal Theater Project; F. Cole Strickland, director of the Washington Civic Theater and Albert McCleary, of Stage Magazine.

Bankruptcy Case Salaries Urged

a large part of the task of gettting plans into shape.

To Arrive Saturday

Shea will arrive here Saturday, and will devote his entire attention to the bankruptcy job. It is a field with which he is familiar.

Legislation in addition to that applicable to bankruptcy referees will be recommended, it is expected. Further proposals, however, likely will await completion by the committee of its work.

In response to questions at his press conference yesterday, Murphy said he thought bankruptcy referees might still be named by judges, but he emphasized that appointments should be nonpolitical.

Plans are being made, he disclosed, to acquaint the public with the nature of the situation which the department is attempting to clean up. This is expected to enhance prospects for enactment of desired legislation, since members of Congress will be made more familiar with the problem.

Arrangements for publicizing the work of the committee and its findings is in line with Murphy's policy of having no secrets so far as the work of the Justice Department is concerned.

An office is being set up for the committee and a staff assembled, Murphy said. He emphasized that he was anxious to speed up the work of the committee.

Wallace Enters Race for Sheriff

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 11.—Three announcements in the approaching political campaign were made in Spotsylvania County today. The only newcomer was Wilbur B. Wallace, Spotsylvania merchant, who announced his candidacy for sheriff subject to the August Democratic primary.

Two county officials, W. R. Dillard, treasurer, and R. Hugh Faulconer, commissioner of revenue, announced their candidacies for re-election subject to the August primary.

'Wife Best Friend,' Says Chamberlain

London, May 11 (A.P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain gave this description of his wife today in referring to the welcome given her by the conservative women's conference, where Chamberlain spoke:

"She is the lady who knows all my secrets but never lets them out, who gently corrects my faults, who never forgets to praise me, who remembers all the things that I forget and who, for now nearly 30 years, has been my best friend and counsellor."

Episcopal Heads For W. Va. Named

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shephardstown, W. Va., May 11.—Concluding the sixty-second annual session of the Episcopal Diocese of West Virginia here late yesterday the following election results were announced:

Attorney R. S. Spillman, Charleston, re-elected to serve as diocesan chancellor during the coming year, and re-election of S. G. Cargill, Charleston, to serve as diocesan treasurer.

Elected to the newly formed executive board:

For one year—The Rev. W. C. Brooke, Weston; the Rev. S. R. Tyler, Huntington; A. J. McClintock, Clarksburg (previously named president of the Laymens League of the diocese); R. L. Kingsland, Fairmont.

For two years—The Rev. Paul L. Powles, D. D., Martinsburg; the Rev. B. R. Roller, White Sulphur Springs; Robert Archer, Huntington; J. C. Jeffords, Charleston.

For three years—The Rev. J. W. Hobson, Bluefield; the Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, Wheeling; W. G. Peterkin, Parkersburg; R. L. Boyd, Wheeling.

Church Convention Hopeful for Union Of All Protestants

Norfolk, Va., May 11 (A.P.).—Encouragement to the now United Methodist Church and hope for the eventual achievement of a united Protestant church of the United States was expressed in a resolution adopted today in the closing session of the southeast convention of Congregational-Christian churches at the Christian Temple here.

"As members of a denomination which represents the uniting of two unrelated denominations, we recognize from experience the great difficulties involved, but we can testify also from experience that, with patience perseverance and the leadership of the Divine Spirit, the union of the churches can be accomplished," the resolution read.

Dr. J. H. Lightbourne, of Burlington, N. C., was elected moderator of the convention; the Rev. Wiley Scott, of Atlanta, Ga., vice moderator; the Rev. A. W. Hurst, of Chattaanooga, Tenn., secretary. The executive committee was elected as follows; Dr. Victor B. Chicoine, Winter Park, Fla.; the Rev. E. H. Rainey, Evarts, Ky; the Rev. F. C. Lester, Elon College; the Rev. F. P. Ensminger, Alabama; Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Jacksonville, Fla.; Miss Maruerite Davidson, Alabama.

2 at Charlottesville Seized as Burglars

Charlottesville, Va., May 11 (A.P.).—Police Chief Maurice Greaver said Fay C. Green, 38, and John M. Kline, 39, both of Richmond, were arrested here yesterday on charges of breaking into a bottling plant and possessing burglary tools.

A third man, who was not identified, escaped as Patrolman C. D. MacCauely chased Green from the building, where a safe containing $8,000 had been battered but not entered.

Barkley Urges Recess Tax Study

mend a tax revision program to Congress, Morgenthau retorted:

"That's ridiculous. We're living under a democracy, thank God."

Morgenthau said he stood by an earlier statement in which he said he hoped "Congress will take a careful look at the tax law and see whether there are any deterrents that are holding back business and holding back businessmen from making future commitments. Business men ought to feel that the Administration wants them to go ahead and take risks and that the Administration wants them to make money."

Airing Is Expected

Barkley's proposal of a recess study by a joint Congressional committee of the whole question of corporate tax law revision, followed persistent reports that the President this session merely seeks continuance of expiring nuisance and corporation taxes. These were expected to be subject for comment at the President's press conference this morning.

Opposed to mere continuance of the present corporate rates, a strong group in the Senate, centering about Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee, favors readjustment of corporate taxes this session, as an impetus to business.

Harrison's views are believed largely shared by Doughton, who has powerful Democratic backing in his own committee. Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, who led the successful House fight last year against "third basket" taxes, has made clear he will fight for action this session to remove business deterrents, where such steps can be taken without reducing total revenues.

But Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House tax sub-committee, remained non-committal. He declined comment on either the Morgenthau statement or the Barkley proposal. Both Cooper and Doughton conferred with the President on Tuesday, and Doughton followed this up with a conference with Morgenthau yesterday.

Door Isn't Closed

Asked whether the President had closed the door on tax revision, Doughton said:

"The door has not been closed to me. There has been no change in the situation so far as Mr. Morgenthau and I are concerned."

Doughton said Barley's proposal to postpone any material tax changes until next session "might be alright and it might not. I would like to know whether it is satisfactory to business and the country generally."

The Ways and Means chairman said he was not proposing "to open up the whole subject" of tax revision, but thought Congress should certainly "take a look" at the tax laws, to see if any deterrents to recovery can be removed.

Barkley's expression called for simple extensions of expiring nuisance and business taxes, with possibly some minimum change in the latter. He said he saw no objection, for example, to repeal of the remaining vestige of the undivided profits tax, and substitution of a corporate income tax. This was in conflict with the President's reported view that the undivided profits tax should be continued.

Barkley opposed repeal of either the capital stock or excess profits taxes pending the proposed recess tax study. He reiterated his belief that repeal of these two levies, and an increase in the corporate income tax to compensate, would force the income levy prohibitively high. If exemptions were granted companies earning less than $10,000, he said, they might force the levy on the wealthier companies up to 28 per cent.

Uncertainties Feared

"I have seen no great business enthusiasm for such a change," said the Senate's Administration leader. "One prominent business man, whose name I can't mention, recently told me he preferred the present taxes, to the uncertainties involved in that change."

Barkley said the proposed recess tax investigation should "enable us to come back next session and enact a reasonale tax bill, that at least would retain present revenue and might possibly pick up some more."

Questioned as to the President's request that Congress provide taxes to finance extra-budgetary farm bill increases, he said there are several sources Congress might tap for more revenue, but objections existed to most of them. He pointed to strong Congressional opposition to revival of processing taxes. If Congress followed the example of England, and lowered individual income tax exemptions, he said he feared it would place a disproportionate burden on "the little fellow, who is carrying a big load in local taxes."

'Stage Door' Is Presented At Pierce Hall

Players Enact Famous Kaufman-Ferber Drama With Fine Success

Girls, beautiful and numerous, are the highlights of the Pierce Hall Players' production of "Stage Door," which opened last night at the Players' Auditorium at Fifteenth and Harvard streets for a two-night run.

The play is quite a different piece than the screen play from which the popular Katharine Hepburn-Ginger Rogers vehicle was filmed. As a play, it is a series of sharply pointed vignettes, smartly fashioned, but yet without that cohesion which would have made it a better play.

The large group of 21 girls who inhabit the Footlights Club make a colorful aggregation. The varied characterizations of an ambitious, stage-struck girl; a dreamy, Southern lass, a wise-cracking chorine, a little snip anxious for fortune at any cost, a down-to-her-last-part oldster and a fagged-out boarding-house keeper make for clipped figures, and the Pierce Hall performers have a piece of fun doing them.

There is notable work by Jean Darier, as Judy Canfield, whose only competitors, she would have you know, are the elephants. Frances Stuart Dewey plays Terry, quite a different figure than the Katharine Hepburn role, yet vibrant with her interest in the living theater. Rita McGarry is the girl who gives it all up for a home in Wisconsin and Ellen Scholze is the weary pianist, who jingles for the chorines.

One of the best performances of the production is coritributed by Mildred Beach, as the unhappy Kaye Hamilton. A sensitive face and gentle playing make her Kaye memorable. Miriam Ottenberg and Elinor Evans have characteristic parts as Big Mary and Mrs. Orcott.

William Draper has one of the most important male roles in this predominantenly feminine cast and carries it off smoothly. Edmund J. Evans, as the man from Hollywood, also plays well, and Paul R. Kelbaugh and Sidney Bassler are the be-derbied gents from Wisconsin.

Other members of the large cast include Edith Reynolds, Eleanor Warrenne, Eva Pope, Elizabeth Smallman, Mabel A. Hunt, Louise Shaw, Helen Zott, June McGill, Evelyn Wynn, Nell Childs, Margaret Yoder, Ruth M. Taylor, Georgella Hefty, Julie Gordon, Vincent Hunter, Walter Reser, George F. Hall, Ted C. Gardner, Burke Edwards and Doyle Tripp. R. L. C.

Little

Again the Little Theater has a holdover in "Night Must Fall," which yesterday went into its second week.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is withdrawing this film from the open circulation after the close of its engagement here, although Robert Montgomery has never played so effectively as he does in this role of Danny, the Cockney boy with the psychosis for the perfect crime. His appearance is sloppy and sly, the reverse of his more usual interpretations of suave smart-crackers. Now he is furtive, flattering and puzzling. Dame May Whitty is that counterpart of selfish old women, half hypochondriac, wholly ego-centric, the wealthy old harridan whose money and life Danny is after. Rosalind Russell has the curious role of her niece and companion. Sly Danny both fascinates and repels here; she more than suspects his past and present plans, but her peculiar mental make-up does not allow her to run to friends for help. She, too, hates the ill-tempered dame and is held by some abnormal force to watch what she knows will prove fatal. She recognizes Danny's evil, yet is powerless to even wish to keep him from it.

Strictly an "atmosphere" film, tiveness from understatement. There are hints of blood, dismembered bodies and sudden death, but none of these horrors actually appears on the screen. A triumph for both Director Richard Thorpe and star Montgomery, this intelligent handling of an engrossing and psychological theme will long remain a screen classic.

The store will be closed all day Friday on account of the death of Mrs. George Plitt, Sr. 2434 18th Street, N.W.

Civil Service Asks Training Consultants

Co-ordinating Staff Envisioned in 13-Page Commission Statement

The Civil Service Commission yesterday said it would ask Congress, through the Budget Bureau, "for an adequate appropriation" to establish a Division of Training to give co-ordination and consultation service to the program of in-service training ordered by the President last June 24.

The commission, in a formal 13-page statement on the training program, said it does not expect to establish and direct any training courses for the employes of a particular department or agency, or even for groups of agencies where such courses can be and are established by the agencies themselves, either separately or co-operatively.

Credit Proposal Weighed

Concerning the proposal that credits be given, the commission said it recognizes that "the establishment of credits for in-service training courses in connection with transfer and promotion examinations should wait until the result of research and study has revealed a sound basis for the application of this principle."

The value of courses, it was stated, should be demonstrated in increased knowledge, skills, abilities and improved attitudes as disclosed in improved performance or in valid tests.

The commission said that much of the necessary training and instruction in any organization always will be given directly by line supervisors to their subordinates. "It is clear, however, that there is need for the assistance of specialists who are themselves experienced in training methods, to aid line supervisors in planning, conducting and appraising such instruction, and to organize and direct courses which cross lines of supervisional jurisdiction."

To give this assistance, the division of training within the commission will maintain a staff of trained consultants under the direction of a chief training consultant "who will be a man widely recognized as an expert in the field of employe training," it was stated.

Assistants Included

He would be assisted by a group of senior training consultants and associate training specialist. This staff will be available for consultation concerning all training problems, "and it is expected that its members will establish close liaison between the division of training in the commission and the Federal departments and agencies," it was added.

Both the co-ordinating and advisory staffs of the training division in the commission would be supported by a section which will constantly assemble necessary useful information and organize it effectively for immediate application, the statement said.

Scared by Snakes, Fugitives Return To Prison Farm

Hagerstown, May 11.—When William J. New, 37, and Albert Dobbins, 27, who escaped from the State penal farm at Roxbury, near here, encountered several rattlesnakes in the mountains, where they became lost, they decided to return and complete their sentences. This was the story they told Superintendent Elmer E. Carl when they were returned to the farm by Leroy Harvey, a farm attache, who picked them up along a road near Sharpsburg as they were headed back to the farm.

Donald and Kenneth Fringer, brothers, who also fled the penal farm this week, were captured yesterday in Frederick County and returned to the farm.

Two Others Seized

Hancock, Md., May 11.—John Welsh and Garland Albright, two of four boys who escaped from St. Mary's Industrial School, Baltimore, were taken into custody here yesterday and will be returned to the school. Two others who fled with Welsh and Albright in a car which was abandoned at Benevola, near Hagerstown, were caught in Cumberland.

Prince Georges Opens Drive on Coin Machines

Four Gaming Devices Seized in Berwyn And Hyattsville

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 821 Rheems Ave., Hyattsville, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3559.

Continuing their round-up of coin machines, which became illegal May 1 with the expiration of the 1937 State law legalizing them, Prince Georges County police yesterday seized four of the devices in Hyattsville and Berwyn business places.

Proprietors of the establishments were served summonses by Officer Richard A. Pearson to appear in Police Court at Hyattsville next Wednesday on charges of violating the gaming laws.

The Prince Georges delegation to the recent General Assembly succeeded in pushing through legislation to legalize all types of coin machines in the county, but the bill was vetoed by Gov. O'Conor.

Inquest Tonight

Hyattsville—Acting Coroner Henry O'Neill will hold an inquest in the police courtroom here tonight in the fatal shooting of Carlton L. Harrod, colored, of Huntsville, last Saturday.

Ezekial Cunningham, colored, 28, also of Huntsville, is being held without bail at the Hyattsville jail pending the coroner's investigation.

Ten sorority teams of two girls each will compete in the contest. The program also will include a sheep-shearing event for men and contests in fitting and showing of dairy cattle, beef animals, swine, horses and sheep.

Court Delays Milk-Code Trial Over Protests

After sharp clashes between the corporation counsel's office and defense attorneys, Judge Casey of the Police Court yesterday granted the tenth continuance in the trial of Embassy-Fairfax Dairy on eight charges of violating the District milk code.

Robert E. Lynch and Sefton Darr, attorneys for the dairy, insisted on an immediate trial on grounds that business of their client would be "seriously affected" until it was finished.

Corporation Counsel Seal asked that the case be continued until after the milk hearing before a Congressional committee is completed and declared that unless this was granted his office would be compelled to enter a "nolle prosequi" in the case with the understanding that the defendants would again be charged.

Judge Casey extended the date for deciding on the trial time until Wednesday at 10 a. m., but declared a definite date must be set at that time and followed regardless of the milk hearing before Congress.

Man Found With Throat And Wrists Slashed

His throat and wrists slashed with a penknife, John R. Gilbert, 50, of Baltimore, was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night.

John Cerios, manager of a lunchroom in the 400 block Seventh street southeast, found the man and called police. Gilbert had been drinking, they said, and stated he did not know when or how he left Baltimore. A pocketknife was found on the floor beside him, it was said.

Before Packing Wool Clothes Away

If you want to avoid moth damage, here's what to do. First, expose all garments, blankets, etc., to sunlight. Then have them dry cleaned or steam pressed or brush them very thoroughly. Next, get a can of Bee Brand Insect Powder and, after cleaning out the clothes chest or trunk thoroughly, sprinkle Bee Brand Powder liberally in the corners and over the bottom. Lay a sheet of paper over this powder and place clothes on top. Finally, cover garments with more paper and over it all, sprinkle a covering of Bee Brand Insect Powder. In the Fall, your clothes will be clean, fresh and free from moth holes.

Bee Brand Insect Powder nearly kills moths—yet it's entirely safe to use around the house. For best results, insist on the genuine Bee Brand Insect Powder—in the red and yellow can. It's sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or your money back. Three sizes: 10¢, 25¢, 50¢.

NOTE: You can also kill moths and other flying insects, as well as roaches and ants, with Bee Brand Insect Spray. Read directions on can.

Chew Throws His Hat in Arlington Ring For Re-election to the County Board

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

F. Freeland Chew, chairman of the Arlington County Board, announced yesterday he would be a candidate for reelection, subject to the Democratic primary to be held Tuesday, Auguest 1.

CHEW

A resident of Arlington County for 34 years, he is completing his first term in public office.

Educated in District of Columbia schools, he studied civil engineering, and for a number of years engaged in land surveying for the United States Government in Wyoming. During the war he served two years with the Chief of Engineers United States Army, in France and Germany.

Was Debate Reporter

In 1920 he accepted a position with the Official Reporters of Debates of the United States Senate, and has held that position during the past five administrations. He has always been active in civic, fraternal and political affairs, and in 1936 was appointed assistant sergeant-at-arms of the Democratic convention.

Declaring that his platform consists of a single promise, he said:

"To have served my county was a privilege. To be re-elected would be a great honor and, if the people so decree, I shall try in the future, as I have tried in the past, to represent them in an honorable way, and prove myself worthy of their confidence."

Hanrahan on Sewers

Arlington.—Discussing the efforts of officials of Falls Church and Fairfax County to have the county extend its sewer lines beyond its boundaries, County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan said:

"My position in the matter was made clear to the county board on two occasions prior to the recent recommendations signed by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas, Richard Wirt, sanitary engineer, and myself. Those recommendations were that the county should not at this time make any extensions to its lines and when, if ever, a careful study should be made.

"The county's sewer system, costing approximately $2,500,000, was voted by the taxpayers of Arlington County and it is equivalent to a mortgage on all homes in the county, and my recommendation was that the matter should be handled carefully and any contemplated extension should be made through the officials of Fairfax County and Falls Church."

He added he expected soon to meet with Maj. L. P. Daniels, mayor of Falls Church, at his request to discuss the matter.

Hanrahan said he did not fell that the amendment to the charter of the town of Falls Church giving it power to extend its sewer lines to adjacent territory placed Arlington County in an unfavorable position.

He said he had not received any reply from authorities of Fairfax County to his letter setting forth the county's position.

Mrs. Angelo Dies

Clarendon.—Mrs. Ella M. Angelo, 66, of 1310 North Irving street, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital. Mrs. Angelo was born in Canton, Ohio, and came to the county in 1910.

Funeral services will be conducted from C. J. Ives funeral chapel in Clarendon tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. J. Harvey Dunham, pastor of the Western Presbyterian Church of Washington. Services at the grave will be conducted by Mary Washington Chapter No. 50, Order of the Eastern Star. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery. Mrs. Angelo leaves her husband; one sister, Mrs. Edith Baer, of Washington, and one brother, Charles Meyer, of Canton, Ohio.

Mercy Slayer Of Son Acquitted

the witness stand how they had lived for 16 years with tragedy. During the trial Mrs. Greenfield carried in a tightly rolled handkerchief some earth from her son's grave. Samuel Leibowitz, noted criminal lawyer who defended Greenfield, recalled to the jurors the parents' story of Jerome's imbecility and physical suffering, and the parents' own mental torture when children and even adults made the youth an object of ridicule no matter where they moved to escape it.

"Only a human being could have suffered as much as Greenfield suffered," Leibowitz said. "A machine would have broken down. You could have cut off this mother's hands without a whimper if it would have helped that baby to utter one word, give them one glance of recognition. You could have cut out that man's heart and he would not have uttered a cry if that child would only take one step."

Greenfield broke down and wept with great choking sobs when the verdict was announced. When he had composed himself, he said:

"I am thankful that justice has won but it also has lost for my little Jerry."

Mrs. Greenfield, who also was crying, expressed her gratitude to Liebowitz.

"He did it all for nothing," she said. "I offered him what little I had but he would not take it. God is good."

Then, with an attempt to smile, she told of their plan to adopt a baby.

"We are going to adopt a child to replace our little Jerry," she said. "We have always wanted another baby of our own but were afraid. I think we would like a boy two or three years old."

Both parents referred to their dead son as "Little Jerry" though actually he was almost 6 feet tall and weighed 180 pounds. He played with blocks, scarcely knew the difference between father and mother, and required the care an infant gets.

"FROM THE LIFE AND VIGOR OF THE GRAIN"

Dr. Smith Asks Reasons for Her Dismissal

Public Hearing Useless Otherwise, Former School Head Says

Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith yesterday criticized the District Commissioners for failure to cite specific reasons for her dismissal as superintendent of the National Training School for Girls in connection with granting her a public hearing May 23 on the ouster order.

"I don't see any point in a public hearing unless the Commissioners give me the reasons for my dismissal," she said.

In their communication to Dr. Smith, the Commissioners pointed out she was ousted "for the good of the service," but ignored her request for the specific charges which led to her dismissal.

Asks for Records

She said she would make another appeal to the Commissioners, probably today, to "convince them of the reasonableness" of stating in writing the actual charges.

At the time of her dismissal, in October, 1937, Dr. Smith said she had received from the board of public welfare a written statement which pointed out her "personal character" was not involved in her dismissal.

"I want to clean my own administrative record, since my personal record was not involved in the dismissal," she said.

"I want the actual records from the board of public welfare and if the charges are true I will admit them and if the charges are incorrect I will deny and refute them," Dr. Smith said.

Gasch to Present Case

The Commissioners appointed Oliver Gasch, an assistant corporation counsel, to present the case against Dr. Smith. His appointment was made yesterday morning following a conference between the Commissioners, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal and Welfare Director Elwood Street.

Street, who leaves for his new job in Richmond on Monday, will not appear at the public hearing. The Commissioners said they would call on Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare; Paul L. Kirby, assistant welfare director; employes of the training school and policemen who were called to the institution to quell riots among inmates, to take the witness stand.

Dr. Smith now operates a bookstore on H street northwest, and reiterated she had no desire to resume her position at the training school.

Coded Accounts Of Dr. Chadwick Baffle Executors

The code in which Dr. De Witt C. Chadwick kept his books is making life very hard for his executors, they told District Court yesterday in petitioning for probate of the will distributing the physician's $200,000 estate.

Dr. Chadwick was 81 years old when he died April 21 and for many years had kept his accounts in symbols, like those used in some stores for marking prices. By long practice Dr. Chadwick had reduced his code to signs so cryptic that the executors told the courts "it will be months before these accounts can be deciphered, totaled and a rough estimate made of their probable collectibility and value."

John Sumner Wood is attorney for the estate and is co-executor with Judson Wriley Jacobs. The property included an interest in an apartment house at 5746 Colorado avenue and $95,000 in cash and securities. Bequests were largely to the widow, Mrs. Charlotte A. R. Chadwick, and to relatives.

D.C. Boy Who Found 1848 Note Wonders How He Can Collect

Ronald Bowles holds C. & O. Canal promisory note for $5

C. & O. Canal Company Paper, Bearing Promise to Repay at 6 Per Cent Was Discovered in Old Album

Ronald Bowles, a 15-year-old Roosevelt High School student, was puzzling yesterday over a double-barreled mathematics problem growing out of a $5 promissory note of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal Co.—dated 1848 and bearing "legal interest."

Figuring legal interest at 6 per cent, Ronald deduced that he has a lot coming. But the problem is how to go about collecting from Uncle Sam, present owner of the now defunct company.

Ronald has had the worn note in his possession for five years but it was not until he heard of the Government's intention of restoring the waterway that he decided the document—representative of the financial difficulties that pursued the canal—might be of value.

The history of the note is a mystery. Ronald, who lives at 6427 Sixteenth street northwest, found it, along with some Confederate currency, in the back of a stamp album given to him by an old man, once a roomer at the Bowles home. The note was discovered only after the man, who has not been heard from since, has moved away.

So who "T. Fittebrown," the payee, was, or through whose hands they passed before it came into Ronald's, seems destined to remain unfold.

But the future, not the past, is what interests Ronald. He'd like to realize on Mr. Fittebrown's investment—with legal interest, of course. His bicycle is badly in need of repair, it seems, and then there's that summer camping trip he's been planning.

Japanese Report 10,000 Foes Slain In Hupeh Battle

Shanghai (Friday), May 12 (AP).—A Japanese communique today reported 10,000 Chinese had been killed in a major battle in progress since May 1 in Hupeh Province, 200 miles northwest of Hankow.

The communique said the remainder of the Chinese forces on that front, totaling 45,000 men, were trapped between two Japanese columns.

One Japanese force is moving north along the Han River and the other along th Peiping-Hankow Railway in a pincer movement which the Japanese predicted would wipe out one-third of the Chinese regulars in central China.

Dog Law Postponement Protested by Gardeners

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., May 11.—Dogs vs. tulips was debated at the open meeting of the town council last night. A recent ordinance that dogs must be kept on a leash when not on the property of the owner, aroused such opposition that the time for enforcing the law was postponed one month. The delay was protested by gardeners.

Mad Gunman Holds His Baby Hostage, Kills Self After Rescue

By the Associated Press.

Sidney, Nebr., May 11.—Sheriff W. W. Schulz, veteran western Nebraska peace officer, braved a hail of bullets today to rescue 14-month-old Jimmy Sulcer from the barricaded room of his crazed father and ended an eight-hour reign of terror in an isolated farmhouse northeast of here.

The father, James W. Sulcer, defying a tear gas attack, shot and killed himself after the baby's rescue.

Appearing this morning at the farm where his estranged wife was living, Sulcer shot and wounded his sister-in-law, Mrs. Richard Keefe, when she sought to drive him away with a singletree, the sheriff said.

Sulcer, 42, a salesman, grabbed his baby and fled to a second-floor bedroom, where he commanded the stairs. He threatened to kill himself and the child should officers attempt to reach him.

County officers and State highway patrolmen surrounded the house while Schulz, Keefe and Mrs. Sulcer pleaded from downstairs for the child's life.

Mrs. Keefe, two bullet wounds in her arm dressed, returned home to convince Sulcer he should let her get her twin babies from another bedroom. Two other small Keefe children negotiated the stairs and Sulcer held his fire.

Finally the 44-year-old sheriff and youthful patrolman Joe Peirano donned gas masks and crept up the stairs.

"We poured a couple of volleys of gas into the room," the sheriff related. "Then the patrolman and I rushed in. We couldn't see Sulcer. I guess he was behind the bid. I grabbed Jimmy and we started down in a hurry and Sulver began shooting. I guess he emptied his automatic, about nine shots, at us. Some of them were mighty close, but we didn't get hit.

"He must've reloaded 'cause he fired at us some more and then things cleared up a bit.

"It got quiet and we slipped up again. We could see him lying on the floor by the bed. He'd shot himself through the head."

Life of Great Inventor Finally Reaches Screen

'Story of Alexander Graham Bell' at Palace; Takes Rank Among Best Film Biographies; Brief Jottings of the Theater and Its People

"THE STORY OF ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original story by Ray Harris, adapted to the screen by Lamar Trotti, featuring Don Ameche, Loretta Young nad Henry Fonda, with Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Spring Byington, Sally Blane, Polly Ann Young, Georgiana Young, Bobs Watson, Jonathan Hale, Beryl Mercer, Harry Davenport, Russell Hicks, Elizabeth Patterson, Charles Trowbridge, Claire du Brey, Harry Tyler, Ralph Remley and Zeffie Tilbury. Directed by Irving Cummings, Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At Loew's Palace Theater.

The subject matter of this splendidly executed biographical film is so closely bound up with the past and present interests of the National Capital that it should exert an especial appeal to Washington audiences. But "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" is a screen drama of such superb sincerity, such human depth and such appealing beauty that it becomes at once a document of universal scope.

BELL

There is more than the single story of the invention of the telephone in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." There is the gentle love story of the great inventor and the beautiful young deaf woman with whom he fell in love and married. Then there is the more commercial aspect of a life that was dedicated primarily to the service of mankind as set forth in the bitter court struggle in which an attempt was made to rob one of the race's greatest benefactors of his patent rights. All of these elements are welded into a closely knit pattern of romance, struggle and triumph, lent still greater strength by the skill with which the various characters have been drawn and the fine intelligence and feeling with which they are played.

The story has its inception when Alexander Graham Bell is a young man teaching elocution and phonetics and devoting his chief interest to the succor of those who can neither hear nor speak. One of the most poignant moments in the film is that in which George Sanders, a deaf mute, perches on his father's lap and for the first time utters the word "father." There is an emotional tug here that the cinema seldom has achieved. In all of his spare hours during this period of his life Bell is experimenting with the idea of transmitting the human voice over a "hollow wire." As is usually the lot of genius, he and his faithful assistant, Thomas Watson, undergo all manner of hardship and privation. When a final test proves that Bell's fantastic and ridiculed device actually is a success, there is a thrill as dramatic as any picture ever has known.

To many, no doubt, the chief charm of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" will lie in the beautifully idyllic romance which it portrays. The love story of Alexander Graham Bell and Mrs. Bell is so tender, so exquisitely interpreted and so close to every human heart that it might have been made the basis of a great picture without other embellishment. And by a deft twist of dramaturgy, this great love has been interwoven with the more bitter struggle that took place in the courts. It is a simple and devoted love letter written by Mrs. Bell to her husband that clinches his case for him. This is another high point in the frequent dramatic flights that punctuate the progression of the many and varied sequences that dovetail into so finely articulated a whole.

Is Faultlessly Played

As I have intimated, "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" is exceedingly well cast and played. The title role represents by far the most impressive characterization Don Ameche ever has brought to the screen. He portrays the part in a fine variety of moods, brings both simplicity and warmth to the love scenes and, on occasion, betrays a strength he seldom before has revealed. In the ppposite role of Mrs. Bell, Loretta Young is completely beautiful and charming, even if at times a little too limpid in the idealization of her vast affection. Henry Fonda, as Tom Watson, has no such part as either of the other two, but performs the tasks allotted him wholly within the spirit of the play.

There are so many others in the cast who contribute to the uniform excellence of the picture that to name them all would be to copy a page or two of Hollywood's "Who's Who." Foremost among them must be placed that eminent character actor Charles Coburn, cast in the role of the punctilious, clock-minded Gardner Hubbard. His impersonation — without personal knowledge of the individual idiosyncrasies of Mr. Hubbard—is flawless. Scarcely less is to be said for the work of Gene Lockhart in the role of Thomas Sanders.

Many More Contribute

Then there are Jonathan Hale, as the president of Western Union, who plays a brief but helpful part in the play; Master Bobs Watson, whose simulation of the deaf mute, as I have said, furnishes one of the most emotional moments in a drama full of emoton, and the reliable Harry Davenport. Miss Young is by no means the only feminine member of the cast of importance. She is surrounded by three of her sisters—Sally Blane, Polly Ann and Georgiana—as well as Spring Byington, as Mrs. Hubbard; Beryl Mercer, in the role of Queen Victoria; Elizabeth Patterson and Claire du Brey.

Out of these superlative ingredients has been contrived a biographical drama that should take its place among the masterpieces of the screen—just as was proclaimed here following its National Geographic preview in Constitution Hall some weeks ago.

The supplementary items on the new bill at Loew's Palace, by reason of the length and importance of the feature, are limited. Pete Smith, in one of his inimitable short-reels, deals with "Weather Wizards," which, of course, has to do with the operation of the United States Weather Bureau. The cartoon auxiliary is "Barnyard Excitement," which pretty thoroughly explains itself. The "News of the Day" completes a bill that every lover of the best the cinema has to offer is urged to see.

Dots and Dashes

Having been apprised that "East Side of Heaven," starring Bing Crosby, with Joan Blondell and Mischa Auer, is the best picture Bing has had in years, Manager Hardie Meakin will screen the fillum for the drama desks Monday at 1:30 p. m. . . . "Dark Victory," in which Bette Davis does an uncommonly fine delineation of a young neurotic, opens this morning as chief feature of the bill at the Metropolitan Theater . . . It has just completed two successful weeks at the Earle . . . Celebrating its fifteenth anniversary, the Warner Brothers' Tivoli Theater, Fourteenth street and Park road, will present a week of special programs, beginning Sunday, May 14 . . . Art Brown will preside at the console of the Wurlitzer organ, special Mother's Day features will be presented on Sunday and hand-picked offerings throughout the remainder of the week . . . The 16 Earle Roxyettes will present their most unusual offering beginning today . . . Each of the girls will dance with a living cockatoo perched on her arm . . . What, next? . . . Extended schedules will be in force at the Earle throughout the engagement of "Union Pacific," opening today . . . Doors will open at 9:15 a. m., with the first showing of the feature at 9:30 . . . Thursday evening, May 18, will officially inaugurate the summer cruise season of the Wilson Steamship Line, so Manager Harry H. Baker tells me . . . The City of Washington will steam away from its dock from then on . . . The Troupers of East Washington Community Center are busily working on Oscar Wilde's comedy of "The Importance of Being Earnest" . . . It will be staged in Eastern High School on Tuesday, June 6 . . . So Frank Braden, the old circus man, stops by to say "hello" . . . There is not room enough left to do justice to Frank . . . More of him later.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 11.

YOUTH: And a little child shall lead them . . . Upon the tiny shoulders of America's youngest screen star may rest the link of Fascist-minded Argentina to the democratic forces in this hemisphere. The liberal bloc in the Argentinian legislature has invited Shirley Temple to visit their country. The State Department, with the Administration's approval, is urging Twentieth Century-Fox to accept the offer and send Shirley to the Argentine——as a good-will Ambassadoress from the United States to sway the populace toward pro-American sentiment.

TURMOIL: The New Yorker magazine, in its recent issue, included a map of the World's Fair . . . Henry Ford purchased 250,000 of those maps for free distribution . . . Some hawkers have managed to collect large numbers of these free maps and are selling them at the fairgrounds for 10 cents each . . . Tony Sarg, the artist, purchased the map concession, and under his contract his is the only official map permitted to be sold at the fair . . . And so Mr. Sarg, feeling that his contractual rights have been violated, is threatening to bring suit—not against Henry Ford—but against Grover Whalen.

COMEDY: Beatrice Lillie en route to Hollywood for a one-week trip . . . Miss Lillie is going there to see Charlie Chaplin, who is very much interested in engaging her for his new film, "The Dictator."

LOSS: When Crown Prince Olav of Norway dedicated the Norwegian Pavilion he wore civilian clothes and a small decoration medal . . . After the ceremonies, while the crowds jostled him, Olav lost his medal . . . It was picked up by an 18-year-old Brownsville girl, who tried to return it, but was injured in the crush . . . She now has recovered, but still is unable to return the royal medal—because in the melee her only new dress was torn.

JUDGMENT: At Ben Marden's Riviera the waiters and kitchen staff have inaugurated a "kangaroo court" and the workers-judges mete out their own penalties for infractions . . . Recently the kangaroo court held its first session, at which Headwaiter Bonardi brought charges against a cook . . . The 200 workers heard the complaint and the cook's plea that suspension would bring financial suffering to his wife and children . . . After due deliberation they reported their findings to Proprietor Marden . . . "He's guilty and is suspended for two weeks," they decreed—"but with full pay."

PUZZLE: "Union Pacific," the new film, had its world premiere in Omaha on April 28—the same day Hitler made his speech replying to President Roosevelt . . . Because the premiere was the most publicized event to hit Omaha since the railroad came to town, the editors of the Omaha World-Herald were distressed at the news that Hitler's speech would be made that same day . . . "What," the editor-in-chief was asked by his staff, "shall we do with Hitler's speech?" . . . "If he mentions something about Union Pacific," was the reply, "run it."

PROGRESS: Hendrik Willem van Loon, speaking at the dinner tendered by the Spanish refugee relief campaign, was questioned about the New York World's Fair at the converted Flushing dump . . . "With unusual foresight," said Van Loon, "we find that Mr. Whalen has built the world of tomorrow on the garbage of yesterday."

DEFEAT: Herb Magidson, the lyricist who wrote "The Continental," and his partner, Allie Wrubel, with whom he's written such hits as "Music, Maestro, Please" and "The Masquerade Is Over," have been in Hollywood these last few years . . . They never have written a Broadway show . . . George White signed them to write his new "Scandals," and the song writers immediately set to work upon this their first Broadway opportunity . . . The other night Magidson had a nervous breakdown. The same day Wrubel's wife became ill and was rushed to a hospital . . . And so Jack Yellen, the veteran song writer who wrote many of the "Scandals," is en route East to finish their job.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 11 (INS).—Erich Maria Remarque, of "All Quiet" fame and Marlene Dietrich's escort at every social function, has written a story for her. He'll sell it for a movie, but not without Marlene as the star. Meanwhile, the glamorous one is about to put her Jane Hancock on a contract which has been offered her by Gene Towne and Graham Baker for their first RKO picture. It's "African Intrigue," with a jungle background, and will be made before she goes to Paree to star in "The Image" in September.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Here's another little note about Marlene. Gene Markey has been discussing with her a Twentieth Century-Fox story which he will produce and write, not unlike her first success, "Blue Angel," in which she sang the memorable "Falling in Love Again." It was this movie that earned her the sobriquet "Legs" Dietrich. But the Markey movie won't be made until 1940.

The Fannie Brice-Twentieth Century battle has reached the arbitration stage. Fannie, who sees in "Rose of Washington Square" the story of her romance with Nicky Arnstein, first asked $100,000, which Twentieth felt was out of the question. The funny part of the thing is, when she was asked whom she wanted to represent her in the arbitration, Fannie said she could only think of two men whose judgment she respected and in whom she had unbounded confidence. One was her agent. The other was Joseph Schenck, with whom she is battling! Leo Spitz is representing her legally, and it's an almost unanimous opinion that any day now will see a settlement of the Brice claim out of court.

With all this lamenting that there aren't enough stars to go around, why hasn't somebody done something about Rita Hayworth? Yes, I know, she's under contract to Harry Cohn. But I don't feel that he has given the girl the chance she deserves. She was Rita Cansino, you may remember, of the dancing Casinos, and changed her name because she thought it would be lucky for her. The girl has beauty, poise and she can act. She is very good in "Only Angels Have Wings" and would have been better if she's had a bigger role. Photographically this picture is a triumph, with the thrilling flights, but the story is a little confusing. What a joy to see Richard Barthelmes again. As for that Cary Grant, well, he's really becoming our best he-man actor. Jean Arthur, in her type of characterization, has no equal.

Chatter in Hollywood: There's nobody like Lupe Velez when she's looking at one of her own pictures. Lupe, accompanied by a few devoted cohorts, went to the Hall Street Theater the other night to see the preview of her new picture, "The Girl From Mexico," and kept the entire audience in hysterics with her critiques on her own acitng. At the top of her lungs she would yell "Bravo—theez is wonderful," or, if it was something she didn't like, she would snort, "Take it away. That is feerce!" with everybody in Hollywood so re-feened now, it's nice to have an uninhibited soul like Lupe around.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jane Bryan at the Good Samaritan, where she parted with her tonsils; Gregory Ratoff host to Theodore Dreiser on the "Hotel for Women" set. Wish I had been there, cause I would like to meet him; the Duchess of Westminster visited the farmers' market today and ate some fish and chips, a good old British dish; Johnny "Scat" Davis is pacing the hospital corridors waiting the long overdue story; Elaine Barrie Barrymore, squired by two gentlemen, dining at the Beverly Derby; a few tables away Dorothy Lamour and Stephen Fuld, New York broker, were breaking bread; Bruce Cabot's handsome phiz is marred by three stiches but, of course, plastic surgery can help; David Loew, hear tell, has backed out of paying $40,000 for the Delmer Daves original. Understand he fears it's censorable.

Helen Mack and Ken Murray making a round of the night spots. Eugene Walter, old-time playwright, who wrote such hits as "The Easiest Way," reported very ill at the Cedars of Lebanon; win, lose or draw, Max Baer returns to Hollywood after the Nova bout to make a movie; friends of Alex Tolubouff's, formerly a Wanger art director, will be saddened to hear he is desperately ill at the Hollywood Hospital; Cary Grant dining with a party of men on his way to the preview of "Only Angels Have Wings." Later, he stopped by the La Maze to congratulate Irving Berlin on his birthday. They do say that Cary misses Phyllis Brooks so much it may be a marriage; Gloria Stewart and Arthur Sheekman so ill from typhoid shots they missed the boat in Los Angeles and finally caught it at San Francisco for their trip around the world. Just heard that Ronald Reagan comes from my home town, Dixon, Ill., and the Rock Rover folk are mighty proud of him.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

'The Castles' Dance Into Second Week at RKO-Keith's

You don't have to go back to 1911 to enjoy "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," which yesterday entered its second week at RKO-Keith's Theater.

This is the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers film that re-creates the lives of those two dancers who affected the dancing styles and social fashions of the pre-war years to an extent that is still felt. But the screen biography is even more than that. It tells of two lives, the way they were lived, with the surge for the moment and the feeling for the future that are eternal human traits.

If, "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" seems to say, you find our triumphs did not simply wind up at the little green house with the little green blinds, that is because life is not always that way. The wisdom in holding to the memoirs of Mrs. Castle (the film is under her technical supervision) very likely took courage on the part of Director H. C. Potter, but it resulted in a more convincingly sincere picture of the recent past than last season's "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

Tells Sincere Story

Vernon Castle was second comedian to Lew Fields in the 1911 musical, "The Henpecks." Mr. Fields, himself, is back in the new film, doing his barbershop scene with comedian Castle. But when Vernon accidently meets a dance-mad New Rochelle miss when both are rescuing a puppy in Long Island Sound, a partnership has begun. True, they have trouble starting, but those accidents that bring people together give them the breaks eventually and the dance they began in Paris eventually swept America.

When the war years came, Vernon was faithful to his native Britain's Royal Flying Corps and after the United States entered the war, he returned, a hero, to flying instruction in Texas. That is the simple story, told with such sincerity and feeling that one must be proud of two such people as Vernon and Irene Castle.

Never has the Astaire-Rogers combination seemed smoother. They laugh and plan so joyously and dance the way the Castles must have. The depth and naturalness which Miss Rogers gives Irene surely places her in the front rank for this season's acting plume. Dancing to the "Missouri Waltz," "Every Little Movement" or "By the Light of the Silvery Moon," she is expert as well in her most crushing moments.

Edna May Oliver having been out of our ken for a time, it is almost a surprise to discover that she seems fresher and keener than in many a film. Walter Brennan is the faithful family friend and Lew Fields is the best Lew Fields there possibly could be.

Walt Disney's "Goofy and Wilbur," a short, "Bow String" and the Pathe News also are on Keith's immensely satisfying program.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Janet Bracken, lyric soprano (Reino Luoma, accompanist), and Herbert Donaldson, pianist, give a joint recital in Masonic Auditorium Wednesday night for the benefit of Northeast Rescue Mission.

Making their first appearance here in a benefit recital, two young artists from the Middle West, Janet Bracken and Herbert Donaldson, deserved a larger audience than the one that greeted them last evening in Masonic Auditorium. They were fortunate, however, in that the auditors were appreciative of talent and rewarded them with attentive listening and a growing warmth of approval.

In her opening group of songs by Scarlatti, Grieg, Wolf and Veracini, Miss Bracken made an immediate impression of vocal competence and personal charm. Her lyric soprano is excellently placed and trained, and its quality is pure and delightful. Sustained by admirable breath control, her voice has pliability in phrasing and clarity of tone throughout its range. Its delicacy of shading was particularly pleasing in "Ein Schwan" and "Auf ein altes Bild."

Her second group contained Bainbridge Crist's arrangement of "C'est mon ami," Pierne's "Le Moulin" and Charpentier's "Depuis le Jour," from "Louise." While these disclosed her versatility in interpretation and technical ease, her finest singing was reserved for the final group. There was appealing emotional cogency in Rakhmaninov's "O Thou Billowy Harvest Field," wistful tenderness in Strickland's "At Eve I Heard a Flute," and a contagious excitement in Horsman's "Bird of the Wilderness" and Rummel's "Ecstasy."

Miss Bracken is a young singer whose progress should reward watching. Her security in tone production, her fluent treatment of the melodic line, her accuracy of attack and her control of tone are merits to be praised.

Herbert Donaldson's share of the program consisted of Rummel's transcription of a Bach chorale-prelude, Harold Bauer's version of Franck's organ Prelude, Fugue and Variation; Ravel's Sonatine, and four Etudes of Chopin. Soundly grounded in technique, he plays with a justified assurance and clarity in exposition. His style is forthright, and his interpretative finesse does not yet match his range of dynamics. He seems to have a preference for forte and fortissimo, though he can command a light and persuasive touch.

Claude Robeson directs the Rubinstein Club in its second concert of the season Wednesday night in the Willard Hotel ballroom, with Mary Bothwell as guest soloist.

An enjoyable concert was presented by the Rubinstein Club of women's voices last evening in the Willard Hotel ballroom which was filled, as usual, by patrons and friends of the organization. Claude Robeson conducted the well-trained group of singers in a varied program which consisted mostly of arrangements, the exceptions being "Afferentur Regi Virgines" by the late Abel L. Gabert and "In the Boat" by Reinhold Herman.

Beginning with Ryder's vocal treatment of one of Mendelssohn's "Lieder ohne Worte," the arrangements included Bantock's "Silent Strings;" Strauss' "Tales of the Vienna Woods;" Nevin's "Before the Daybreak;" Franz' "Marie" and Rubinstein's "Good Night."

The guest artist of the evening was Mary Bothwell, of New York, who made three appearances. Her choice of operatic excerpts touched upon "Die Walkuere," "Tannhauser" and Handel's "Radamisto," which were alternated with songs by Rurante, Wagner, Richard Strauss, Stuart Ross, Leo Russotto, Ethel Glen Hier and Elinor Remich Warren.

Miss Bothwell has a good dramatic soprano voice and technical facility in its use. In range of volume and emotional coloring, she showed an aptitude for convincing interpretation. Her upper tones, however, are not always round and unconstricted nor is her control of breath yet fully mastered.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 11.—After seeing "Invitation to Happiness," I've come to the conclusion that Irene Dunne must live right. Imagine getting two such pictures as "Love Affair" and "Invitation to Happiness" in the same season. No wonder Irene looks younger in each picture. I never thought I'd live to shed a tear over a prize fighter, but that was before Fred MacMurray did the realest one I've ever seen. How that boy trouped. Now I understand why society girls fall for them.

HOPPER

And after this, I suppose Willie Collier, sr., will be rediscovered as a great actor and he'll be built up as a new find. Yet all he needed was a director of the caliber of Wes Ruggles to give him an opportunity on the screen. That's all anybody needs, if they can act.

Brother Charles Ruggles' performance won't get such raves, it's so natural you don't know he's acting.

What with "Midnight" and "Invitation to Happiness" Paramount isn't going to the top, it's there.

Hollywood's so busy using the wailing wall for its own purpose it doesn't think about losses sustained in other industries. The bumper orange crop is so terrific growers didn't have to engage watchmen this year. People wouldn't even steal them.

And did you know that during the 1932 Olympics the growers offered free oranges for all atheletes? But were told that item had been taken care of. Not until the athletes had returned to their native lands, did they discover that what they got was canned orange juice.

What do you suppose the Nelson Eddys did to kill time between Nelson's high notes during that concert tour? You'd be wrong my friend, they haunted auctions and antique shops!

The reason Herbert Wilcox brought Anna Neagle from London to Hollywood to make "The Life of Edith Cavell" is that England wants that tremendous picture prapaganda used. By doing it here, American will be Edith Cavell-conscious from beginning to the end of its making. Thus they hope to do much to line up America as closely as possible with England.

Wilcox brought over a complete British unit; star, cameraman, writer, cutter, art director and publicist.

We did same thing to them in "Yank at Oxford." Now let's be the first to do that in South America. What do you say?

Now that Connie Bennet and Joe Schneck are both in New York, our town is again buzzing with rumors that Connie will be the next Mrs. Schenck. We like those history cycles—didn't Gilbert Roland once beau Norma Talmadge, just as he has Connie for many years?

In Hollywood it helps to have your first and last names match in numbers of letters Charles Chaplin, Paul Muni, Clark Gable, Eroll Flynn, Greta Garbo, Sonja Henie, Bette Davis, Mickey Rooney.

Gosh. I missed by one letter. No wonder they consider Hoppers a scourge!

Is Wayne Morris's wife, Bubbles Schinasi, testing for a contract? Well, anyway George Hurrell glamourized her for a whole day at that studio, to the strains of Strauss!

Who said Chinese don't cry? Looked like spring showers when Anna May Wong sailed for Australia to be gone until October. She's picked up her writing chore again, will send weekly columns to a New York newspaper just as she did when she went to China for the first time. Remember when she came back and wore nothing but Chinese clothes? Thank goodness, they've been discarded for ours, which are more seductive. But she took long woolen undies for the winter season down under.

Actress Advanced

Ellen Drew, co-featured with George Raft in "The Lady's From Kentucky," was awarded a new contract with the studio as a result of her work in that picture. A newcomer to pictures, she used to be a shop girl.

Gracie Allen Blue—Can't Use Hats

Gracie Allen met with disappointment when she portrayed her role in "The Gracie Allen Murder Case."

The nut comedienne had hoped to wear at least half of the two dozen hats she recently purchased in New York, but managed to get only five of them in front of the cameras.

The many gowns she wears in the pictures were created at the studio by Edith Head, fashion designer.

Indian Cast

Chief Thunder Cloud, a full-blooded Cherokee, today was portraying Geronimo, Apache Indian war lord of the Southwest, in "Great Enemy." Geronimo terrorized Arizona and New Mexico for 10 years in defiance of the United States Army, costing the Government $41,000,000.

Vote on War Abroad Urged By Gen. Rivers

Rep. O'Day, Educator Also Favor Proposal For Referendum

By the Associated Press.

A life-long soldier, Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, retired, strongly urged yesterday the adoption of a constitutional amendment requiring a referendum of the people before American troops could be sent to war abroad.

Expressing impatience with "trained diplomats" and lawyers opposing the idea, Gen. Rivers, in testimony before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee, called the proposal "the most vital thing in the way of legislation now before Congress."

He was one of several witnesses who appeared yesterday in support of the amendment. Dr. Charles C. Tansill, Fordham University, professor of American history, praised the proposal as a restraint "upon Presidents whose rash acts might mean war." Representative Caroline O'Day (Democrat), New York, predicted that a war referendum system would eventually be established.

"It may not come this year," the latter said, "it may not come in my lifetime, but generations of mothers will bring this up, time after time, until is passes."

Says Wars Forced

Such an amendment, she said would give "the man on the street who later becomes the man at the front, a chance to choose between death and a chance to live and improve his own country."

"Why," she asked, "should our boys be sent overseas to fight for countries not their own, and causes that reach back to century-old European quarrels?"

Dr. Tansill asserted that President Madison forced the war with England in 1812 and that President Polk "deliberately manufactured the war with Mexico."

"There is no doubt that a national plebiscite can be taken quickly and promptly," he said.

The war referendum amendment, which was defeated by a narrow margin in the House last session, was introduced jointly by a group of 12 Senators, representing four political parties.

Administration leaders maneuvered yesterday to delay Congressional debate on neutrality legislation until the King and Queen of England have visited the United States in June.

One Senator expressed the opinion that the discussion would be likely to include criticism by some legislators of England's part in recent European developments.

This is especially true, he said, since the "cash and carry" neutrality bill by Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, would permit England and France, through their control of the seas, to obtain wartime arms in this country.

Gillette Asks Repeal

Senator Guy M. Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, introduced a bill to repeal the present neutrality act and substitute a wartime policy of "trade at your own risk."

The bill proposes repeal of the arms embargo section of the present statute and would empower Congress to declare the existence of declared or undeclared war.

Under its terms, the President could designate "combat zones" into which United States vessels could travel only at their own risk.

"My bill," Gillette said, "would return us to international law, reserving for ourselves the full rights of neutrals with the exception of the combat zone provision."

Vessels entering the designated zones, he said, would do so with the full knowledge that the Army and Navy would not come to their aid if they get into trouble.

By Eugene Pharo.

This is sixth in a series of articles on social and health conditions in the Capital. The seventh will appear tomorrow.

In 1937 there were 217 white babies and 210 Negro babies born dead in the City of Washington. Two others were stillborn, but their race was not known.

The research department of the Washington Council of Social Agencies is expert in translating such individual tragedies into statistics and rates. It reports that this was proportionately more stillbirths than occurred in the United States as a whole, and that while the Washington rate had declined since 1930 it had been consistently higher than the national rate.

Tracing the exact neighborhoods in which stillbirths occurred, the council found that four with the highest rates were in the Northwest, including one in which the white rate was higher than any of those for Negroes. The highest rate for Negroes was in the Southwest.

There was more variation among the census tracts with a higher proportion of stillbirths than in relation to other facts. But inadequate incomes, over-crowding, poor housing were found in all.

The highest rate for white stillbirths was in tract 37, which is bounded by Fourteenth and Sixteenth streets, Harvard street, and Florida avenue. Here there were six white stillbirths and one colored. This made the white rate per 1,000 live births 105.26. In this tract, the population is 8.2 per cent Negro, and the density of population residential acre computed for August, 1936, was 67.7, the average rental is $49.23, overcrowding exists in 4.6 per cent of the homes, and the birth rate is 13.33, which is one-fifth below hte national average.

In tract 64, which is between M street and the Anacostia River, and between Canal street and South Capitol street in Southwest Washington, the stillbirth rate among Negroes was 100. In this section there were no white stillbirths, and five Negro ones. The population is 90.1 per cent Negro, rents are less than $25 a month, 12.4 of the dwelling units are overcrowded, the density of the population is 11 to the residential acre, more than a four thof the homes do not have inside toilets and baths, and the birth rate is 27.86, which is more than 63 per cent greater than the national average.

Of three other tracts where the rate for stillbirths was high, two where the white population is in the minority, are between Georgia avenue and Eleventh street, and S street and Park road northwest. The other, where the white population is in the majority, is between Vermont avenue and S street, and Sixteenth and Fourteenth streets. In the latter tract the birthrate is 9.61 per 1,000 estimated population, and the average rental is between $40 and $49.99 a month.

Seal Receives Bill For Marriage Tests

A proposed bill for making premarital examinations compulsory and abolishing common-law marriages in the District was submitted yesterday to Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal by Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

The bill would require all marriage applicants to undergo a test for venereal disease. A subcommittee on health of the Board of Trade, headed by Charles S. Zurhorst, has recommended the bill.

Appropraitions Committee May Be Abolished

Rejection of 50 Million Boost in Rivers Bill Stirs House Resentment

By the Associated Press.

Growing sentiment for abolition of the powerful House Appropriations Committee appeared in Congressional circles yesterday, forced into the open in debate on the $305,188,514 appropriation for flood control and other nonmilitary functions of the War Department.

Representative Mott (Republican), Oregon, raised the question as a result of the committee's refusal to approve a $50,000,000 increase for flood control and river and harbor improvements.

Mott denounced this action as an "abuse of authority" and said that sentiment was growing in the House in favor of restoring the appropriating power to the legislative committees where it reposed prior to adoption of the present budget system back in the 1920s.

(Legislative committees dealing with flood control, military and naval affairs, agriculture, and other subjects now authorize expenditures, but the funds are not made available until separate bills, handled by the Appropriations Committee, are approved.)

"Members are getting tired," Mott said, "of having the Appropriations Committee, in many instances without hearings, reject appropriations which have been authorized by the legislative committees after weeks of painstaking study and expert testimony."

Fire Destroys 2 Warehouses

Fire that spread from a stove in a warehouse of Brunk Brothers Supply Co., Hyattsville, Md., was believed to have caused a blaze that destroyed two warehouses and the office of the company yesterday morning. Damage of $5,000 was estimated by H. M. Brunk, one of the owners.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 11 (AP).—Payment of $64,245.04 in Arizona inheritance taxes by the state of Marcus Jay Lawrence, wealthy Washington, D. C., sportsman slain in a fight in Prescott, Ariz., a year ago, was announced today by State Treasurer William Petersen.

The American Security and Trust Co., of Washington, executor, valued the gross estate at $870,551.44 and claimed $156,960.19 in deductions.

Treasury Head Marks Birthday With Luncheon

Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., yesterday took brief time out from fiscal problems to celebrate his forty-eighth birthday by ordering red roses for the Treasury garden and entertaining Mrs. Morgenthau and a few of his associates at luncheon in his office.

Greeted at his morning press conference with a chorus of "Happy birthday to you," the Treasury chief expressed concern over the anticipated $3,300,000,000 deficit for the next fiscal year. "It's plenty," he said.

Treasury gardens started to plant yellow roses because they were cheaper and hardier. "I like red roses. I can't help it," the Secretary complained.

One Way Out

Gov. Chandler has given fair warning that the mines of eastern Kentucky will be opened under the protection of State troopers, if a settlement is not reached before Monday.

"I have taken the position," he said, "that any unemployed citizen of America who needs and wants and has an opportunity to work at wages and under conditions acceptable to him shall have the right to work without intimidation, free from molestation from anyone." Later reports emanating from West Virginia indicated that similar action would be taken there if negotiations collapse.

These statements serve as advance notice to both operators and miners that the prolonged deadlock cannot continue much longer without forcing State governments within the trouble area to take drastic measures to bring about resumption of work. Coal mining is an industry "affected with a public interest." And that public interest takes precedence over the rights of workers and the rights of employers.

Dr. John R. Steelman, realizing that fact, has already urged the negotiation of individual contracts, wherever agreements can be reached. In that way he hopes that operations will be resumed on a scale that will avert the acute fuel shortage that now threatens. While such partial settlements might still the clamor of the consuming public and prevent widespread industrial shutdowns, it would not satisfy men who, like Gov. Chandler, demand that work be resumed wherever men are willing to enter the mines.

The method the Governor suggests for breaking the deadlock might satisfy some operator groups. But it would certainly deal a severe blow to the union. Moreover, in the long run, the operators themselves would have occasion to regret their failure to reach an amicable settlement that would afford them protection against unauthorized strikes.

Nevertheless, outside intervention is inevitable unless the principals find a way to settle their differences. And if such intervention comes—especially in the form indicated by Gov. Chandler—it will spell a severe setback for the cause of collective bargaining and bring discredit upon those responsible for the deadlock.

Turn Backward!

It seems that Dr. Milton H. Erickson, of Eloise, Mich., has been doing some very wonderful things with psychic time. He told the convention of the American Psychiatric Association at Chicago how he turns back the mental clocks of his patients to whatever age, usually childhood, seems therapeutically desirable. The patient thus "forgets all the years of experience between his actual age and his mind time."

If we get the general idea—and it is quite possible that we don't—it is to haul the patient back to the emotional crossroads where he took his first wrong turn. Then the patient having been put upon the right road the clock is spun forward again and he trots happily back to A. D. 1939 without any mire to speak of on his psychic shoes and few, if any, briers, tears or burdocks in his psychic pants.

It all seems to prove what the Mad Hatter said to Alice: that if you only get on the right side of him, Time can be persuaded to do almost anything you wish. Time and Dr. Erickson are, apparently, very close pals indeed.

Still, we cannot help wondering why, if this process will work with an individual, it will not work for the whole organism of human society. If it be true that most of our current deliriums are consequences of the World War, why not ask Dr. Erickson to whisk us back to, say, the summer of 1913 and let us make a fresh start? Possibly, however, we should find that the World War was merely an inevitable consequence of the industrial revolution, and that we should have to go back to A. D. 1720 or thereabouts. But even then we might discover that the root of our troubles was in the invention of printing or in the Crusades or in the corn laws of ancient Rome.

Before we knew it we might find ourselves all the way back in the Garden of Eden. And then we might talk Dr. Erickson into letting us remain there.

Russian Diplomacy

A curious editorial was published yesterday by the Moscow newspaper Izvestia. It is not less curious because official circulation of the editorial abroad, in official translation, emphasizes that it represents the policy of the Soviet government.

The editorial makes clear what has of late been strongly indicated—that Russia is none too anxious to align herself with Great Britain, France, Poland and Rumania in a concerted effort to check further aggression on the part of the Berlin-Rome axis. It reiterates the opinion, frequently expressed by Stalin, that Russia has nothing to fear from Germany. It regards Hitler's attacks on communism as eyewash. The "undoubted fact," says the editorial, is that the anticomintern pact has been converted into "a military and political alliance" of Germany and Italy "against Great Britain and France."

Whether or not this is true, it is what the Soviet government wishes to believe. And Moscow now seeks to give reality to desire by assuring Berlin that there are no dangerous issues between the two dictatorships, Nazi and Communist. This is a development of Stalin's statement, on March 10, that there are no "visible grounds" for a conflict between Germany and Russia. The present reiteration of this appeasement policy is more significant because it indicates that Russia has no intention of supporting Poland in any crisis which might develop over Danzig or the Corridor.

Izvestia's editorial will be warmly welcomed by the Nazis, whose ambitions at the expense of Poland are helped by the present equivocal Russian attitude. But the effect has not been to undermine the determined position which the Anglo-French alliance has assumed. On the heels of the Russian statement Premier Chamberlain warned that war involving Great Britain could be expected from any attempt to change the Polish situation by force. The inference is that the position taken by the Anglo-French alliance is independent of Russian aid, however welcome it might be.

The Izvestia editorial attempts to condemn Great Britain and France because they are unwilling to form an outright military alliance with Russia. That unwillingness is understandable and does not mean, as the editorial asserts, that Russia is asked to assist Great Britain, France and Poland "without receiving any assistance from them." Mr. Chamberlain has already suggested that any Russian intervention could be made "contingent on that of Great Britain and France."

The Izvestia editorial provides further confirmation of Russia's desire to strike a shrewd bargain in the present tangled situation. The overtures to Germany are probably sincere on the part of Stalin, who is said to be a strong admirer of Hitler. But aside from that Soviet policy is clearly designed to bring pressure on the British and French to offer Russia whatever she may demand as the price of her support.

These tactics are unlikely to be successful. If war should start in Europe, Russia would almost certainly be drawn in, against rather than with Germany. The Russian attitude, however, increases present tensions. It practically tells Hitler that if he decides to seize Danzig, the Soviet state will not regard such action as a hostile act.

For Moscow to take that attitude at this moment is inept diplomacy. It would explain, if further explanation were needed, why the British and French have long had small regard for Russian assurances, and why they are properly cautious about undertaking the commitments which are the price of aligning one variety of dictatorship against another.

New Soviet Envoy

When Maxim Litvinoff suddenly resigned as Soviet foreign commissar a fortnight ago, many were convinced that this development involved a good deal more than the replacement of one individual by another at the head of Moscow's foreign office.

The change, it was suggested, foreshadowed a drastic about-face in Russia's foreign relations and, in particular, the scrapping of the policy of collective security with which Litvinoff had long been identified in the outside world.

Considerable mystery still surrounds the present trend and direction of Russian foreign policy. However, it is significant that the ouster of Litvinoff has not been followed by any major changes in the personnel of the Soviet foreign service. In one case, at least, that of Constantine A. Oumansky, a Litvinoff man has actually been promoted since the resignation of his former chief.

As counselor of the Soviet Embassy in Washington during the past three years, Mr. Oumansky served as a brilliant second to the popular A. A. Troyanovsky, Soviet Russia's first Ambassador to the United States. Now, as Mr. Troyanovsky's successor, Mr. Oumansky has been rewarded by the Kremlin for his ability and zeal.

Mr. Oumansky's appointment is, however, not only a personal tribute—he will be the youngest Ambassador accredited to the United States. It also suggests a continuity in personnel reflecting a continuity in the foreign policy of the Soviet Union.

Disturbing Tax Rumors

Reports that the President has turned "thumbs down" on the Treasury's tax revision program will have a bad effect upon business sentiment.

While Secretary Morgenthau asserted yesterday that he is prepared to present his program to Congress, he failed to deny rumors that the President was not in sympathy with his proposals. Mr. Morgenthau's silence is significant, particularly when coupled with the fact that late in March the President strongly intimated that tax revision at this time was infeasible. It indicates that the Administration cannot be counted upon to support a real tax reform measure.

That is a great pity. For nothing would do more to convince businessmen that the Administration is really anxious to further their interests than the removal or modification of certain taxes that tend to deter business enterprise. While spending is maintained at high levels and the budget remains unbalanced no great reduction in the total amount of taxes collected from industry can be expected. However, a moderate revisionist program that would redistribute rather than reduce the tax burden is entirely practicable.

The main outlines of such a program are indicated in a study on "Taxation And Capital Investment" recently published by the Brookings Institution. The recommendations are reported to be in rather close accord with the tax revision plan worked out by Undersecretary Hanes. Moreover, similar suggestions have frequently been made by representatives of business and students of taxation who have either practical or theoretical knowledge of the working of our tax laws.

Among the changes urged are repeal of the remnants of the excess profits tax, elimination or further liberalization of the capital gains tax, and abolition of taxes on capital stock and excess profits. Excessively high surtaxes, as well as the taxation of individual capital gains, also cut down the amount of surplus available for investment and discourage risk taking on the part of those with large incomes. Hence reduction in the surtaxes and more liberal treatment of the individual taxpayer with respect to capital gains and offsetting capital losses would be a stimulus to investment activity.

As an offset to revenue losses from such adjustments, some slight increase in the general tax rate applicable to corporations might be necessary. The income tax base should also be broadened to include large groups now entirely exempt from taxation. However, the latter proposal would be extremely unpopular and, for political reasons, is probably out of the question. It is noticeable that the Brookings study did not even suggest broadening the income tax base. Indeed, the chief defect of the report is that it presents no plan for offsetting revenue losses due to proposed reforms, except for a passing reference to the possibility of increasing the rate on corporate income "if it be deemed necessary to maintain the existing volume of revenue from corporation levies."

Barring any proposal to collect additional revenue from less heavily taxed or untaxed individual incomes, it certainly seems rash to suggest tax changes that would cut returns from corporate taxation. Under present conditions, tax reform should be confined to removal of undue restraints upon investment activity and business enterprise. Reductions in the total amounts collected in taxes should be postponed until such time as expenditures are cut.

He Prefers Liberty

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

No so long ago a naturalized American spurned a fortune left him by relatives in Italy. He preferred the American way. And only a few days ago Walter F. Dreyer, German-born operator of a farm near Hayti, Mo., cheerfully declined a fortune of $18,000 waiting for him in Germany. Explained Mr. Dreyer:

> I would rather live here in America where I have freedom of speech, thoughts and religion, than live in Germany and have the benefits of $18,000.

In Nazi Germany a man may possess a million dollars and still be spiritually pauperized. He cannot enjoy his wealth. He cannot purchase his freedom. He must goose-step, sing the Horst Wessel and "Heil, Hitler," whenever the high command so decrees.

He not only is forbidden to criticize the authorities publicly, but is even afraid to do so in guarded whispers to friends and relatives lest the Gestapo espionage system ensnare him in its net. He must join in persecuting minorities, or at least refrain from crying out against such persecution, lest he find himself bundled off to the nearest concentration camp. He may vote, but it's a case of "Ja" or else.

In the present scheme of things money may be a very important factor in guiding our destinies. But when it cannot buy freedom it becomes useless to those who are accustomed to liberty.

Traffic Suggestions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Washington Post is to be highly commended upon its front page stories of the District's model deathtraps for pedestrians.

If suggestions are in order the following are offered, most of which are not original, but which perhaps have not been talked about as much as they should be:

1. Make drivers who are turning corners be 95 per cent responsible for the safety of pedestrians who may happen to be stepping from the curb or crossing the intersection. The car driver should have no more right to obstruct the pedestrian crossing on a green light than the pedestrian should have to obstruct the driver when the driver is crossing on a green light.

2. Create the position of an "Emily Post" in an effort to civilize that certain percentage of drivers who seem to have the get-there-first, shut - your - eyes, grit - your-teeth, keep-going complex.

3. Get the National Bureau of Standards to undertake research on the use of reflectors or highly visible material on belts, coat cuffs, coat tails and other parts of garments.

4. Get every Government employe who has a Senator to call him up and ask why it is that the Senate has an underground parking lot with a fountain on top when no provision whatever was made for parking facilities for the average Government employe in all of the new Government buildings. Lack of any reasonable parking area is the cause of many a motorist's haste and lack of consideration when he is trying to find a place to leave his car and get to work in the morning.

5. Provide more underpasses or bridges for bottlenecks like Fourteenth and Water streets, to reduce the exasperation of motorists, who daily, as a group, waste weeks of time getting to and from work.

6. Stop the present racket of putting restricted parking time on much unnecessary area and then permitting motorists to park there all day, if they are willing to pay two or three parking tickets a year. Make a survey and study and find some way to provide reasonable parking facilities.

PHILLIP R. WHEELER.
Washington, May 10.

New Tragic Era?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The term "tragic era," was assigned too soon. It is here now. Taxation of State and Federal income, arguments against immigration, taxation as a burden, and the commandeering of the soldier, with the equality of women, and loose home ties, always mark a coincidence when wealth becomes the social force. At this time the police type of bureaucracy has risen in every older society.

Just so long as the weak provide something to be absorbed, an oligarchy is inevitable, because of the acceleration of aggregation of land, wealth, distinctions, superior education and moral standards. But immigration, bringing in new blood, lower living standards, energy and thrift, released by the influence of new geographical conditions, staves off the decline. Without it a decline in the demand for agricultural products is inevitable, eviction of tenant farmers follows, and the power of the oligarchy over government delivers subsidies to the group and salaries and perquisites to relatives and supporters.

The land-speculating oligarchy controlling the Roman Senate and the holders of government debts taxed everything to pay the interest, except their own salaries. France and England, before their revolutions, reached the same situation. Only a free press and public schools locally controlled may avert the debacle here.

Peace And The Pope

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Six times during the past year, to my knowledge, editorials have appeared in The Post touching upon the Papacy or Catholic leadership. The beautiful tributes to Cardinal Hayes and to Pope Pius XI were reprinted in many of the Catholic papers. All six editorials have displayed an insight and a sympathy not generally shown the Catholic Church by the secular press.

The editorial, "Papal Intervention," in the issue of May 10, indicates that in this country, where Catholics are in the minority, there is hope that the Vatican, which seeks no selfish advantage, will receive overwhelming support in its appeal for a peace conference.

It is my conviction that the appeal of President Roosevelt to Hitler and Mussolini, while for the moment it seemed to increase the tension in Europe, has prepared the way for such an experienced and able statesman as Pope Pius XII to serve as an arbiter in the Polish-German crisis. We do not know just what lines the suggestions of Pope Pius XII for a peace conference have followed but it is significant that the prospects for peace are reported brighter today than any time in recent months.

You close your editorial with these words: "If Pius XII is able to contribute to this end (creating a situation in which statesmanship will be able to operate constructively), as is his evident desire, his rank in history as one of the greatest of all Popes will be unquestioned." It is my conviction that many who do not recognize the leadership of Pope Pius XII in the field of dogma will support his every effort to avert the catastrophe of another world war. The whole theme of his short pontificate has been peace.

Such editorials as the one from which I have quoted strengthen both the President and Pope Pius XII in their disinterested service as peacemakers.

MAURICE S. SHEEHY, Ph. D.
Catholic University of America.
Washington, May 10.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The editorial in The Post of May 10 on "Papal Intervention" shows a superficial knowledge of Vatican politics. It also shows the extent to which our so-called free press is under the influence of the Papal power in many ways. And this in a Protestant country—not nominally overwhelmingly Protestant.

Foreign dispatches carry the news that Europe resents the Pope's "peace parley"—or receives it coolly. Of course. What the Vatican wants is greater influence in world affairs—and greater power. But it won't get it. However simple-minded the average American journalist may be concerning Papal politics, Europe will not be deceived, not even Catholic Europe.

Mr. Editor, please give your very best on the European situation, so as to meet the expectations of the intelligent readers of your otherwise valuable paper.

EDGAR E. JONES.
Silver Spring, Md., May 10.

Recovery

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A constructive plan for egress from the present confusing condition of national affairs has been thought of by a few of the remaining persons who remember those placid days when every man rejoiced in his world and was contented to walk a little faster than the caterpillar; when most people were fairly contented and prosperous, or if not very prosperous did not feel any ignominy because of a higher standard of living.

The plan is a simple one. Let the standard methods of progress by thrift and its government aids be recognized again as reasonable and important in place of the exclusive continuance of the explorations of the governmental laboratory for experimental genesis. In addition to the explorations of government for new expedients toward progress this plan would require that the methods which have built up the great Nation in our New World of the West be retained in unimpaired usefulness also.

After the Nation has thus returned to prosperity without neglect of the standard methods, with obvious adaptations not stretched too much by theory or by faraway ideals, then experiments in government will be easier to bear and, if proven good, more highly esteemed. Incidentally, as the shopkeeper must have his fixed measure, his pound, his pint, his yardstick, so the investor back of industries and employment must have his established measure; and the only good measure that we know about is the old-time one of a definite currency.

Show the world that prosperity actually prevails under the banner of peace and democracy and the first step toward peace in the whole world is taken. By force of good example, dictators everywhere will lose their popular appeal. Also it is the most certain way of "arming for peace."

The period of too much experiment in government has lasted long enough and has seemed longer. It sometimes seems that the doctors of government should be satisfied with the long trial already cheerfully accorded them. By these methods every depression, hitherto, within our national history has, after this length of time, resolved itself into the splendors of a new prosperity. After these many years, the present one doesn't act that way. Why not?

If only we want prosperity enough to take the sober way of gaining it, we shall find that this has all been a bad dream we have suffered from because we couldn't wake up

ARTHUR RICHMOND,
Washington, May 10.

Sudden Quiet?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am very much interested as to the why of the sudden quiet regarding the destruction of the Slobodkin statue of Abraham Lincoln, which so suddenly disappeared from the Federal Building at the World's Fair in New York City.

I think this is a dastardly outrage; first of all, against the martyred President, and certainly against every loyal American. I am an American, of the white race and Southern born—a sincere admirer of the life and character of Abraham Lincoln, whose service to humanity, freedom and justice cannot be discounted. There is something sinister and disconcerting back of the whole transaction and the attitude of those responsible for the removal and destruction of the statue. Let us have some light on the subject.

The Leader's Illness

WHEN THE LEADER sent for us I thought he would be ready to unfold a new plan, for none of us had been admitted to him in a week. None, that is, except Furness and Schmid. They knew all about it, I was sure—they kept to themselves, talking seriously, as we marched up the corridor.

A medicinal smell drifted into the hall when the outer doorway was opened. A man in a white coat brushed by the guards.

"Quiet, gentlemen," he said unnecessarily. "The Leader can see you for a few minutes only." He motioned a blackshirt aside and opened the last door himself.

The Leader looked small in bed. A reddish stubble had sprouted on his chin.

"Fred, John, Harold—" he said. "And you, Reinhold. You have been with me from the beginning." He lowered his lids.

"Your names," he continued, "shall be engraved on the great monument at Brownhouses. I—I do not want my name on any monument. Do you understand, Fred, John, my generals? Do you understand, all of you?"

"Yes, Leader."

"I do not want it! Can't you understand? What I have done, I have done for my people. And what I have done was right, wasn't it?"

"Yes, Leader."

"Dumbheads! Don't just stand there saying, 'Yes, Leader.' Can't you see I'm dying? I want the truth. Haven't I always scorned sentimentality and easy words?"

"Yes, Leader."

"Why must you keep dinning that phrase into my ears? Please, for old times' sake, for the bitter troubles we endured when there were only five of us—" he turned to me—"you, Reinhold—you were not among the mightiest, but you have known me best. You have played me tunes on your violin when my spirits were low. Tell me—haven't I done right?"

"Yes, Leader."

He sighed. "I shouldn't have had to kill Conrad," he murmured to the ceiling. "He had done me no harm. But his ideas were all wrong! He was misleading the people! I had to do it, didn't I?" His eyes were staring at us once more.

"Yes, Leader."

Sheep! What will you do when I'm gone? Have you no minds of your own? Come on, can't you see I'm dying? I want you to tell me now. It was a mistake to kill Conrad, wasn't it?

Furness cleared his throat. "Whatever the Leader says must be correct. If the circumstances have changed so that Conrad would now have been valuable . . ."

"And the plains dwellers—they were patriotic, industrious families, and intelligent. I shouldn't have sent the army down there and burned all their houses. But it was for the people, the people, do you hear? My people had to have somebody to hate. Didn't they, Fred? Didn't they, John? Well?"

"Yes, Leader."

"Ah, you are torturing me! Have mercy on a dying man—won't you tell me what you're thinking?"

The Leader passed a hand across his forehead. "I'll tell you what you would think, if you had the will to think. You would think that I lost something good when I destroyed the plains dwellers. The money I took away from them—I took it for the people. But now it is used up. If I had let the plains dwellers alone, their riches would have been a permanent part of the public wealth, and they would have created more as time went on. That is true, isn't it?"

"If the Leader has changed his mind, then it is possible that the truth has changed also," I said.

"Ah, Reinhold. You always were a philosopher . . . and your tunes . . . Then there were the Tashen. I departed from my principles when I took them. And in doing so I made a strategic error. I did, didn't I, Fred? Don't answer. I know what you will say—'Yes, Leader.' I did make a mistake. We are not all one people now. If there is stress, the Tashen will divide the nation. But it was for the people! I couldn't let them go back; they must always go forward! And on the North, we were not ready. I had to do it, Fred! John! Reinhold, tell me I had to do it!"

"Yes, Leader," said the others.

"Yes, Leader! Must I go to my grave with that phrase ringing in my ear? . . . And the church. Who am I to judge the eternal truths?"

"The Leader is always just."

"I am human, Fred."

"But the divine spark is in you, Leader."

"Don't throw those inventions back at me now, old friends. I'm dying. Tell me, how am I to know what is the true faith? How am I to know what is right? Harold, you told the people what to believe. Tell me, how am I to know what one should believe? How am I to know what is right?"

Harold licked his lips. "The Leader is always right."

The Leader groaned. "The Massinians, too," he whispered. "The Massinians. That was the greatest mistake of all. I won the argument with their leader. Didn't I, Harold?"

"Yes, Leader."

"A pompous windbag, chosen by the voters. He is a pompous windbag, isn't he, Harold?"

"Yes, Leader."

"But my strategy was as faulty as that of my predecessors. I should have let their leader win the argument, for now I have made them angry, and they are the most powerful people in the world. If a war comes they will be against us. It was a costly victory, wasn't it, Fred and John? Wasn't it, my generals?"

"The Leader knows best."

"I couldn't help it!" he shouted. "I could not let my people be insulted! I am their honor, and their glory! I have upheld the name of my people. Haven't I Fred, John? Haven't I, Harold, Reinhold? Tell me I have done right!"

"Yes, Leader."

"You are liars," he said. "Liars! It was all wrong. Whoever comes after me must wipe the slate clean, must make another start. You will not tell me . . . " he said. His eyes stared reproachfully at us, and slowly closed.

Was it merely delirium or a test for us, or did the Leader mean what he said that day? We never found out—he got well.

Treacherous Minority

IT IS OFTEN said that Red baiters exaggerate the menace of communism in this country, because the Communists pool a small vote and because there are, practically speaking, none of them in the communities between the seaboards, which are made up of native Americans. These arguments are true, but they defeat their own purpose, because no group so small and unrepresentative of native American sentiment deserves the disproportionate influence which Communists possess in the national Government.

If the Communists are as weak in numbers as they angrily insist they are, it is a betrayal of the Americans who did elect the New Deal to permit any of them to hold influential positions in the Government. They received no indorsement from the voters, and they were repudiated before the election. They have no more standing then members of the Nazi anti-American bund, with whom they have everything in common but a label, and the leaders of the Administration have a duty to discredit and repel them as vigorously as they would a representative of the Hitler sedition and sabotage.

Friendly Attitude Should Be Halted

IT IS, therefore, not the number of Communists, avowed and furtive, which requires frequent reminders, but the friendly and encouraging attitude of the Government toward so small and treacherous a minority. It must be observed that communism and Communists never are rebuked by anyone speaking for the Administration and that Mr. Ickes, on two occasions, has appeared as the honor guest of professional organizations which are conspicuously troubled by communistic disturbances in their ranks.

It is easy to believe that Mr. Ickes is not in great demand as a guest of genuinely American groups, but even that famous frugality which twice impelled him to become an illegal, semi-charity case in a Government hospital while drawing $15,000 a year and perquisites would not entirely explain his eagerness to tear meat with members of the Stalin conspiracy. He would not be a gracious guest of an organization containing a Nazi unit, although he might show up for the sake of the meal, but he can manage to be cordial in the company of Communists.

Official Tolerance Of Communists Hit

THIS ATTITUDE of the Secretary of the Interior is, in round numbers, the attitude of the whole Washington Administration toward the Nazis and the Communists, respectively. It indicates a preference or tolerance for communism by a Government which was elected on the Democratic, not the Communist, ticket.

It need not be said that if the Nazi bund were to start an organization of WPA workers, demanding a tithe of their wages for a Hitler fund to be used against the American form of Government, calling sitdown strikes on Government work, sabotaging the national relief and recovery program and discriminating against genuine Americans in the distribution of public jobs, the New Deal would kick the conspiracy to pieces in a week. On the basis of performances to date, the New Deal might break off diplomatic relations with Germany and deport or imprison the fuehrer of the anti-American bund, but it must be noted that when the Communists do this there is no official displeasure. Indeed, the displeasure falls upon those Americans who have the temerity to expose the plot, and the very act of exposing a conspiracy against the American form of Government is held by some to be an act of sabotage against the New Deal.

No Move As Yet To Purge Communists

THE IDENTITY of communism and naziism need not be argued in detail here, having been demonstrated many times. Yet a Communist or a "fellow-traveler" who frankly admires Stalinism and advocates it here is not embarrassed in the New Deal.

Last fall Mr. Roosevelt, Harry Hopkins, Secretary Ickes and some others tried to purge some Americans who were not Communists, whatever their faults, and the Communists indorsed the effort.

Not yet, however, has there been any move to purge the Communists. And any proposal to that effect would be denounced as an attempt to discredit a Government elected on the Democratic ticket by a Nation whose Communists boast that their number is insignificant.

Father Gleason Calls Band Boys Future Vallees

Forty-five musicians of the Holy Comforter Church's Boys Band heard themselves called "Vallees and Lombardos of the future" in a dinner celebrating the orchestra's seventh anniversary Wednesday night.

Speaking at the banquet in Sholl's Cafe, 1032 Connecticut avenue northwest, the Rev. James Gleason, chaplain of Providence Hospital, urged the boys to make the most of their talents.

Their loyalty and self-denial in long hours of practice is being rewarded by the band's current success and might easily lead to musical careers comparable to those of outstanding band leaders of today, he declared.

Others who spoke at the dinner, also attended by many of the boys' parents, were the Rev. Joseph F. Denges, organizer of the band, and the Rev. Charles R. O'Hara, pastor of the Holy Comforter Church.

Luxembourg Unafraid

By F. G. Smith, Jr.

Her Neutrality Seems Safe

Luxembourg.

THE GRAND DUCHY of Luxembourg, which would fit neatly into Rhode Island, with 200 square miles to spare, has the enviable distinction today of being the only country bordering the Third Reich which has no fear of becoming another Czecho-Slovakia.

She could not defend herself in 1914 against the German invasion; she cannot defend herself today. Her army numbers only 700 men, so fixed by the Treaty of London of 1839. Her frontiers have neither fortifications nor cannon. Yet last week, in celebrating the 100th year of her independence, Luxembourg was in happy mood. Banners fluttered from every street corner with the inscription: "Mir wollen bleiwe wat mir sind." "We want to remain what we are." Her citizens believe that this wish will come true.

One of the Duchy's leading politicians expressed this belief in these words: "We are safe so long as Europe is safe. Germany, we are confident, has no designs against us. What we do not envisage without misgivings is a general war. Wedged between France and Germany, we could not hope to preserve our neutrality for long, even though it is guaranteed by the great powers. Yet Luxembourg survived the Great War intact; if another should come we might survive that one, too."

THE OPTIMISM of this tiny piece of land in "times of peace" is not mere wishful thinking. The German press has never asserted that Luxembourg should become part of the Reich, though it does say, and frequently, too, that the dialect used by the majority of the population is more German in origin than French or Celt. Nazi propaganda agents within the country are very few in number. Luxembourg has made sure that the 2,000-odd German refugees now within her borders keep their thoughts about the Third Reich well under control. Every attempt has been made to avoid a "press war." Relations with all nations have continued on what are genuinely "friendly terms."

There are two very good reasons why Germany has steered clear of Luxembourg, while continuing to pour propaganda into Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Hungary, Poland and Switzerland. Von Ribbentrop knows, in the first place, that if the Wehrmacht crossed the Moselle into Luxembourg, the French army would do the same. He also knows that the propaganda ministry would have too difficult a time in trying to explain such a possible aggression. With Memel, it was return to the Reich of several hundred thousand genuine Germans.

With Bohemia and Moravia, it was Germany's "historical claim" to the provinces. But there are only a few thousand Germans in Luxembourg, and history cannot be relied on for aid. In its uncertain and troubled past, Luxembourg has been the property of Louis XIV, Spain, Austria, the Netherlands and Belgium. Her only past connection with Germany, of any importance, was her entrance into the famous Zollverein in 1842.

Today the duchy is joined in customs and border regulations with Belgium. The Netherlands represent her where she does not have her own diplomatic agents. In all other matters, she is as independent as the Treaty of London intended she should be.

LUXEMBOURG is a constitutional monarchy, sure of her democratic traditions. The House of Nassau, personified in Grand Duchess Charlotte, rules; the prince consort is Prince Felix of Bourbon-Parma, brother of former Empress Zita of Austria; the heir is the 19-year-old Prince Jean, a tall, dark-headed handsome boy Despite all this royal blood and despite the fact that the Grand Duchess can suggest legislation of any character, it is the Chamber of Deputies which says yes and no. There is universal suffrage for all persons of 21 years of age.

In times when suppression of political parties is a common occurence of the day, Luxembourg gives freedom of thought and action to all. If a visitor of a citizen wants to talk to the minister of foreign affairs, he has only to pick up the telephone and dial the number. Luxembourg practices what it preaches.

In the east and south the land is as beautiful as it is peaceful, a series of gentle slopes of many colors, a picturesque illustration of the statistic that 50 per cent of her 2,600 square kilometers are under cultivation. In the north and west it is quite the opposite—a less noisy and less grimy but equally busy Pittsburgh. Tiny as she is, Luxembourg ranks seventh among the nations of the world in iron ore production, giving up an average of 8,000,000 tons a year. Belgian and French capital have replaced German capital since the World War in this mining, and likewise in the production of 2,500,000 tons of steel which every year are pressed in her great mills. But here industry and strife are not synonymous. Wages are high and strikes are scarce.

IN ALMOST every aspect of her daily life, the Duchy, hangover though she may be from the days when knights were bold, enjoys a serenity which larger states and empires cannot claim. Along with San Marino, Monaco and Liechtenstein, it sits on the sidelines, lets other nations fight their wars for power, and ends up no more disturbed than at the beginning.

Education Is Theme

"The Stake of Education in Democracy with Special Reference to Minorities" will be the theme of an open forum discussion sponsored by the Howard University Teachers' Union in Douglass Hall at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Jermone Davis, president of the American Federation of Teachers; Caroline Ware, of American University, and Percy A. Robert, of Catholic University, will speak.

Mgr. Ryan to Speak At Parley Here

Mgr. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, will be the principal speaker at the National Emergency Conference to Combat Repressive Legislation to be held at the Raleigh Hotel tomorrow and Sunday.

More than 200 delegates for 150 organizations are expected at the meeting to formulate "a course of action against 70 measures now before Congress which are directed against aliens living in the United States."

Other speakers will include Dr. Harold C. Urey, Nobel Prize physicist; Senator James E. Murray, of Montana, and John Brophy, director of the Congress for Industrial Organization.

Economic Problems To Be Aired at Session

Economic problems which arise from population changes will be studied at a two-day symposium arranged by the Population Association of America and the National Economic and Social Planning Association, opening at 2 p. m. today in the Hay-Adams House.

Speakers for the opening session are A. Ford Hinrichs and Faith M. Williams, of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; Dr. T. J. Woofter, jr., Works Progress Administration, and Prof. James G. Evans, jr., of the University of North Carolina.

Labor Parley Ray Of Light

By Ernest K. Lindley

A. F. L. More Amenable

AS THIS is written it is too early to prophesy whether anything will eventually come out of the peace conference into which the American Federation of Labor and the National Labor Relations Board suddenly entered on Tuesday.

As Joseph Padway, A. F. of L. counsel, approached the water bubbler after testifying before the Senate Labor Committee Tuesday morning, Nathan Witt, secretary of the N. L. R. B., addressed a jocular remark to him. Mr. Padway seized this opening to suggest that they sit down and talk over their differences. Charles Fahy, chief counsel to the N. L. R. B., asked Mr. Padway if he were in earnest in his suggestion. Mr. Padway said that he was. Mr. Fahy said he would see what could be done. The N. L. R. B., with the encouragement of Senator Elbert D. Thomas, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee, told Mr. Fahy to go ahead and see what could be worked out across the conference table.

The initiative thus taken by Mr. Padway suggests that the A. F. of L. is not altogether happy about its present position as the leader of the attack on a law and an agency which represent the principal gain of organized labor under the Roosevelt Administration.

A. F. L. Aims Seen Strengthening Itself

JOHN L. LEWIS has openly accused Mr. Padway of working in collaboration with employer organizations whose interest in the preservation of unionism and collective bargaining is open to serious doubt, to say the least. Actually the amendments which the A. F. of L. most earnestly desires are not of much benefit to the employer group, except as they would strengthen the A. F. of L. in its feud with the C. I. O. Nor are they of much interest to the general public. They are chiefly special legislation in behalf of the A. F. of L.

The N. L. R. B., moreover, has strengthened its own position in Congress during the last few weeks. The testimony of Chairman Madden and Mr. Fahy, the board's chief counsel, made a favorable impression on the Senate Labor Committee. They took complaints about the law and the board case by case and point by point, and when they had finished the opposition was badly riddled. The board's position was improved also by the appointment to it of William Leiserson, a man who has won the confidence of all branches of labor and of the employers with whom he has come in contact in a long career as a mediator and arbiter.

Talks Emphasized As 'Exploratory'

IN THE SENATE the demand for amending the N. L. R. A. has diminished, but there is no assurance that the Senate would not bestir itself and join in approval if the House took the initiative. In the House there is still plenty of active demand for doing something about the matter. It is traceable partly to pressure from the A. F. of L. and partly to the feeling that the board and the act have lost public confidence.

Many of the Democratic members are reported to feel that unless they vote for amendments of some kind to the N. L. R. A., they will be left in the uncomfortable position of defending the board and the act in toto in the 1940 election. The A. F. of L. knows that. It knows also that a great many Democrats in Congress and in the Administration are eager to see its quarrel with the N. L. R. B. patched up.

Thus the fact that Mr. Padway sought a peace conference with the N. L. R. B. did not indicate that the A. F. of L. was ready to capitulate. The talks, it was emphasized on both sides, were purely exploratory. Clearly the A. F. of L. is willing to waive its demand that the board be reconstituted with five men. Unquestionably the board could afford to accept most of the minor procedural amendments proposed by the A. F. of L.

A. F. L. Feared Less By The Employers

THE MAIN AIMS of the A. F. of L. seem to be two in number: better protection for crafts as units for collective bargaining, and assurance that contracts between A. F. of L. unions and employers are not set aside or ignored by the N. L. R. B. The board has set aside several A. F. of L. contracts—and one C. I. O. contract—on the ground that the employes were not afforded a free opportunity to choose their own unions. Unquestionably a great many employers fear the A. F. of L. less than the C. I. O. The A. F. of L. evidently feels it is entitled to make use of that preference, even though the first purpose of the National Labor Relations Act is to keep employers from interfering in any way with the choice of representatives for collective bargaining by their employes.

On the question of craft units the N. L. R. B. usually has sided with the A. F. of L., but it objects to writing into law a fixed rule. It is hard to see how to meet the A. F. of L. demand that its contracts be regarded as inviolable, regardless of how they were obtained, without undermining the whole National Labor Relations Act.

The first two sessions of the peace conference revealed that the N. L. R. B. was unwilling to make a quick deal on the terms suggested by the A. F. of L. Both parties are inured to hard fighting, and nobody would be surprised if the peace conference blew up and they went on slugging each other in the halls of Congress.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

A Social Inventor

SOME TIME AGO, Mr. Frank Hoess who, together with three brothers, runs a machine-tool industry in Hammond, Ind., became interested in housing. Having a little money of his own, he proceeded to do something about it.

What Mr. Hoess has done is interesting, but the process of his thought, which led him to do just what he has done, is even more interesting. For Mr. Hoess began by considering a specific problem and he started his thinking process by contemplating not the ideal house but the actual client for whom the house was to be built.

Mr. Hoess wanted to build houses for working men. So he first of all took into account the economic, social, and psychological facts concerning working men. He totaled up on the ledger of his mind the assets and liabilities of working men as buyers of houses.

FIRST OF ALL, he argued, a working man is a man with no savings and no assured income whatsoever. If he has a savings he is an exception. Working men do not save except to pay for something specific. The working man is employed by the hour or the day or the week. He has no annual income. If he is employed full time—Mr. Hoess was considering workers in Gary and Hammond, Ind.—He earns from $25 to $30 a week, on an average, but he may be at any moment employed on half time, or part time, or not at all.

Therefore, argued Mrs. Hoess, no worker under present conditions—and Mr. Hoess was not arguing about the conditions, he was just thinking about housing to meet the conditions—therefore, no worker can justly be held to any rigidly fixed charges whatsoever, since he has no guaranteed income for even a year ahead.

What assets has the worker got? Mr. Hoess argued in his mind. Let's not worry whether they are the kind of assets usually entered on ledgers:

Well, he has time. He has more time than any worker has ever had in history. If he is fully employed he works—in that region—a 40-hour week. That means that he has leisure. Leisure-time activity, he ruminated, consists in doing something you want to do which you aren't compelled to do.

WHAT ELSE has the worker got? Usually, skillful hands. He is a man accustomed to using his hands, and is clever with them. What else has he? Transportation. Either he has some kind of a car, or his neighbors and friends have, or there is a bus line near by, or other means of collective transportation. He doesn't need to live shoved up against the factory.

What does he want? Hoess asked himself.

He does not want to be in debt, burdened with a greater debt than he can see the end of. He doesn't want to mortgage his life for 30 or 40 years. He does want a decent home for his children in a decent community. He wants to own property. (Mr. Hoess is convinced that the passion to own property is a basic human passion.) He wants that property to bring him in something as well as cost him something. He doesn't want to get something for nothing, and he has no respect for or trust in anybody who offers him something for nothing. He wants security.

Mr. Hoess now proceeded to meet the demands of a market of workmen inside the actual conditions of their lives. Halfway between Gary and Hammond he began putting up houses on farm land which was along a main highroad with a bus line. The property is 15 miles from either industrial center, so he didn't have to pay for existing social increment. He laid out the land in plots—and each plot is one acre large.

MR. HOESS argues that if a man has an acre of land he can get something from it. He can grow vegetables, small fruits, chickens or rabbits. Mr. Hoess is of German origin, and he shares the German passion for land; he thinks that every normal human being wants to have a piece of land to call his own, and that its mere possession gives him a psychological feeling of security. Mr. Hoess did not landscape the acres. He planted one fruit tree on every one—just to grow on.

If a man is earning, in good times, $25 to $30 a week, all he can afford to pay for a house is from $1,000 ot $2,500, Mr. Hoess decided. Anybody who sells him a house costing more is selling him a gold brick. Sooner or later he is going to default and lose his equity.

At this price you cannot afford to offer a very luxurious dwelling, but you can offer something better than the worker has ever had—and Mr. Hoess is a realist. So he built "basic houses." The $1,600 house is firmly built of steel siding and roofing of wood—he is still experimenting to see which is better—it contains a kitchen, a living room, two bedrooms, a small room for a bath, but without the fixtures; a chemical toilet and an unfinished attic in which other rooms can be built.

It is not painted nor is the interior decorated.

It has a small furnace and is wired for electricity, but has no fixtures.

MR. HOESS reckons that the owner of the house can do these things himself—the painting, the installation of fixtures, and that, given the place to put it and water in the house, he will even, when he wants it enough, get himself a bathroom.

And it turns out that he is right. The houses are all painted, and painted with exceptional attractiveness, each man to his taste, with some regard for the whole effect.

Papa buys some electric fixtures somewhere—maybe out of an old house or maybe from a mail-order house, and likes them that much better. He finishes up the rooms in his spare time, with the aid of his wife. Most of the houses have window boxes. He actually likes his house better because it represents some of his own labor.

When it comes to paying for the house Mr. Hoess is highly unorthodox. He charges 6 per cent interest on the investment, but a real 6 per cent, not a gyp 6 per cent.

It is adjusted month by month, with every payment on amortization.

Mr. Hoess would like his customers to be able ot put down a couple of hundred dollars as a first payment, but he has sold plenty of houses to men who didn't have a cent for a first payment.

HE RECKONS that the buyer would normally spend about a quarter of his income for rent, so he figures interest, taxes and amortization on this basis.

But Mr. Hoess doesn't believe that a man can be paying for a house if he hasn't any income or that he can pay as much if he is working half time as if he is working full.

So if the buyer's wages are reduced, Mr. Hoess automatically reduces the charges on the house in exact proportion. And if he has no income at all, Mr. Hoess suspends ALL payments on the house.

Crazy? Not at all, argues Mr. Hoess. Good business. Turnover is death in the real estate business. People who know the house belongs to them no matter what happens take excellent care of it. "My money might as well be setting in those houses as in a bank," says this queer capitalist. (I have known him even to suspend all payments until a man paid for his wife's confinement. "A worker can't pay for a baby and pay for his house at the same time. If he has a baby, he'll care more about the house.")

If you want to make Mr. Hoess mad, call him a philanthropist. He insists that he built these houses to make money, that he is making a good 6 per cent on his investment, and that that is his sole interest in the whole venture.

HE SAYS he wants to keep his customers; that if men know that they have a home in which is invested not only part of their income, but part of their labor, if they have gardens from which they can get part of their food, they will hold on, not become discouraged at the first layoff, and the houses will get paid for in the end.

When the houses are paid for or the debt reduced to a certain point, Mr. Hoess will enlarge and improve the house if the owner wants it. He will build him a garage if the owner hasn't already built it himself, or add a wing, or put in a bathroom. But at no time must he debt be above the original limit.

One owner's wife had a pantry full of canned corn, string beans and peas. She said she'd figured that they'd never paid anything so far on the house at all, because whatever they'd paid had been compensated by what they'd grown.

THIS ECCENTRIC real estate man says that the difficulty with a scheme like this is not with organized labor. It's with the real estate interests. Most real estate men, he says, don't care a hoot whether the customer can ever pay for the house he buys or not. The seller is interested only in his commission. The builder has never designed for a specific market governed by specific conditions.

Most Government-built houses, he says, can never be paid for by people in the low-income brackets. Either the Government is presenting them with a gift or the Government is going to have to evict them one of these days.

Mr. Hoess is a social inventor. This country is full of ingenious people of this type. Only it is rarely that one stumbles across them. There is nothing grandiose about this project. Mr. Hoess has only built thirty-odd houses to date. But unless there is a trick in it somewhere, he has done some very interesting, realistic and humane thinking.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

'Way For The King And Queen!'

The King and Queen of England will be in the United States soon, and this department hastens to tell them what's worth seeing on the trip, outside of all the World's Fairs. They should, of course, see the White House, the Lincoln Memorial, Niagara Falls, a Brooklyn-Giants series. Other wonders of America include Grand Canyon, "Hellzapoppin," Rockefeller Center and Coney Island.

A Harvard goldfish-swallowing tournament, Yellowstone Park, Brenda Frazier, any big motor plant and the flea circus on Forty-second street, New York, must also be listed among the attractions no visitors should miss.

Jimmy Durante, the Liberty Bell, Sophie Tucker, the Empire State Building and any automat lunchroom during the rush hour are also well worth seeing, not to forget Orson Welles during a broadcast and Babe Ruth missing an easy putt in a tight match.

There has been a great fuss about the matter of curtseying, but this column implores the King not to worry. He need curtsey to nobody except box-office attendants in Broadway theaters, all members of the SEC, the headwaiter at the more notable night clubs, Mayor Hague of Jersey City and possibly District Attorney Dewey.

A word of caution to the King and Queen about the welcoming demonstrations may not be out of place. They may think they are coming here for a rest and a good time, but they are mistaken. The newspaper photographers, reception committees and movie men will see to this.

They are really coming here for a couple of weeks of football, in which the photographers will assume that the royal pair are in possession of a ball which they are trying to recover. The King had better wear his shin guards. A little extra upholstery won't hurt the Queen any, either.

If there is anything in the British regulations that says a football helmet may be accepted as constituting a full dress hat, George had better take advantage of that, too.

They face a terrible ordeal. In Canada they will see the quints. If they are smart they will arrange to send the quints here and they will stay in Canada with Mommer and Popper Dionne.

There are five quints. The King and Queen, even with the Princesses, are only four. And numbers count in a battle with an American reception.

County Bills Are Signed By O'Conor

Prince Georges, Montgomery Benefit by New Legislation

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 11.—An increase in the size and salaries of the Prince Georges County police force, issuance of a $60,000 Georges County school bond issue and permission for Maryland State police to function in Montgomery County were among the items included in the Southern Maryland and Mertopolitan District bills signed here today by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

Four policemen and two desk clerks were added to the Prince Georges County police force. In the same bill salaries for police privates were upped from $1,600 to $1,800 a year. The bond issue will finance a new elementary school building in Beltsville.

Other items were:

Montgomery County commissioners were authorized to print information about the suburban sanitary district and other governmental agencies.

Landlords were permitted to step in and "make a crop" when tobacco land tenants fail to complete their work.

Boundaries of the Silver Spring Fire Department were extended.

Appropriations for the Prince Georges volunteer fire fund were increased from $17,200 to $18,900. The additional funds will be applied to the rescue squad.

A law passed in 1937 providing for referenda on Montgomery County school bond and county improvement bond issues was repealed.

Appointment of a Montgomery County building inspector was approved, together with appointment of an accountant.

Salaries of Prince Georges County beer license commissioners were increased from $500 to $750 annually.

The Brentwood City Council was empowered to levy taxes for refunding outstanding bond issues.

Berwyn Heights and Takoma Park election laws were defined and new voters' qualifications were laid down.

The town limits of Rockville were extended and authority was granted to tax the new area.

Adjoining boundaries of Hyattsville and Riverdale were redefined.

An increase from $100 to $200 annually was made in the compensation of the Capitol Heights treasurer.

The Montgomery County State's Attorney was authorized to employ a law assistant at $1,800 a year.

Duties of the treasurer of Chevy Chase were defined.

Duties of the Montgomery County aid supervisor were defined and limited.

A compilation of the public local laws of Montgomery County was authorized.

New cemeteries in Prince Georges County were limited to corporations now owning more than 100 acres and were further limited to 125 acres in extent in the Spaulding's election district.

Girl Disappears After Testifying in White-Slave Case

A 15-year-old girl witness was sought by police last night after she slipped out of Justice Proctor's court after testifying yesterday against a man and woman accused of bringing her into the District for immoral purposes.

The girl had been kept at a Baltimore institution and was brought here for the trial of Edward Pumphrey and Mrs. Essie Lee Stanley, 27. The girl said Pumphrey assaulted her in Mrs. Stanley's apartment on December 27, after bringing her from nearby Maryland.

train to kill Blair Cupp, 22, a WPA denied the charge.

Judge Smith to Talk At College Exercises

Ashmead, Va., May 11 (AP).—Judge Lemuel F. Smith, of Charlottesville, will be the alumni speaker during the 107th annual commencement exercises at Randolph-Macon College, Dr. J. Arthur York, Baltimore physician, president of the Randolph-Macon Alumni society, announced today.

Judge Smith will speak in the college chapel at 11:30 a. m., Saturday, June 10.

Senator Harry F. Byrd will deliver the commencement address to the graduating class on June 12.

Clipper to Launch Service in 2 Weeks

Baltimore, May 11 (AP)—Pan-American Airways spokesman said today one of the line's giant clippers probably would leave within the next two weeks inaugurating regular transatlantic service.

The clipper will carry mail only on its first flight. The spokesman said a reported delay in inauguration of a British air-mail service had no effect on Pan-American's plans as there is no tie-up between the services.

Parrot Sale, Breeding Banned in Maryland

Annapolis, May 11 (AP).—Raucous and indignant parrots may lobby against a bill signed by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor today when the next Legislature meets.

The bill prohibits the importation, sale or breeding of birds of the parrot family in Maryland. The measure was designed to prevent psittacosis, or parrot fever.

The Graduating Class

MISS CHARLOTTE CLINE, who was graduated all alone last night from the City Hospital Training School for Nurses at Martinsburg, W. Va., heard a special address by the Rev. Dr. F. R. Wagner and was given a reception after the public ceremonies. Miss Cline, who lives in Yellow Springs, W. Va., expects no trouble in having class reunions

Cumberland's Bond Issue Authorized

10 Other Western Md. Measures Signed By O'Conor

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 11 (AP).—Authorization for a $500,000 Cumberland bond issue led the list of 11 western Maryland bills signed tonight by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

On-sale liquor license hours in Washington and Frederick Counties were fixed at from 6 a. m. to 1 a. m. the following morning.

The Governor approved the measure fixing teachers' wages in Allegany County at $1,000 annually for teachers without degrees and $1,200 for teachers with college sheepskins.

Salary of the Mayor of Hagerstown was increased from $1,800 to $2,500 annually in another measure. Councilmen got a boost from $800 to $1,000 a year.

Three other Hagerstown bills signed included changes in election and registration dates, provided the polls shall be open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m., and set the next mayoralty election for the fourth Tuesday in March.

O'Conor approved bills extending the corporate limits of Hagerstown and providing the city with a central purchasing department, with a city purchasing agent at its head.

Other Allegany County bills up the ante to county volunteer fire departments from $4,425 to $4,800 annually, and include mines with less than five employes under the State mine safety laws. Previously mines in this class were exempt from the mine inspection statute.

Capt. Schofield Named Reserve Rear Admiral

Capt. John A. Schofield, who has served in an administrative capacity at Naval Reserve headquarters here for 17 years, was selected yesterday to be a rear admiral in the Reserve.

SCHOFIELD

Named by a selection board to succeed Rear Adm. George W. Bauer, U. S. N. R., June 1, as the ranking officer of the Naval Reserve, Capt. Schofield will become the second officer in history to hold flag rank in the Reserve.

Born in La Grange, Mo., March 9, 1876, Schofield was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1894. A commander when relieved from active duty in 1919, Schofield was awarded a Certificate of Appreciation for his war services. He was again called to active duty in 1922. He is now chief of the maintenance section of the Naval Reserve division of the bureau. The rank of rear admiral in the Naval Reserve was created by Congress last year.

Party Draws Battle Lines; Ward Chosen

Congress Campaign Waits G. O. P. Choice On Monday; Maddrix Is Lone Candidate

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., May 11.—Battle lines took shape tonight in the Eastern Shore's special Congressional election June 6.

As anticipated, State Senator David J. Ward, of Wicomico County, won the unanimous nomination of the Democratic State Central Committee at a perfunctory meeting in Baltimore today.

Ward's name was put up by A. Percy White, Wicomico County committeeman, and promptly seconded by all of the candidates who withdrew in Ward's favor two days ago.

Next Monday the Republican State Central Committee meets in Baltimore to pick its party's choice in the race, with but one candidate —F. Kirk Maddrix, Somerset County State's attorney—officially announced so far.

Still regarded as possible G. O. P. candidates were State Senator Wilmer Fell Davis, of Caroline County, and State Labor Commissioner A. Stengle Marine, of Baltimore.

Va. Episcopalians Ask Medical Tests Before Marriage

Charlottesville, Va., May 11 (AP).—the 144 annual Council of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia concluded busines matters late today, after adopting a resolution urging the General Assembly at its next session to enact a law requiring medical examinations proving both parties are free from veneral disease before issuance of a marriage license.

The council also adopted a resolution requesting the General Assembly to require an interval of 48-72 hours to elapse between the application for a marriage license and its issuance.

At the closing session, the following elections were announced:

Standing Committee: The Rev. Paul D. Bowden, Warrenton; the Rev. Robert F. Gibson, Charlottesville; the Rev. W. E. Rollins, A. R. Hoxton, Gardner L. Boothe, all of Alexandria, and John B. Minor, of Richmond.

Executive Committee, Diocesan Missionary Society: The Rev. W. Francis Allison, of Washington, Va., and the Rev. Herbert A. Donovan, of Fairfax; Dr. Ivey F. Lewis, of Charlottesville, and A. A. Smoot, of Alexandria.

Finance Committee: Lewis Williams, John M. Taylor and W. Meade Addison, all of Richmond.

Deputies to Third Province Synod: The Rev. S. B. Chilton, of Hanover; the Rev. W. R. Mason, Archdeacon of Blue Ridge; the Rev. R. C. Montague, W. W. Beverley, W. F. Powers, all of Richmond; the Rev. R. B. Nelson, of Winchester; W. W. Chamblin, of Leesburg, and Blake T. Newton, The Hague.

Reports were made by the general board of church schools, also by Christ Church, St. Ann's, of Charlottesville; St. Catherine's, St. Christopher's, both of Richmond; St. Margaret's, of Tappahannock; Blue Ridge Industrial School, Bris; St. Agnes', of Alexandria, and Stuart Hall, Staunton.

Guard Indicted In Youth's Slaying

Hagerstown, Md., May 11 (AP).—The grand jury returned a murder indictment against Charles E. Sweigert today and the 38-year-old defendant will go on trial during the present court term on charges he killed Lawson Clayton Delauter, 19.

Delauter was shot the night of March 13 at the home of Harry Eberly, where Sweigert had been employed as a watchman. Eberly said he hired Sweigert to guard his home against prowlers.

Farmer Reports Crows Steal Turkey Eggs

Charlottesville, Va., May 11.—J. R. Robertson, who resides near Zeus, in the adjoining County of Madison, observed some crows hovering near a turkey hen's nest. The crows, he stated, would wait patiently until the hen left the nest, then swoop down, grab the egg and, despite its weight, fly off with it in their claws.

At least 25 eggs have disappeared in this manner, said Robertson, who is now using poison in an attempt to discourage the thieving.

Home Razed by Fire

Williamsport, Md., May 11.—The two-story residence of Joseph Stanley, near Pinesburg, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The volunteer fire company of this town prevented the flames from spreading to adjacent property.

Suicide of Girl Probed as Clew In Torch Death

Sister-in-Law of Md. 'Pyre' Victim Dies Of Gunshot

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., May 11.—State police studied a suicide note left by Mrs. Doris Taylor, 23, today for a possible clew to the mystery "torch death" of the young matron's brother-in-law a week ago.

State Police Capt. Edward McK. Johnson and Sergt. Marlin D. Brubaker came here from Baltimore to confer with county authorities on the latest development in the bizarre case of 22-year-old Robert Christie Taylor.

Several weeks ago, Taylor's charred body was found in the debris of his burned automobile near Rising Sun. Mrs. Taylor died last night, wounded fatally by a shotgun blast at her home, a mile from where Taylor's body was found.

Coroner J. B. Slicer issued a suicide verdict, after officers said she told them at her bedside she shot herself because of grief over young Taylor's death.

Dr. R. C. Dodson, of Rising Sun, former Cecil County coroner who has been assisting investigation of the "torch death," reiterated today his belief Taylor was slain.

William S. Mundy

Lynchburg, Va., May 11 (AP).—William Starke Mundy, last of five brothers engaged in railroad and highway construction in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky, died in a hospital here yesterday after a brief illness.

John R. Perry

Fredericksburg, Va., May 11.—Funeral services were held here this afternon for John Robert Perry, 68, a life-long resident of Fredericksburg and Stafford County. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret Perry; a daughter, Margaret Jefferson Perry. Also left are two daughters and three sons by a previous marriage. They are Mrs. Lester Snellings, John Perry and Menard Perry, all of this city, and Miss Alma Perry, of Washington, and Clayton Perry of Baltimore, and two stepsons, Champ B. Thornton, of Washington, and Heber L. Thornton, a student at Virginia Military Institute.

Mrs. Sarah E. Molesworth

Frederick, Md., May 11.—Funeral services were held here this afternoon for Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Molesworth, 51, wife of Carlton Molesworth, baseball talent scout for the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National League. She is survived by her husband, two sons, Carlton, jr., and Thomas B. Molesworth, this city, and three step-children, Mrs. Eva Summers, Mount Airy; Mrs. Henry Krantz, Watersville; Mrs. Pauline Stickell, Allentown, Pa.

Round Hill, Va., May 11.—James Keith Reynolds, 78, died at his home in Round Hill after an illness of several months. He is survived by his wife; three sons, Neill Reynolds, Henry Reynolds and Roscoe Reynolds of Washington, and one daughter Carrie Reynolds, of Fairfax. Funeral services were held today.

O'Conor Approves 124 Bills, Abolition of Tilghman Post

Loans Head Loses Bitter Fight to Retain Office; Labor Units' Merger and School Survey Authorized

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 11.—Forty-two State-wide bills, including abolition of the office of loans commissioner, were among 125 legislative acts signed this afternoon by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor.

Creation of a commission for survey of the elementary and high schools and the teachers' colleges was also approved. The $40,000 appropriation for completing the State-wide highway planning survey was signed.

House bill 56, consolidating the Department of Labor and Statistics and the State Industrial Accident Commission, was approved. The combined State Department will be known as the Department of Industrial Relations.

The bill creating a salary standards board to determine the wages of State employes was approved.

The laws requiring children to support destitute parents were tightened in another approved measure, designed to eliminate destitute aged from the relief rolls when their children are able to care for them.

The abolition of the office of loans commissioner was bitterly opposed by W. David Tilghman, jr., commissioner of loans, who said the office had saved Marylanders from the abuses of small loans companies.

Functions of the office were transferred to the State banking commissioner.

The omnibus bill authorizing acceptance of bequests to the State and to charitable institutions was approved.

Few of the measures affecting the whole State were controversial, and most of them were not of major import.

The State Aviation Commission's uniform licensing act was signed.

Bills governing the marketing of cantaloupes and tomatoes, and regulating their shipment and grading, were approved.

O'Conor authorized municipalities to incur bonded debt to match Federal funds for public projects until 1941. The previous law limited such bond issues to 1939.

The bill creating a State Publicity Commission, to publicize Maryland sports fishing, industrial opportunities and State resources, was signed.

O'Conor authorized the overhaul of the State commission giving aid to the needy blind, which will define the status of recipients and make for better care of the indigent blind.

Creation of a Maryland State employment service to aid the unemployed, and including its employes under the merit system, won executive approval.

Wicomico County's 20 postmasters in the third and fourth classes will be hosts at the convention, which will be equally divided between social and business sessions.

Smith W. Purdon, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, has been invited to be the principal speaker.

Judge Denounces Pair in Assault On Young Mother

Annapolis, May 11 (AP).—Circuit Judge Ridgely P. Melvin today found Albert McManus, 35, and William Dehn, 27, former convicts, guilty of an attack on a young Baltimore mother which he described as "the most hideous and repulsive crime in this court's annals."

Judge Melvin delivered a scathing half-hour denunciation in returning his verdict.

Music Festival Is Set Today In Warrenton

More Than 2,000 to Participate in County Schools' Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., May 11.—More than 2,000 Fauquier County students will participate tomorrow in the second annual Music Festival at the Warrenton Horse Show Grounds.

Dr. Luther A. Richman, State supervisor of music, will conduct mass singing, assisted by Miss Lillian Rogers, Warrenton school music instructor. Accompanist will be Mrs. Edith M. McCarty.

Features of the program will include a harmonica band of the Bealeton School fifth grade, a rythym band of the Marshall School third grade and a tap dance by elementary grades in Remington.

Recitation of Mother Goose rhymes by first graders, selections by the Bealeton and Warrenton Glee clubs, a scarf dance by Jean Houghton, of Remington, and singing of Puss in Boots by the Warrenton first graders also are on the program.

Also participating will be groups from Warrenton High School, Upperville High School, Calverton School, Marshall Glee Club and others.

Fun, Jobs Urged To Halt Migration Of Farm Youth

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—Better means of making a living and greater recreational facilities in rural communities are viewed by the Rural-Urban Institute on youth migration as major provisions which must be made to keep rural youth at home.

Youths from 37 counties participated in the institute session which opened yesterday and concluded today.

Another proposal was to develop one of Virginia's 100 counties into a test area for suggested methods of reducing the high percentage of youth migration.

Statistics were presented showing that 41 per cent of all rural high school graduates, according to an actual survey, leave their home counties.

Overton Sees Need of New D. C. Schools

He Asks Dr. Ballou To Furnish Names Of Antiquated Buildings Here

The Board of Education yesterday gained the support of Chairman Overton, of the Senate Sub-committee of District Appropriations, in its request for replacement of obsolete public schools.

Senator Overton, after learning that it costs $475,000 annually to make repairs on these schools, asked Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, to furnish the names of the antiquated buildings today when the sub-committee resumes hearings.

Forty-two school buildings in Washington are 50 years or more old, Senator Overton said he had been informed, and one is 75 years old.

Senator Overton also heard with sympathy the request of school officials that money be provided in the bill to draw plans of a new Wilson Teachers College on the site of the abandoned Tuberculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur streets.

The school officials asked that the proposed new Abbott Vocational School, which the House designed for the hospital site, be built on New York avenue at Brentwood Park northeast instead.

The Wilson Teachers College, which the House refused to replace, is in bad condition, the subcommittee was told, and is expensive to maintain because of the constant need for repairs. The vocational school would be better placed in the Northeast, school officials said, because most of the vocational pupils reside in that area.

The sub-committee heard testimony as to the cost to the District of providing free education to children of Government employes or other persons who work in Washington, but reside in Maryland and Virginia.

Out of 2,400 nonresident pupils in the Washington schools, the subcommittee was told, only 50 pay tuition.

Women's Club Elects

Winchester, Va., May 10.—Mrs. Paul Haldeman, wife of a dairyman, was elected president of the newly formed East Frederick Home Demonstration Club, at an organization meeting. Other officers are Mrs. Carroll Solenberger, vice president; Mrs. Walter Norman, secretary-treasurer and Mrs. Newcome, reporter.

Recipes for Tarts, Spicy Drink and Desserts Among Prize Winning Creations Using Rhubarb

The sparkling sextette shown on the wooden serving tray is a captivating dessert, because of the delicate pink coloring and piquant flavor of the rhubarb filling. Diners will be delighted to plunge a fork into the crusty top and are sure to encounter a delightful taste sensation

Tangy Vegetable Long a Favorite As Tonic Food In Springtime

By The Post Food Editor.

RED SPEARS of rhubarb evolved into many delightful creations as The Post readers sent in their favorite recipes for the use of "pieplant." Among those suggestions were recipes for old-fashioned tarts, fluffy desserts especially pleasing to children, an unusual breadstuff, a spicy beverage and other captivating dishes. Mrs. Mary Duff, 409 Park avenue, Baltimore, wrote, suggesting that rhubarb be used as the theme for a recipe contest. Mrs. Duff knew that rhubarb is a favorite among spring tonics, and just that needed tang for the diet, after the winter's heavy foods.

The Queen of Tarts

The world's first tart nibbler must have been an adventurous soul. No one knows the filling contained in the depths of that ancient tart, but it must have been a delightful surprise. Mrs. Frank E. Edwards, 7 Belle Grove road, Brooklyn Park, Baltimore, winner of the first prize of $3, gives a formula to produce a dessert captivating in color, flavor and appeal in her old-time tarts.

Mrs. Edwards

Old-Time Tarts

Simmer 2 cups diced rhubarb, ½ cup hot water, ½ teaspoon salt and 1½ cups sugar for 10 minutes. Add ½-inch slice of orange, with rind, and 1 sprig of mint, the latter slightly bruised, and simmer 20 minutes more. Remove the orange and mint, add ¼ cup of tapioca and 1 pint crushed strawberries and cook in the top of a double boiler for 15 minutes, stirring frequently. Cool and pour into tart shells.

Children's Favorite

The flavor of pineapple takes to rhubarb so naturally that it makes a combination difficult to forget. Spring fruit tapioca was submitted by Mrs. George R. Cassidy, 6711 Forty-fourth street, Chevy Chase, Md., and because it adds a touch of springtime to the menu, is delicious and very wholesome for children, it captured the second prize of $2.

Mrs. Cassidy

Spring Fruit Tapioca

Place 2 cups water in top of double boiler and bring to a boil over direct heat. Combine 1-3 cup minute tapioca, 1½ cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 2½ cups rhubarb, cut in ½-inch pieces. Add this to water and bring to brisk boil, stirring constantly. Place immediately over rapidly boiling water and cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from boiling water. The mixture clears and thickens as it cools. When slightly cooked fold in 1 cup shredded fresh pineapple, or canned pineapple if desired. Chill. Serve with plain or whipped cream. Serves 8.

Ceres' Bounty

Rhubarb was intended by nature to be a vegetable, but the housewife is responsible that it is today generally known as a fruit. However, Mrs. Pauline Crow, 1910 T street southeast, winner of a $1 prize, brings new distinction to rhubarb, by portraying it as an upside-down nut muffin.

Mrs. Crow

Rhubarb Upside-Down Nut Muffin

Combine 1 cup diced rhubarb with 1 tablespoon flour and stew until soft. Add ½ cup sugar. Melt ½ cup butter in a bowl and stir in 3 tablespoons sugar. Add 2 well-beaten eggs and 1 cup milk. Sift together 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt, and ½ cup nuts, chopped coarse. Stir mixtures together just enough to moisten the flour. Cover the bottom of well-greased muffin tins with brown sugar. Add a layer of rhubarb sauce and then fill about two-thirds full of muffin batter. Bake at 400 degrees for 25 minutes. Remove the muffins from the tins as soon as taken from the oven and spread the rhubarb mixture over the bottom of the muffins.

Pink Wonder

A gelatin recipe cannot be neglected when rhubarb is concerned. A deceivingly simple dessert is the pink wonder, rhubarb Bavarian cream, although it is as rich and light as any French creation. The recipe was submitted by Miss Helen Richter, 24 Rhode Island avenue northeast. Miss Richter says that it is an extra-special dessert, appealing to all, yet not upsetting any budget.

Miss Richter

Rhubarb Bavarian Cream

Place 1½ cups rhubarb, sliced thinly and ½ cup water and ½ cup sugar in a saucepan. Bring to boil and cook slowly over low heat for 10 minutes. Stir the gelatine into ¼ cup cold water and dissolve over boiling water. Add the dissolved gelatine, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind and few grains of salt to the rhubarb. Mix well and chill until partially set. Beat until fluffy with a rotary beater. Fold in the whipped cream, pour into sherbet cups or a mold and chill until firm. Serves 6.

Piquant Beverage

Rhubarb outclasses itself when it is used as the keynote for a beverage. We have recipes for it as pie, or its variations; as an aid in baking ham; as dumplings which pop and puff in a sirup bath; as a vegetable accompaniment for meat; as crispy puddings and gelatin wonders, and now it appears as Rhubarb Punch. Mrs. Edith Simpson, 1923 Sixteenth street northwest, the winner of a $1 prize, submitted the recipe. It is most seasonable for the hot days ahead, and just the thing to "zip" if you crave a delicious iced drink.

Mrs. Simpson

Rhubarb Punch

Cut 3 pounds of rhubarb into small pieces and cook in 1 quart of water until tender. Strain. Add 2½ cups sugar, while the juice is hot and stir until dissolved. Add 1½ cups orange juice, 1 cup lemon juice, and ¾ cup shredded pineapple. When cooled add 3 quarts ice water. Serve with half slices of lemon and orange.

Quick Dinner Aid

A quick trick for dinner fare is shrimp stuffed peppers. Remove black veins from a can of shrimp. Add to 1½ cups of well-seasoned cream sauce to which a little dry mustard has been added. Parboil 2 green pepper cups. Fill with shrimps. Brown cups under broiler with tomato slices spread with a mixture of seasoned cream cheese and chopped chives. Serves 2, but you will probably want to prepare more.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Vanderbilt Party for Royalty Gay Event, House Lighted by 1,000 Candles

New York, May 11.

WELL, THE visiting royalties were having too good a time here mixing with the citizens, seeing the fair and accepting flowers from tiny tow-headed Scandinavians. So, of course, society decided it had better step in and stuff things up a bit for the young folks from over the water. Which was done, and in a very plush-pants way.

ALICE HUGHES

The Grande Dame of New York is, by common consent, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt—who still has her town house at the corner of Fifty-first street and Fifth avenue, in the shadow of Rockefeller Center's great buildings. Mrs. Vanderbilt decided to give a party for Crown Prince Olav, of Norway, and Princess Martha. It was the last word in elegance, all right. Mrs. Vanderbilt turned off all the electric lights in the house, and lit it up with over 1,000 candles. In this atmosphere of the old noblesse, several hundred hand-picked guests were presented to their highnesses.

The ladies dug their best jewels out of the vaults for royalty. The hostess, looking supreme in a pale blue flowered lame number, wore a diamond tiara. Princess Martha was a regal sight in white lame and some very fine jewelry. Even J. P. Morgan turned out for this party—a rare condescension from him. He even wore a chestful of decorations.

Some were startled to see genial Jim Farley, head postman, very much in the picture, and seated at the Princess' table for supper. Practically all the ladies present managed nice curtseys when presented to the royal guests of honor. Might as well practice up on our knee-bending now. All in all, Mrs. Vanderbilt's party was the year's topper for true elegance.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Special reports here state it as a fact that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are going to take another pop at a visit to the United States—late in the summer, it is said. Both love-birds are reported fed up with their French exile, and want to go places and do things. Of course, there'll be no court bulletins on this until their Britannic Majesties get back to London from their American tour, if and when.

Losers are now paying off bets on the number of trees among Mr. Rockefeller's octet of big Fifth avenue elms that wouldn't break into full leaf. All have, or a perfect score for these 40-foot trees transplanted to the very heart of midtown New York. I was tempted to lay two or three roubles against the chances of all eight surviving, but my better nature won, and I still have the roubles.

Quick Foods Leave Time For Flowers

Canned Soups and Summer Meats Give Housewife a Rest

The Post Food Editor.

MY WEEKLY market tour began primarily to learn What's What in Food, but I was greeted with such a cheery good morning by the bright, gay spring and summer flowers that I had an unhurried feeling about food and lingered among the flowers and shrubs. It seemed decidedly more important to enjoy the flowers than to concentrate on food. But then we must eat, so I decided to think of foods that could be easily and quickly prepared so that one might have more time to spend cultivating flowers.

To grow flowers is exciting. Plenty of flowers for all the vases and bowls, to be used in big loose arrangements in the living room, desk top bouquets at the office, splurgy masses for the porch, and grown to make picturesque spots for entertaining friends out-of-doors in the summertime. I suspect that the lush smell of grapes and the scent of flowers are half of why people love picnics and out-of-door dining. Now is the time to plat your flowers, for summer is almost here. You can go right through the alphabet from azaleas to zinnias—early blooming cosmos, calendulas, China-asters, Heddewig pinks, marigolds—both the odiferous and odorless—fluffy larkspurs and multicolored snapdragons, too. Sweet peas in luscious colors and petunias, ruffled and fringy ones. There is an entrancing petunia named "Strawberry Festival." It reminds you of the best strawberry ice cream you ever ate. Verbenas are finds when a small bouquet is needed. No one is going to grow all the flowers from A to Z, but pick your favorites and grow them to make the outside and inside of the home more pleasant and gay.

Start With Canned Soups

Building menus is largely a matter of standards, traditions, budgets, diet restrictions and individual taste. There are many foods that can be turned into quickly prepared meals. Start with the canned soups. Canned chicken broth can be made into chicken bouillon with egg, cream of almond soup or a jellied chicken soup. Don't overlook crab bisque for it is a delicious concoction, as is baked bean soup, or the many creamed soups.

Next consider the Egg Dish Recipes. Eggs on Rice with Tomato Sauce is an excellent main dish for a light meal and so are Eggs and Asparagus Creamed. Curried Eggs—with or without mushrooms—and Steamed Eggs on Toast. Omelets are easily prepared and may be varied by the addition of cheese sauce, sausages, and tomato sauce. Scrambled Eggs with Pineapple is a good dessert, and so are the Sweet Omelets.

Remember how good Cold Sandwiches with Hot Sauces are, and the crunchy quality of hot crisp toasted Mushroom or Braunschweiger Sandwiches all made with a minimum of effort. Cheese may also be served hot or cold—pungent and fragrant, in many ways. Fish and shellfish recipes are numerous, both for the fresh and the canned product. Salmon, tuna, shrimp, and crab are all wonderful in creamed dishes or in salads.

Hot-Weather Meats

The meat packers send their best wishes for the hot days by preparing many delicious cooked meats—ham, salami, liverwurst and corned beef, are all among the ones ready for immediate use. And don't forget some of the spicy freshly made horseradish to serve with the cold cuts. Many meats can be prepared with little effort, as Vienna Sausages in Creole Sauce with Rice, Sausage Meat with Pineapple and Sauted Apples and Bacon. Chops and steaks are meats which are at their height when broiled. A thick slice of ham makes a good main dish, and may be baked with pineapple, apples, oranges or potatoes.

Don't neglect waffles for quick meals. Bacon and Corn-meal Waffles, waffles served with creamed fish, vegetables and meats are all splendid to cook in short time. And vegetables may be cooked quickly and with very little effort. Carrots, acorn squash, eggplant, tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, peas, beans, asparagus are all in the array at the vegetable stands.

Chameleon Dress

Hollywood, Calif.—There is a thought for girls of limited income in Jane Wyman's chameleon dress from "The Kid From Kokomo." Of navy sheer, it changes character when placed over such different slips as one of navy taffeta, another of polka-dot crepe and one of shocking pink muslin.

Ready-Made Icing

No longer is there need to be concerned about the icing for a cake. Science now brings a ready mix fudge icing which gives the crowning touch to your cake, and saves a lot of time, too.

Cooks Ready To Back Up Poles' Army

Nation's Women Are Aware of Food's Importance in War, Says Mme. Roman

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

POLAND, which has now become the center of world political attention, has long been noted for its progress in the realm of food and household arts, according to Mme. Marya Roman, wife of the Polish Minister of Industry and Commerce, and editor of Pani Domu, a leading Polish woman's magazine. Mme. Roman, with her husband, is a guest at the Polish Embassy. Yesterday she told eloquently of the contribution the homemakers of Poland are making to their country's welfare—and also of the contribution they are prepared to make in event of war.

"At a meeting of the Polish Household Organization, March 15, 1939, the subject of food preparation, in event of war was stressed," said Mme. Roman. "This organization feels that the Polish woman must be prepared to carry on the production and preparation of food, if war should come, and not repeat the mistake of lack of food supplies for their last war. The subject of protecting food from gas is a subject which is also receiving a great deal of attention. Polish women have housewives' organizations which co-operate with the Household Industry, and our Household Industry was established for the purpose of testing household appliances."

Translated U. S. Works

Pani Domu is dedicated to the family life and home management of Poland, and is inclusive of all phases of homemaking—food, clothing, interior decorating, gardening and marketing are all subjects featured. The magazine was first published in 1927 at Warsaw and is printed bi-monthly. The special food number of March, 1939, has an appealing cover showing a mother bird feeding her hungry young, and aptly portrays that even birds are interested in human relations.

Mme. Roman also translated the book of Christine (McGaffey) Frederick, Household Engineering, and Evelyn (Moller) Gilbreth's, The Homemaker and Her Job, so that her countrywomen might have the knowledge contained in these splendid books. She has been a guest editor on the subject, "Home Economics in Poland," for the publication of the American Home Economics Association.

Mme. Roman was delighted with her visit to the New York World's Fair, especially the exhibits concerning the products for the home. While in New York she and her husband were guests at a hotel where, she said, "The corn muffins were delicious." "I am eating strawberry shortcake, too, at every opportunity," she added. Mme. Roman's brother, August Zaleska, the former Minister of Poland, and Mme. Zaleska accompanied the Minister and Mme. Roman on their visit to this country, and she is so pleased that they too, could know of the delicious food America serves. Mme. Roman confided her childhood aspirations concerning food. "Always I wished that I could have an entire meal of desserts," she said.

Polish Cookery

Poland has a distinctive cookery of its own, which undoubtedly dates back many hundreds of years. Polish aristocracy is one of the oldest in Europe, and the recipes which have been passed from one generation to the next were for dishes that adorned the tables of Polish noblemen several centuries ago. One of the most remarkable cookery books of modern times was written by a distinguished Polish engineer, M. Henri Babinski, whose enthusiasm for food led to the writing of La Gastronomie Pratique, under the name of "Ali Bab." Dr. Poman-Pozerski, professor at Pasteur Institute Paris, Mme. Roman says, has contributed a great deal in the interest of Polish food, and has translated many Polish writings to the French language.

Bigos

An extremely popular dish throughout Poland is bigos—sauerkraut with meat, game, etc. It will keep for weeks and is a favorite for shooting expeditions, being warmed on a fire in the forests. Mme. Roman says that unlike most dishes, it is improved when reheated, and they often freeze it to improve the flavor.

Ingredients: 2¼ pounds sauerkraut, ½ pound mixed cooked meat, including poultry and game, ¼ pound of pork sausages, 1 or 2 apples cut in dice, 1 onion chopped fine, 4 tablespoons lard, 2 tablespoons flour, a few tablespoons meat glaze, 2 tablespoons tomato puree, 1 cup vodka, ½ cup of either red or white wine.

Method: Wash sauerkraut and blanch in boiling water. Drain. Melt lard in pan and when hot, fry chopped onion till brown, adding the flour. Add some of the meat glaze, tomato puree, vodka and wine. Mix well. Put a layer of sauerkraut in casserole. Cover with layer of different meats, cut in small slices and the diced apples. Moisten with meat glaze and wine, and continue process till the casserole is filled. Cover closely and simmer 2 hours, shaking the casserole occasionally. Set aside and use as required.

Nakesniki

A typical food of Poland is pancakes which are filled with all manner of fillings—cooked meat, cheese, sour cream, jam, etc. They are filled, folded over and fried in butter.

Mix 3 cups flour and the yolks of 4 eggs. Add a little less than 2 tablespoons of clarified butter, a pinch of yeast, ¾ int of milk, just under ½ pint of water, and 4 tablespons sugar, 1 tablespoon of brandy or curacao and a little salt. Mix thoroughly and let stand for one night. Before using, add 4 egg whites, beaten to a stiff froth. Proceed as in making pancakes, using 2 tablespoons of butter for cooking them.

Kisiel Owocowy, a fruit juice sweet, is a typical dessert dish. It consists of fruit juice, thickened with a little potato flour. This is added to a light sirup made with sugar and water. The mixture is stirred continuously over a slow fire till it is easily detached from the sides of the pan. It is then put in a glass dish and, when cool, put on ice. It is served with cream and sugar.

Polish Women Enjoy Tea

Dr. Tobey Says An Army Still Marches On Stomach

The dictum that "an army marches on its stomach" is as true today as it was when Napoleon and Alexander the Great made such statements. Dr. James A. Tobey, nutritional authority, says that wheat will be an important factor in the winning of the next world war. The nations having the best food supplies will have the best chances of victory in any long-drawn-out contest, recently declared Dr. Tobey, a veteran of the World War and prominent as a reserve officer.

Bread is the most important component of the soldier's ration, since it provides concentrated food-energy at low cost. In England and France bread is much more widely consumed than in the United States, according to Dr. Tobey, who stated that the Italians were also hearty eaters of bread, but that less bread was used in Germany than in this country. The per capita consumption of bread in France and Italy is nearly three times that in the United States, while in England it is about double that in our country.

An increase in our own consumption of bread was advocated by Dr. Tobey as a contribution to national nutrition. Instead of ten billion loaves a year, we should be eating 15 billion, he said, since bread is the best of our necessary energy foods and is an essential foundation for the so-called protective foods that are rich in vitamins and minerals, milk, eggs, fruits, and green and yellow vegetables.

Caramel Dumpling Is Made Backward

Feathery dumplings have long been favorites on American tables. The caramel dumpling is one the cook can serve with pride. This is a dish you make backward. First make the caramel sauce by combining 2 tablespoons butter, 1½ cups brown sugar, 1½ cups boiling water and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cook gently for about 5 minutes.

To make the dough, sift 1¼ cups flour with 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ cup sugar, and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cut in 2 tablespoons butter and add 1-3 cup milk and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Mix thoroughly and drop by rounding teaspoonfuls into the boiling caramel sauce. Cover tightly. Boil gently over low heat for 20 minutes

Proper Fence Makes Yard More Useful

Privacy Provided By Walks Permits Full Use of Space

AMERICA is about the only country I've been in that leaves her yards open to public view. And there's a lot to be said for that idea. For one thing, it doubtless reflects the fact that we haven't needed high walls to protect our homes, as have the people of most other parts of the world. And then, too, open yards with nice lawns and gardens make a town look so much more attractive than when you can only see blank walls . . . the better sections of an American town look like parks for everyone to see and enjoy.

But there's a lot to be said for the Old World custom of inclosing a place in a high wall or an effectual fence. It gives privacy that enables you to use the yard like a part of the house. Thus may even quite a small plot of ground serve very usefully as an outdoor sitting room or dining room in fine weather. Without an inclosure you would feel too public to use a yard fully. Not to mention the relief of being able to inclose a toddler safely.

We've been looking into the fence situation lately—the stone or brick wall is prohibitive in cost for all but the plutocrats. Wovenwood fence is very popular now—that's that French provincial fencing that looks like small trees put together for a wall (actually that's just what it is). This is available in various heights and makes a most attractive wall at not too great cost. Good metal fences aren't cheap, but they are excellent, permanent barriers which provide adequate privacy if you grow vines over them. Lattice fences or lattice-and-batten wood fences are good solutions of the fence problem. So is a good picket fence. As cheap as anything and very attractive for the right property is the post and rail fence, which of itself doesn't make privacy, but with wire netting behind it you can have vines that do a fine job of closing off the public view.

In a nutshell, a high fence simply means that you'll get much more use out of your yard, whatever its size.

Recipes for Those Troubled With Meat Allergy

By The Post Food Editor

PITY THE PERSON who can't eat meat! Imagine ham-and-eggs without ham, a beefsteak pie without beefsteak! Most of us shudder to think of a diet like that, but there are many people allergic to meats who must needs do without them. In her new manual for allergics, aptly titled "You Can't Eat That!" published by Harcourt & Brace, Helen Morgan has included appetizing recipes to take the place of meat on the main course. One of the most interesting of these is mock nut-carrot loaf. Even if you're not troubled with meat-allergy, this loaf is a pleasant change for the family surfeited on roasts and chops and steaks. It's both nourishing and satisfying, so don't worry that the man of the house will miss his customary meat.

Mock Nut-Carrot Loaf

Combine 1 cup roasted soybeans, or chopped peanuts (if you can eat them) with 1 cup crushed corn flakes, 1 cup grated carrots, 1 egg, beaten; 1 tablespoon pineapple junce, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon ginger, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 tablespoon minced green pepper and ½ teaspoon minced onion. Sprinkle ¼ cup crushed corn flakes over the top and dot with 1 tablespoon butter. Bake in a medium oven, 375 degrees, for about 40 minutes. Serve with a white sauce to which add 3 to 4 tablespoons pineapple juice and 1 bay leaf while the sauce is cooking. Rice flakes or rye-krisp crumbs may be used in all cases where corn flakes are not allowed.

Grapes Garnish Fish

Little white grapes without seeds are an interesting garnish for fish dishes. The same type of grape when made into a lemon or orange jelly mold is also a great fish companion piece. A ring mold of cottage cheese, to which chopped ripe olives are added, when served with seedless grapes and French dressing, is a hot weather inspiration.

Chocolate Pudding Is Economical Treat

A delicious but economical dessert is chocolate pudding, served with peppermint sauce. Cream 1 tablespoon butter with ¼ cup sugar. Add 1 egg beaten and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Sift 4 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder and ⅛ teaspoon salt together. Add 1-3 cup fine dry bread crumbs. Add to butter mixture alternately with 1-3 cup milk. Add 1 square melted chocolate and mix thoroughly. Pour into custard cups and bake for 35 minutes at 325 degrees. Remove from cups and serve with peppermint sauce, made by mixing ½ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon flour. Add 1 egg and blend thoroughly. Add 1 cup boiling water gradually, boil until thickened. Add 1 tablespoon butter and 7 drops peppermint.

Girl Asks Explanation of Man's Attitude in Courting Her for Months 'Without Show of Affection'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What would you think of an admirer who dated you off and on for six months without any outward show of affection? I think I have met a rare type of man. My girl friends seem to have trouble in keeping their boy friends at a distance. What is wrong with my technique? (I believe in letting the man advance first.) He seems to like me very much, but I don't think he has the nerve to go ahead and give me a goodnight kiss. I want to encourage him in a ladylike way. Now I wouldn't bother at all if I thought he didn't want to, but I feel that he does, and I do, too. So what do you suggest?

I realize the foregoing sounds very flippant, but I am serious. He is quite reserved, very gentlemanly and, on the whole, a worthwhile young man (if the late thirties could be called young). I am friendly, fun-loving and reserved, too; and about 10 years younger than he is. He does not date other girls; we are very congenial and, I believe, mutually attracted. I have no complaint to make except that things are moving too slowly. He always refers to my "other boy friends" as though I were very popular, dates me far in advance, and has said he feels badly about not seeing me more often.

Now, I don't fancy that I am in love (I have been in that uncomfortable state several times), nor am I out to ensnare a husband, but I do think we could enjoy a more satisfactory friendship. I have suffered from self consciousness and I think he has a feeling of inferiority. Where most men make me feel ill at ease this one gives me a feeling of importance and poise. Any suggestions you can offer will be appreciated. IMPATIENT.

A Superior Suitor

DEAR IMPATIENT: I imagine that the man—knowing (or, at least, believing) that you have a string of suitors whose devotion approximates his own—pays you the compliment of supposing you aren't on caressingly affectionate terms with each and every man who squires you about; and, with becoming modesty, figures that he doesn't rate any particular favors. He probably thinks (if, indeed, he has given the matter deep thought) that, if and when a girl as wholesome and as popular as yourself permits or concedes a man warm tokens of fondness, it will be only because a very special relationship has developed between the two—a relationship that stands above and apart from their respective social alliances in other quarters.

If there is anything "wrong" with your "technique," it may have to do with your tact endorsement of his assumption that he must vie with a field of equally well-liked rivals for your companionship. Perhaps if you had been at more pains to "play down" your alleged popularity; to show him that he really does rate ace-high in your esteem, he might have been emboldened long since to venture the chaste salute of a goodnight kiss (at least of the hand!) in taking leave. No doubt he is something of a rarity in the social milieu in which he moves, in electing to subordinate his physical (or emotional) impulses to intellectual controls; and this discipline may have become so much of a habit that he would be able to go on indefinitely maintaining his guard while seeing you.

It appears that he is, by natural instinct and training, distinctly superior to the coarsely predatory male who sees in every attractive female a possible conquest, or, at least, a challenge to erotic adventuring; and whose reaction to the existence of rival contenders is the active determination to win the quarry from under their noses. I imagine you have failed to grasp that fact, and have made the mistake of employing a technique unsuited to the particular man—believing that, because he is a man, he must of necessity be like all other men you have known or heard about, whose ardor is most effectively stimulated by confronting them with a (real or fictitious) list of competitors.

The higher type the person, the less readily does he become involved in either social or emotional intimacies. He may have many agreeable contacts, but he reveals himself only to those whose authentic kinship has been convincingly demonstrated. For such persons, six months of acquaintanceship would constitute a mere preliminary to a friendship that was spontaneously moving or deliberately directed toward a mutually significant relationship. (There are, of course, exceptions—as to all rules—but these would be instances of rare spirits meeting and recognizing each other at a glance, because each was uniquely and identically different from the majroity of their fellows.)

My advice to you, therefore, is to accept the testimony of your intuition (or senses) that this man is "a rare type," and to treat with him accordingly. Discard cheaply flirtatious strategies in your social negotiations with him; don't try to stampede, trick or wheedle him into intimate affectional exchanges; and proceed on the basis that you are genuinely interested in developing a permantly "satisfactory friendship" with him.

In no phase of life does the element of time play a more important part than in the development of really worthwhile human relationships. Those of mushroom growth most frequently lack valuable substance and sturdy staying power. Those close associations which mean most and last longest must, as a rule, be the product of slow growth—taking strongly intertwined, deep-thrusting roots in the soil of mutual interests, cultivated rather more for sheer pleasure in the present exercise than with an eye on future rewards. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Shoulder Bag For Beauty Aids

No matter how much you gadabout these days there's no excuse for a shiny nose. For you can pack all your beauty accessories in a smart kit that slings over your shoulder and step jauntily along at the Fairs or beaches. There is a shoulder bag especially designed for weekends or sight seeing. Made in attractive costume colors with alligator finish in white, burgundy, brown or black, it swings casually from the shoulder or can be tucked underarm by shortening the buckled straps. It contains all the beauty making or repairing essentials, including a new starglow lipstick.

There's A Straw For Every Face

Men's Straws This Season Are of Many Shapes And Shades, With Bright-Colored Bands

Heavy Sailor Gives Way to Lightweight

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

Next Monday is National Men's Straw Hat Day. From then on, many a woman will be discovered sheepishly peering through local shop windows, measuring straw brims and crowns to the proportions of her own spouse's features. There has been such a wide departure this season from the doltish old straw sailor (or its only alternative, the Panama) that the women who aid in their husbands' hat selection will have to get used to a new brand of flattery atop masculine pates.

MARSHALL ADAMS

And this change in the hatter's craft is all to the good. For years the American woman has been silently praying that her father, brother, beau or husband would get wise to himself and revive a little of Beau Brummell's flair for clothes. This summer predictions are that men will adopt some of the color and casual ease of women's current styles. If you're one of those women who secretly believe that your husband would look just like Gable if he'd only discard that five-year-old felt, here is a resume in brief of current straw hat styles now in local haberdasheries.

They're Lightweights

The "heavy, heavy hangs over your head" hat of three years ago has given way to a new crop of cool, light-weight straws in porous weaves. These bantams are of pliable, soft fibers and are blocked into becoming shapes and in colors ranging from snow white to sunburnt naturals. Hat bands are brilliant in hue and often gaily printed. The Tyrol and the suavely tropical Bahamas supplied the background for the majority of hat silhouettes. Rumor has it that the wealthy American playboys who winter in Nassau and Jamaica found little dark natives wearing the coolest and most comfortable hats in the world. Civilized versions of these tropic straws will go to Washington men's sleek heads any day now. The perennial Joe College will welcome the dashing telescopic or pinched crowns, and the wider brims for sun protection will be at a premium from now on.

Know Your Type

An astute local hatter, who looks like Grover Whalen and wears his hats with equal dash, remarked recently: "The reason most men look so tame in hats is that not one man out of every ten knows his hat type. This may be due to frequent change in hatters. Open-mindedness in retaining the services of a trained haberdasher will usually result in purchase of a becoming hat for one's individual build, features and type."

Here are tips to remember when aiding your husband in selection of his straw.

If he is tall and rangy, with long, thin face, select a tapering crown with a wide brim. A good choice would be a snap brim in cool Madagascar palm, semisport styled, with natural crepe puggree band (wide hat scarf of draped fabric).

If he is bulky, with massive broad features, select a tall crown and fairly full brim, subtle in coloring and trim. Aside from this casual hat a safe town wear selection for this type and for the older man of distinction is the sennit sailor with a soft braid inlay and discreetly striped band. This should be changed for a black hatband for night life.

If he is a stocky little man with round face and pudgy features, select a wider brim than the one just described, but tilt the brim to break that rising-of-the-moon fullness. For him, a pinch-crowned Panama with a dark puggree band.

If he's a callow youth with perpetual surprise written on his face, give him a rakish Tyrol-crowned burnt straw or a Cabana coffee-colored straw or a natural Leghorn—the brim turned down all the way around, like a schoolgirl's poke bonnet. All of the novelty braids, such as Jippa Jappa and Nassau straw, and the unique trimmings, like sisal hemp rope and tasseled cord bands, can be worn by the eternally adolescent type.

For the Man of the World

If he's a mature man of the world, with iron-gray hair and features just beginning to spread, select a Planter's Punch of loosely woven tropical straw, its curled brim rolled all around like a great business executive's or a Simon Legree's.

If he takes an 8½ head size, insist that he wear only medium-sized brims and conservatively pinched crowns, in a cool, darker shade of felt, so as not to accent a big head. On the other hand, one of the ice-cooled Shantung bakus, blond in color and with a largish brim, is good for men with no head size to mention. Fair-haired men or red heads look best in toasty or earthy shades of straw. But if he's tall, very dark and handsome, see to it that he sticks to snowy white, low-crowned sailors with vividly striped or printed bands for added brilliance.

Feminine Accessories For Slack Outfits

Hollywood, Calif., May 10.—When Hollywood first put on slacks it was a breach of etiquette to have them accessorized with anything feminine. This summer, forecasts Designer Milo Anderson, of Warner Brothers, a girl will be declassee if she wears mannish accoutrements with her slacks.

Turbans are the headgear Milo recommends—brilliant in color and worn far back on the head; slack blouses of heavy fabrics are to be draped or trimmed with ruffles, and chunky jewelry appears at throat and wrist.

Your Figure, Madame!

—— By Ida Jean Kain.

Government Women Should Be Attractive And Easily Can Be

LATEST controversy raging among Washington's feminine contingent is over whether pretty girls get ahead of homely ones in government service. And that—or, so it seems to this innocent bystander—provokes further speculation as to whether pretty girls do not get ahead fastest in any career, and as to whether the term "pretty" does not mean merely attractive, which is something else, indeed! Usually it represents a woman's own handiwork.

In this age, it is highly doubtful that very many women are getting by on their looks alone. On the other hand, a pert appearing woman with one chin instead of two, a trim figure and snappy, "going places" posture, probably does have the edge on her so-called homely sister, provided she has the mental equipment, too.

Attractiveness Necessary

Truly homely women, however, are about as rare as naturally pretty ones. In most instances a woman passes for homely simply because she has neglected her appearance for matters that she considers more important. It is easy for the woman in a business or a profession to do this.

Getting ahead in a career is hard work and a woman may lose sight of the fact that it is her business as a woman to look her best, that the most efficient feminine mind is more apt to be appreciated at its true worth if it comes attractively packaged. Then, too, if her position is secure, a woman may become so engrossed in her work that she forgets about her appearance entirely. Once I heard a school superintendent bitterly wish that one of his most brilliant staff members wouldn't sew herself into a particularly utilitarian jersey dress for the winter!

There is no substitute for experience and the older woman knows it, and knows that the young girl cannot satisfactorily replace her. But don't pigeonhole as trivial such things as diet, exercise, and time to shop for the clothes that do the most for you. The topnotch women executives don't! Some of the most outstandingly successful career women are extremely attractive. They are not pretty. I don't know one who is really beautiful. Honestly, I think that great beauty might very well be a handicap to a woman in business; she would be too likely to rely on her looks rather than to sharpen her wits and develop her personality to its fullest extent.

Massages Help Nerves

These successful women individualize their programs to suit their own needs and that is what you must do. Some of you need to worry less and play more. Some should have regular massage to alleviate the tension of a high pressure job. Others need vigorous outdoor exercise. Any woman who spends eight hours a day at a desk certainly needs counteractive exercise for the trunk and hip muscles.

Those girls in Washington are a smart bunch—they had to be to get there! But this is a man's world and a woman can't get by on brains alone. In answer to one of the questions raised in this famous controversy, "Does it require intelligence to greet a Senator or does it require looks?" we'd say a little of both would help.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay,

To a Daguerreotype

WITH your little black cape drawn tightly across your shoulders, you look out at me from under the white frills of your cap and I think of you as a very old lady indeed. Yet your smoothly parted hair where it shows in front under the cap is quite black, and your face is round and placid.

Yet I must warn you, my dear great-grandmother—your cheeks are beginning to sag, and I suspect that you are getting a double chin. You ought to do something about that! Gum chewing would be helpful and I have just heard of a new throat line exercise that if you would do ten times each morning and each night—Oh, but I forgot! You don't have to worry about such things.

NO, you are a free woman. You don't have to drag out of bed in the morning when you are so weak you can scarcely stand and bend down to touch the floor 25 times . . . and try to reach the ceiling . . . and walk around the room on your tip-toes . . . and roll your head and stick out your chin . . . and measure your waist . . . and take stock of your dowager's hump. You don't have to sustain the shock of a cold shower . . . or do deep breathing . . . or go around grimacing to strengthen your jaws and saying "ming, mang, mung" to improve your speaking voice.

You don't have to spend all your precious leisure moments taking gym lessons, taking fencing lessons, having your sun bath, walking five miles, getting your manicure, having your facial, sitting under a dryer in a beauty shop. You don't have to remember when you sit down to lift your chest and press your haunches against the back of the chair, but you can slump down on the small of your back, let your stomach puff out, sink your chin in your collar bone and knit in peace.

YOU DON'T have to think when you walk "Now am I standing tall, and keeping my chest up, and my hips under, and my chin in, and taking long youthful strides so that I will look younger than I feel?" but you can move stolidly and comfortably along with your old woman's waddle. You don't have to remember during the day to rest your eyes, to relax your forehead, to keep your mouth from drooping, to go an hour without talking, or to "project your personality" on people you meet, as the post directed.

You don't have to take Vitamin A tablets and Vitamin B capsules and Vitamin C tonic, nor compute your calories and your proteins when you sit down to a meal, but can wade into the fat meat and the butterscotch pie with never a thought of a weight scales. No you don't have to keep your figure to hold your husband—what he does is none of your business, and anyway he doesn't know about Reno.

YOU DON'T have to begin planning your fall clothes in June nor your spring ones in November and in between season dowdiness is the least of your troubles. You don't have to know anything about child psychology or complexes but can simplify everything by getting out the peach switch or telling the children their father will "speak to them."

You don't have to read the new depressing long-winded novels, or keep up with the plays on Broadway, or the doings of the people in the movies or in the funnies. You don't have to peruse the disturbing news of the day or have it on your conscience that you ought to do something about unemployment and war. That also can be left to "Mr X."

And when bedtime comes you don't have to do your eye exercises, you lip exercises, your throat exercises, your finger and toe exercises . . . you don't have to put on your cleansing cream, your cream remover, your tissue cream, your eye cream, your skin tonic, your astringent, your muscle oil, your eye pads, your ear pads, your chin strap . . . or read 100 lines of beautiful poetry or go tip-toeing around saying "ming mang, mung," but by the simple gesture of donning your long-sleeved white cotton nightgown be ready for the blessed solace of cool white sheets.

YES, you are a free woman—and perhaps a happy one. I envy you. I look with nostalgic longing on your serene, simple life. But would I change places with you? . . . Never! Not for a minute!

Art Student Works Out Color Harmony in Home

A harmonious arrangement of "colors you can live with" has been worked out in textile furnishings by 22-year-old Gertrude Davidson, art student, at Cooper Union, New York, for a combination living room and dining room with walls of cream-colored brick and light gray tile floors.

Centering her decoration plan around the cream brick walls, a gunmetal gray rug, white curtains and red drapes, Miss Davidson employed a complementary color scheme with red opposing chartreuse, aqua green, sea green and blue green.

Authors and Journalists Visit White House, Ending Meeting

85 Distinguished Guests, Headed by Dorothy Thompson, Have Tea and Cocktails, Then 'Catch That Train'

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

INTO TOWN yesterday for a short stay at the White House, hasty sight-seeing tours, and brief visits with friends came authors and journalists from 30 countries. They have been attending the world congress of the P. E. N. Club, which wound up its three-day meeting in New York on Wednesday.

Headed by Dorothy Thompson, president of the New York branch of the organization, the group of 85 distinguished writers arrived in the Capital shortly before noon yesterday and went directly to the White House, where they were guests of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at a buffet luncheon. Later, they were entrtaind at a ta and cocktail party givn by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer at their home on Crescent Place.

Yesterday's visit was the first many in the group had made to Washington. Others had been here a number of times before and had some of their friends along with them when they arrived at the Meyer home around tea time and stayed until their train left early in the evening.

Jules Romains, of France, president of the International P. E. N. (which, in case you don't know, stand for "poets, playwrights, editors, essayists and novelists") and Mme. Romains arrived at the tea with the French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, and Jacques Dumaine, first secretary of the French Embassy.

The Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan was there, carrying on an animated conversation with two of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Walsh, the former of whom is a noted Irish author with eight books to his credit.

Prince Loewenstein Among Guests

Prince and Princess Loewenstein, who formerly made their home in Austria, were among the guests at the tea, both of them singing praises of the luncheon which, they said, was followed by a tour of the White House. Princess Loewenstein, tall and blonde, said the literary laurels in her family belong exclusively to her husband. "I never seem to be able to get anything I really think onto paper," she said. She and her husband will sail soon for England where he will complete two books on which he has been working for some time.

Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, who had much to do with arranging the Washington trip for the P. E. N. members, was here, there and everywhere at the tea . . . chatting with Mrs. Frederick A. Keep and Mrs. Frank West . . . introducing noted authors to Washingtonians and vica versa . . . and finally rounding up the visitors to depart in time to catch the train back to New York.

Natalie Colby Is Center of Attention

Very much a center of attention at the tea was a one-time Capital resident, Natalie Sedgewick Colby, whose former husband, Bainbridge Colby, was Secretary of State. Now a resident of New York, Mrs. Colby has visited Washington infrequently in the past few years, but many of her friends here have followed her career with interest and particularly enjoyed her autobiography, "Remembering."

Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, found a couple of her noted countrymen in yesterday afternoon's gathering. When I glimpsed her, she was also chatting with Walter Lippmann and Mark Sullivan. Another group nearby included Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mary Colum, the noted critic and wife of Padraic Colum, and Ralph Bates, well-known British novelist, who a couple of years ago went to Spain to fight with the Loyalist forces.

Robert Nathan, a charter member of P. E. N., was also among the guests. Noted as a poet and novelist, he is also an accomplished artist and musician. In a brief bit of conversation yesterday he admitted that writing is a hard job, and that before any book of his gets between covers it it revised and rewritten a number of times.

Will Irwin and Arnold Zweig There

You couldn't take a step on the terrace or in the dinning room without running into a "big name" in the literary world. I sat down for a cup of tea with a trio of visitors who were discussing the White House luncheon and commenting on Mrs. Roosevelt's hospitality. One was Miss Anni Voipic, Finnish journalist, who was very favorably impresed with the First Lady. Another in the group was Arnold Zweig (author of "The Case of Sergeant Grischa") who regretted that he had not planned for a longer visit in Washington; and still another was Alberto Rambao of Mexico, editor of La Nueva Democracia.

Ernst Toller, noted German playwright and poet, was one who lingered on after most of the company was gone; and Will Irwin deplored the fact that he had planned to return to New York last evening and had "to catch that train."

Mrs. McNary Fetes Players

Mrs. Charles L. McNary, wife of the Senator from Oregon, entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the Sulgrave Club in honor of members of the Civic Theater of Portland, who came to attend the current Congress of the Confederacy of American Community Theaters.

Other guests at the party were persons interested in civic theater work. This evening the Civic Theater, of Portland, will present a play at the Wardman Park Theater in connection with the Congress.

Harry Hopkins Gives Luncheon

Honoring the members of the Polish delegation to the New York World's Fair who are visiting in Washington this week, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins entertained at a stag luncheon yesterday at his home in Georgetown.

Honor guests were Antoni Roman, the Polish Minister of Industry and Commerce, and the former Polish Minister of Foreign Affairs, August Zaleski.

Other guests included the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki; Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles; the Undersecretary of the Treasury, Jonn W. Hanes; Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and Edward J. Noble, executive assistant to the Secretary of Commerce.

Miss Harriet Dowe Is House Guest Of the Harllees

Miss Harriet Hall Dowe, of Melrose, Mass., who recently has arrived in Washington, is visiting her cousins, Col. and Mrs. William C. Harllee. She has just returned from Washington, Tex., where a monument was unveiled to her grandfather, George Campbell Childress, author of the Texas declaration of independence.

Miss Dowe was entertained extensively throughout the State of Texas and while there presented the University of Texas with a miniature of her grandfather. She arrived in town last Tuesday and will visit here until late next week before returning to her home in Massachusetts.

Miss Busch Guest Of Mrs. Lyon

Mrs. Gerald J. Lyon has as hre house guest Mrs. Clarice Busch, of Miami, for whom she will entertain at tea on Sunday.

Miss Busch is the daughter of Bonnie Busch, author ond former president of the League of American Penwomen, and of Clarence Busch. Mr. and Mrs. Busch formerly resided in Washington, occuping the home in Massachusetts avenue which is now the residence of Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis. Miss Busch attended the Bolton Arms School here.

Dimocks to Fete Charles Gregory

The Second Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Marshall Dimock will entertain at dinner this evening in honor of Charles Gregory, former Solicitor of the Department of Labor and now professor of law at the University of Chicago.

Additional guests will include Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Jackkson, Mr. and Mrs. John Carson, Mrs. John Garland Pollard, Mrs. Gladys Ogden, Mrs. Warren Vinton, Miss Laura Tuckerman, Gerard Reilly, Jacob Crane and William McComb.

Count Potocki Gives Dinner for Mlle. Eve Curie

Mlle. Eve Curie, whose biography of her mother, Mme. Curie, has attained world-wide fame, was the guest of honor at a dinner given last evening by the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, at the Polish Embassy.

Guests included the Polish Minister of Industry and Commerce and Mme. Roman, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, the First Secretary of the French Embassy, Jacques Dumaine, the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Pierre Benach.

Also present were Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. George Sloane, Mme. Witold Wankowicz and members of the Polish Embassy staff.

Najeras to Attend Toutorsky Concert

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Najera head the list of prominent Washingtonians who have reserved tickets for the concert of Dr. Basil Toutorsky, pianist and composer, at Pierce Hall tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

Sets Date

Miss Betty Klamer has selected Friday, May 19, as the date of her marriage to Kirby Smith, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Kirby Smith, of Washington. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Klamer, of Evansville, Ind., where the wedding will take place

Mrs. Hurja To Give Tea

Mrs. Emil Hurja will entertain at tea at her home on California street this afternoon at 4:30, in honor of the delegates to the Confederation of Community Theaters now meeting here, and players and members of the audience committee of the Washington Civic Theater.

Assisting Mrs. Hurja will be Miss Elinor Lord, Miss Elizabeth Leaf, Miss Frances Brunt, Miss Lansing Hall and Mrs. Edith Strickland.

Tomorrow afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Lee D. Butler will give a reception and tea at their home on Brookside drive and Chamberlin avenue, Kenwood, from 4 to 6 o'clock in honor of the delegates.

Mr. Butler is president of the Washington Civic Theater, host group to the First Congress of the Confederation. Formation of the audience group, composed of supporters of the movement, has given a new impetus to the growth of the theater here.

The Butler home in Kenwood is unique. Designed along strictly modernistic lines, it has attracted much attention, both here and nationally, through presentation by magazines. The spacious grounds lend themselves to garden parties such as the one planned for tomorrow. In case of inclement weather, the reception will be held indoors.

Mr., Mrs. Kehres Touring South On Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril J. Kehres, who were married May 3, are spending their honeymoon motoring through the South. They will make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Kehres is the former Miss Nora Hingle, daughter of Mrs. Nora B. Hingle and the late Judge Hingle of New Orleans. Their wedding took place in St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church. The bride wore an aquamarine frock with navy blue accessories and a corsage of Sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant, Miss Agnes Erkens, was attired in a rose colored gown, with cherry accessories and a corsage of red carnations. Thomas Roney was best man.

Mr. Kehres is the son of Mrs. Andrew Kehres of Monett, Mo., and the late Mr. Kehres.

Sra. Ghiraldo Tea Hostess For Diplomats

Wife of Argentine Counselor Entertains Central Americans

At a tea to honor the diplomatic representatives of the Central American Republics, Senora de Ghiraldo, wife of the Counselor of the Argentine Embassy, who with her husband will soon leave for Guatemala, entertained yesterday afternoon at their apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

The Counselor has recently been appointed Minister to five Central American Republics, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica, and Guatemala; and he and his wife will leave early in June to report to the new station. They will make their home in Guatemala City.

Senora de Zanni Assists Hostess

Senora de Ghiraldo, one of the most attractive of the diplomatic hostesses, wore a street-length tea gown. It was fashioned with a chiffon blouse of pastel apple green, shirred across the front and with a high neckline. The skirt was of navy blue, accordion pleated and very full.

She wore a string of pearls and on her blouse was a diamond pin with one enormous pendant pearl, a gift from her husband and an heirloom of his family.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. William Manger, who was gowned in black with a matching straw hat, and the wife of the Military and Air Attache of the Argentine Embassy, Senora de Zanni, who was gowned in a most effective red and white South Sea print with a turban to match.

Several Notables Among Guests

Noted among the guests during the afternoon were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, wearing a lavender and white print gown and a purple hat several shades darker than her lavender tinted hair; the Ambassador of the Agentine and Senora de Espil, the Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy, Ricardo J. Siri, and the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza.

Also Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; the Minister of Guatemala and Senora de Recinos; the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Castro Beeche, Mrs. Thomas Burke, Mr. and Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, the Charge d'Affaires of the Honduran Legation and Senora Caceres, Senora de Paez, Capt. Jorge Godoy, Naval Attache of the Agentine Embassy, and Senora de Godoy; Commander Olava de Araujo, Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, and Mme. Araujo, and many others.

W. O. Sterrett, Sr., Miss Poole Wed in Rockville Church

Less than six months after his daughter's wedding, which was one of the social highlights of the pre-Christmas season, William Dent Sterrett, sr., was married to a childhood friend, Miss Katherine Poole, daughter of the Rev. Charles A. Poole, of Fairbolt, Minn. The ceremony took place Wednesday evening at the Episcopal Church at Rockville, Md.

The Rev. Spence Dunbar officiated, and the best man was the Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett, of Washington, brother of the bridegroom. Miss Esther Kedney, cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor and only attendant. The bride was gowned in blue chiffon with a white hat and wore a corsage of gardenias. She is a graduate of Barnard College, and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma and Phi Beta Kappa.

The wedding wa a quiet one with only immediate members of the families attending. The couple will make their home on Springland Lane in Washington. Mr. Sterrett's daughter, the former Adlumia Dent Sterrett was married December 10 to Christopher Smith Sargent.

Suggestion for Answering Invitations To Garner Party for Royalty Outlined

TO END once and for all the endless discussion as to how to answer invitations to the garden party for the King and Queen at the British Embassy June 8, here is the wording the State Department suggests: "Mrs. So-and-so has the honor to accept the kind invitation extended by the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, at Their Brittanic Majesties' command, to a garden party, etc., etc." Rather unwieldly, but ribht, according to Miss Wilson, who has been delegated by the Protocol Division to answer the queries which keep pouring in.

As Mrs. James Helm, White House social secretary, once pointed out, it is a "pleasure" to cept invitations from ordinary mortals, but "an honour" where a head of state is concerned. Whereupon somebody piped up, "Accepting invitations from the White House is both a pleasure and an honour."

Anyway, why all the dither about correctness? There is no reason to expect Washington residents to know the right wording for a British King's garden party when one has never been held here before. And the chances are that no one but Miss Irene Boyle, the social secretary, at the Embassy, will see your reply, and she will be too busy to care how it's framed.

THE ONLY MEMBER of the Washington family who works for the Government, Walter Washington will arrive here next week with Mrs. Washington for a stay. He is Second Secretary of the United States Legation at Riga, Latvia, and is a descendant of Samuel Washington, who was the Father of His Country's brother. The Washingtons own Hrewood, a beautiful place in Charles Town, W. Va. Dolly Madison was married there, and Lafayette once visited it.

Another State Department-ite, Walter Thurston, also plans a visit to Washington in the naer future. He has been Counselor of the embassy in Madrid and is en route to take the Moscow post of Alexander Kirk, recently named Charge d'Affaires in Berlin.

WHEN YOU ASK foreigners their favorite American cities, nine times out of ten the answer is "New York, San Francisco and New Orleans." Currently there's a great vogue among members of the diplomatic corps for visiting New Orleans, and among those enjoying the sights there are Angus Malcolm, Second Secretary of the British Embassy, and his mother, Lady Malcolm.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb, are also en route by motor to New Orleans.

THE NEW Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Cabero arrived in Washington yesterday afternoon to take over the embassy, vacant since former Envoy Manuel Trucco left last winter. This is their first trip to this country, and it is said that neither as yet speak fluent English.

The Ambassador's son, Alberto Cabero, jr., who accompanied his parents to this country, will remain in New York to visit the World's aiFr before starting out with his wife to see the West Coast. He will then return to Chile. His distinguished father was for many years a leading lawyer and served as senator and minister of national defense before this, his first, diplomatic appointment.

PRINCE AND PRINCESS Francis Joseph Windisch Gratz have left Washington after a brief visit and will sail on Saturday to return to their home in Paris. As the Prince served as aide to Prince von Stahremberg when the latter was vice-chancellor of Austria, his return to his homeland would not be welcomed with any great enthusiasm. Prince Windisch Gratz' uncle, Otto Windisch Gratz, was a son-in-law of Crown Prince Rudolph, who shot himself at Meyerling.

PARTY NOTES: Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger have asked a few friends in for cocktails tomorrow at "Rinside," their home in Westmoreland Hills. . . . Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton will give an "at home" tomorrow at their New York home. . . . Mrs. John Allen Dougherty wil be hostess at tea on Sunday. . . . And Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom are waiting for their wisteria buds to open up before giving their annual Spring party int he patio of their home.

All-American Musicale Planned For British Sovereigns Here

An all-American musicale is being planned to entertain Great Britain's King and Queen following the dinner for them at the White House on June 8, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday at her press conference.

Exactly what her schedule will be during their two-day stay in Washington, she does not know, she added. The dinner on the evening of the day they arrive seems to be the only definite appointment for which she thus far has made plans.

Meanwhile, her schedule continues to be crowded. Following her conference yesterday, she entertained at luncheon delegates to the P. E. N. Congress and later attended the tea given by the Rector's Aid Society of St. Thomas' Church.

She will have luncheon with the officers' wives at Bolling Field today and receive a group of ladies at tea this afternoon. At 5 o'clock she will attend a meeting of the National Red Cross and present some awards.

A luncheon for the senior class of the Arthurdale, W. Va., school and also a group from a private school in Baltimore of which Miss Julia A. Parker is head mistress will be given at the White House tomorrow.

Members of the Council of the National Society of Crippled Children will be received at the Executive Mansion at 4:30 o'clock and half and hour later the board of the Woman's National Trade Union League will be received.

Mrs. Roosevelt will be in New York Monday to attend ceremonies in connection with "Brooklyn Day" at the World's Fair. Incidentally, yesterday she appeared at her conference wearing her "World's Fair frock," featuring a background of rust silk and white figures of the trylon and peripshere and a man and woman shaking hands "for the peace of the world." The dress, which she wore at opening ceremonies of the Fair, was designed by her niece, Eleanor Roosevelt.

Returning to Washington Monday night, Mrs. Roosevelt will attend the luncheon of the Seventy-sixth Congressional Club on Tuesday, and that afternoon she will be hostess at the first White House garden party of the season. She will hold her next press conference on Wednesday and later that same day will be hostess with the Cabinet ladies to the Senate ladies at a picnic at the White House.

A trip to Arthurdale is on her calendar this month. She will go there May 25, attend graduating exercises at the Arthurdale School the following day, and return to Washington May 27.

Mrs. Lloyd Fetes Texas Friend

Mrs. Bolivard J. Lloyd, wife of the medical director of the United State Public Health Service, retired, entertained at luncheon in the Louis Beize Room at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mrs. Pierre Bremnod, of Austin, Tex., who is visiting Mrs. Eugene Abadie.

Covers were laid for 20 and the guests were all special friends of Mrs. Bremond. Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd recently returned from Texas, where they spent a year folowing Dr. Lloyd's retirement.

Democratic Women Hear Senator Lee

Third Term, Farm Relief, Jobs And Old-Age Pensions Held Major Objectives of Party

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A third term for President Roosevelt and championship of farm relief, old-age pensions and jobs for the unemployed were advanced by Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, last night as objectives for the Democratic Party in 1940 Addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club, he declared that, in the national Democratic convention, "Roosevelt will either carry the ball or call the signals."

"The play will hit the left side of the line, jjust left of center," Senator Lee added. "There may be some on our team wwho will try to make the play go to the right, but I am sorry to say, that I fear they will be knocked down and run over . . . The best answer to radicalism is liberalism. Franklin D. Roosevelt is today saving the country from a dangerous left turn.

"If the opposition were able to destroy Roosevelt's leadership today, this country would not swing back to the right, but it would go further to the left.

Senator Lee launched his speech with the third term as the keynote and followed it through, diverging only long enough to discuss the three measures for which he urged support.

"In my opinion, there is but one argument that might cause President Roosevelt to consider a third term,' he said, "which is that his work is not finished."

Sees but One Argument "Against"

Declaring that the only argument against third term was that it had never been done, Senator Lee cited the fact that a similar argument would have kept Columbus from discovering America and Lindbergh from flying the Atlantic. George Washington's retirement after a second term he assigned to Washington's advancing years.

He met the argument that the President might become a dictator by saying that he had not abused his power during his two terms, which gave assurance that he would not do so. The country would take a chance on a new man's doing so, he said.

"Last week," said Senator Lee, "the National Republican Party under the guise of the National Chamber of Commerce, held its annual session here in Washington and the spokesmen of that organization did their best to make it appear that everything is against the policies of this Administration."

He said of the November elections, that they brought into office Republicans who "in their campaign pledges were more liberal than the Democrats they replace."

Big Tax Program Held Essential

Hand in hand with championship of the measures he advocated, Senator Lee declared "our party must have courage to champion a tax program that wil make it possible to carry out these three important measures. . . . The program will yield enough increased national income to reward our efforts. By such a program, the Government can take money from the mountain tops of wealth in this country and level up the valleys of despair."

Mrs. Claude Pepper, first vice president of the club, introduced the speaker.

Among those entertaining guests were Mrs. Harry Mitchell, Mrs. William S. Conant, Mrs. A. S. Busick, Mrs. Blair Banister and Admiral and Mrs. Edward H. Stitt. Also present were Mrs. Josh Lee, Mrs. Mike Maroney, Mrs. Charles E. Riggs, Mrs. Loren Johnson, Mrs. Henry D. Flood, Mrs. Francis C. Brown and Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Meigs.

Another club activity of the week will be the tea Saturday afternoon, May 13, at 4:30 for the chairmen of the May Fete. Among the honor guests will be Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Harry Blair, Mrs. Thomas McAllister, Mrs. Curtis Shears, Mrs. B. B. Jones, Mrs. Emmett C. Gudger, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. F. W. Weigester and Mrs. Allen C. Phelps.

Assisting Mrs. Edward Meigs, chairman of the hospitality committee of the Woman's National Democratic Club, will be Mrs. Riley Moore, Mrs. Ed. A. Stuart, Mrs. Bates Warren, Mrs. E. C. Berry, Mrs. George Morris, Miss Marie Rogers, Miss Elaine Exton and Mrs. W. A. Hartman.

Those alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. Ben Y. Martin, Mrs. Edith B. Barriger, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mrs. James L. Houghtelling, Mrs. Henry Leonard and Mrs. Kate Southerland.

Club Women Hear Educators

San Francisco, May 12 (AP).—Representatives of 2,000,000 club women were asked yesterday to aid educators in the "baffling task" of co-ordinating contrasting views that "schools fail to keep pace" and that there should be a return "to the good old days when children really learned the fundamental subjects."

Dr. Frank W. Thomas, president of Fresno (Calif.), State College, told the Council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs the public should "decide what it wants done for its children" and "be willing to help make that achievement possible."

Dr. Agnes Samuelson, of Des Moines, chairman of the Federation's education department, said "We must see to it that education continues to streamline democracy. If education is to preserve and strengthen democracy, democracy must preserve and strengthen education . . . which should be free from all external controls, political, religious or commercial."

First Lady Honor Guest at Tea Of Rector's Aid of St. Thomas

Annual Garden Party Held at Rectory; Mrs. Wilkinson and Mrs. Calvert Receive With Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt was guest of honor yesterday afternoon at the annual "garden party" given by the Rector's Aid of St. Thomas Episcopal Church, which she and President Roosevelt attend. This year, as last, the affair was held indoors at the rectory, 1320 New Hampshire avenue, because rain threatened to spoil spring frocks if the guests assembled outside.

Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the chief of naval operations and a member of the aid, provided a garden setting in the rooms of the rectory with a profusion of spring flowers which she sent from the Naval Observatory grounds. There were bowls of pansies, large bouquets of snap dragons in pink and white, and salphiglosis.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who received in the drawing room with Mrs. Howard Wilkinson, wife of the rector of St. Thomas' and Mrs. Finley Calvert, president of the aid, had on one of the most becoming costumes she has ever worn. Everyone was remarking how lovely she looked in it. Her suit was a "World's Fair print," white figures on a rosewood ground, with which she carried a bag of the same material and wore a broad-brimmed burnt straw hat, trimmed with a band of the material and covered with a veil of the rose tone, which was stretched over the brim and hung down in back. Her corsage was of white gardenias.

Mrs. Wilkinson wore a gown of lilac lace and Mrs. Calvert a sheer black gown with lace forming the blouse, with a black hat, trimmed with two large blue flowers in front. Norman Towson made the introductions.

Miss Annie Parke Among Guests

Among the guests was one in whose work the First Lady expressed much interest—Miss Annie Parke, superintendent of St. Anne's Preventorium, mission hospital in Virginia. Undernourished chidren are cared for there and brought back to normal health and strength. With Miss Parke was Miss E. Semple ePttis, who worked there with her for ten years.

Those who alternated at the tea table were: Mrs. R. H. A. Carter, Mrs. Leahy, Mrs. Bowie Chipman, Mrs. William Beale, Mrs. Harry Taylor, Mrs. Albert Niblack, Mrs. Ralph C. Milligan and Mrs. Charles F. McGuire.

Young girls assisting in the dining room included the Misses Ellen Strand, Betty Burgess, Helen Leslie and Joan Lynch.

Interesting Group Attends Tea

Mrs. William C. Prentiss and Mrs. Talbert Lanston, two of the members longes in the aid, were among those at the tea. Dr. Wilkinson was there to greet the guests as was Dr. William Bishop, the assistant rector. Among others in the company were Maj. and Mrs. William C. Bowie, Comdr. and Mrs. Needham Jones, Mrs. Lane Schofield, president of the District Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812; Robert L. Keeling, Mrs. H. S. Tait, daughter of the former rector, Dr. C. Ernest Smith; Mrs. Charles McVay, treasurer; Miss Florence Adams, choir mother; Mrs. William A. Weyman; Mrs. J. Elmer Green, of Philadelphia, who is here visiting her niece, Mrs. William P. Fallon, and Miss Anne Bach, accompanied by her fiance, John V. Hansen. Mr. Hansen, who is a native of Denmark and a noted lecturer, showed his colored films of Denmark for the Crown Prince and Princess when they were in Philadelphia a few days ago.

following the luncheon. Mrs. George Butler, who is active in horticultural circles, will speak on the early botanists and early flower importations in this country.

Hostesses for the luncheon will be: Mrs. Joseph W. Cox, Mrs. John Hanks, Mrs. Carl D. Wells, Mrs. Charles E. Cook, Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, Mrs. Vinnie G. Barrows, Mrs. William W. Diehl

3 Authors Feted By Pen Women

Three authors were honor guests yesterday at the closing book review luncheon sponsored by the District of Columbia Branch of the National League of American Pen Women under the chairmanship of Mrs. Theodore Tiller. The affair was in the league's Crafton Hotel studio with 60 attending.

Mrs. Eleanor Elliott Carroll, of Baltimore, author of many successful novels, spoke on her latest book, "Passport to Eden," which already had gone into the second printing.

Katharine Daiger, another Baltimore author, told of how she began writing detective stories after covered crime news for a New York newspaper during the war. Her most recent stories are "Fourth Degree" and "Murder on Ghost Tree Island."

Mrs. George S. Patton, wife of Col. Patton, commandant at Fort Myer, talked on her book, "Blood of the Shark." Mrs. Patton not only is a writer but also an accomplished horsewoman and yachtswoman. She and her husband sailed their own yacht from San Francisco to Hawaii when they were transferred there for a tour of duty before coming to Fort Myer.

Another guest speaker yesterday was Mrs. Allard Gasque. Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell reviewed "The Middle Window," by Elizabeth Goudge and Mrs. Tiller presented a summray of the program.

Chapter C of the P. E. O. Sisterhood will observe its thirty-third anniversary tonight at the home of Mrs. F. C. Brinley, 1304 Delafield place, with Mrs. E. J. Bentley as joint hostess. Incoming and outgoing officers will be honor guests and representatives of the 15 District chapters will attend.

Mrs. Bentley and Mrs. W. H. Cole are the two charter members of the chapter still in Washington. A third is Mrs. R. Roscoe Rainey, of Chicago, organizer on the Supreme Chapter board.

The program will include music by Ruth Barnhart Mayberry, soprano; Mrs. Gladys Vail, pianist, and Charles Vail, violinist; vocal solos by Mrs. J. DeMorland and a talk by Miss Hazel Nielson. Among Miss Mayberry's numbers will be a Cottey College song and "Mother," by Deane Shure, which she will sing in observance of Mother's Day.

New officers who will attend include Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson, president; Miss Elizabeth Reynolds, first vice president; Mrs. T. A. Hutton, second vice president; Mrs. F .F. Elliott, organizer; Miss Nielson, recording secertary; Mrs. S. E. Weick, corresponding secertary, and Mrs. M. H. Forhman, treasurer.

Hospital Bed Endowed

Chambersburg, Pa., May 11.—Establishment of a $1,200 trust fund to endow a bed in the Chambersburg Hospital, to be known as the "Bess H. Eyster Memorial," was authorized by directors of the hospital. The money was given to the hospital by the five surviving directors of the former Girls Community Camp which was operated by Miss Eyster for a number of years on Tuscarora Heights, near here.

Union League To Get Charter

The Women's Trade Union League, which in Washington has functioned as a committee until now, will be permanently established here today with the presentation of its charter by Miss Rose Schneiderman, national president, who will come from New York City for the ceremoney. The charter will be accepted in behalf of the Washington organization by the first president of the committee, Mrs. Agnes King.

The meeting will be held at The Book Shop, 916 Seventeenth street, at 5 o'clock, followed by a tea. Miss Margaret V. V. Buffum is now president of the Washington league. Mrs. Lorean Steel is chairman of the social committee arranging the tea.

Members of the national executive board who will be here for the occasion are Miss Mary E. Dreier, vice president, New York; Miss Elizabeth Christman, Washington, secretary-treasurer; Miss Marion Burns, Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Molly Dowd, Birmingham, Ala.; Miss Agnes Nestor, Chicago; Miss Mary N. Winslow, Washington; Mrs. Raymond Robins, Brooksville, Fla.; Miss Pauline M. Newman, New York City, all board members.

The members here whose names will appear on the charter are Mrs. Julia Katz, Mrs. Gertrude Evans, Mrs. Agnes King, the Misses Dorothy Bailey, Florence Barnes, Margaret Boulton, Margaret V. V. Buffum, Elizabeth Caldwell, Eleanor Fowler, Mary Mason Jones, Eleanor Nelson, and Annie Stein.

State Officers Club To Dine Tomorrow

Rixey Mansion Inn, Columbia Country Club Hills, in Virginia, will be the setting for the spring luncheon of the District Daughters of the American Revolution State Officers Club tomorrow.

Past D. A. R. officers and their guests will be received by the club's newly-elected officers: Mrs. David D. Caldwell, president; Mrs. Catherine B. Strong, first vice president; Mrs. Donald M. Earll, second vice president; Mrs. William H. Wagner, chaplain; Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, recording secretary; Mrs. Clyde B. Hamblin, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Mrs. William H. Harper, treasurer.

Mrs. William B. Sinnott, Mrs. Thomas H. Seay, Mrs. W. W. Lemmond, Miss Margaret E. Naylor and Miss Mary J. Edmands will act as hostesses.

After the luncheon, Dr. Lida B. Earhart will talk on "The Founding of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution." Miss Eleanor Westergren, soprano, accompanied by Miss Jeanetta Wright, will sing two groups of songs.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

Ruth Atwell, George Washington University Physical Education Head, Is Honored

RUTH ATWELL, head of the physical education department at George Washington University, has been elected chairman of the National Section on Women's Athletics of the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recation, recent affiliate with NEA.

RUTH ATWELL

Announcement of the election came at the Eastern District convention in New York, following balloting at the national convention and at the four other district conventions, all held earlier this year. Miss Atwell, who will succeed Jane Shurmer, of Chico State Teachers' College, in California, will serve as chairman-elect during the next year before taking over the office for a two-year term.

Always active in section work, Miss Atwell has served as State representative for the District of Columbia for the last two years. She will continue a chairman of the organization's special publication committee until she takes her new office.

Miss Atwell is a graduate of Denison University, Ohio, and did her graduate work at Wellesley College's department of hygiene and physical education. As head of the physical education department at George Washington, she is in charge of the only local physical education curriculum which offers a degree to its graduates.

As chairman she will administrate the activities of the entire organization, including the preparation of the official women's sports rulebooks, the setting of standards for all sports, the work of rating officials throughout the country, the promotion of proper and adequate publicity for women's sports through informative radio programs, newspaper and magazine articles, and the issuing of a magazine.

Helen Lawrence, an instructor at George Washington, also won recognition at the Eastern State convention when she was appointed State representative for the District by the eastern district chairman.

Other Washingtonians who are officers in the national section are Mrs. Louise S. Kjellstrom, head of the motion picture committee; Ruth Bartilson, Eliot Junior High, who are acting as co-chairmen of and Dorothy Johnson, Powell, the national softball committee, and Jenny Turnbull, president of the District Physical Education Association, who is national lacrosse chairman.

THE DISTRICT SOCIETY of the U. S. Daughters of 1812, will have its annual meeting Saturday afternoon at the national headquarters in Rhode Island avenue. Mrs. Lane Schofield is president.

THE SPRING MEETING of the Washington Woman's League, of Gettysburg College, will be held this afternoon at Luther Place Memorial Church. After devotions led by Dr. Carl A. Rasmussen and a business meeting, Donald Heiges, secretary of the Student Christian Association, will speak and there will be vocal numbers by Mrs. J. Luther rFantz and Mrs. Harlan Masske. Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard, wife of Maj. Rinard, is league president.

THE JUNIOR ALLIANCE held a benefit card party Wednesday afternoon at the Roger-Smith Hotel, with 100 present. Mrs. Jay P. Conger, chairman of the committee in charge, was assisted by Mrs. Daniel Wathey and Mrs. John Phillips.

A. F. L., Board Can't Agree on Wagner Act

Conferences Over Proposed Changes In Law Dropped

By the Associated Press.

Counsel for the National Labor Relations Board and the American Federation of Labor announced yesterday they had been unable to agree on proposed amendments to the Wagner labor act and that no further conferences would be held.

Charles Fahy, general counsel of the labor board, and Joseph A. Padway, attorney for the Federation, issued the following joint statement:

"Since noon of last Tuesday the National Labor Relations Board has had several conferences with representatives of the American Federation of Labor for the purpose of discussing the proposed amendments to the national labor relations act.

"While there was a frank and friendly exchange of views the board and the federation were not able to come to an agreement with reference to the proposed amendments.

"The board and the federation are advising Chairman Thomas of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor of the termination of the conferences."

Earlier in the day Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, contended before the House Labor Committee that the Wagner act had deprived some workers of the right to determine whether to join a union.

Testifying in support of amendments he has proposed, Hoffman, frequent critic of that statute and of the labor board, asked the committee to write into the act a sentence saying employes shall have the right to join, "or not to join" a labor organization.

"Putting it bluntly," he said, "the question is, shall any organization have the right to say that coal shall not be dug unless the miners are members of a particular organization."

Hoffman recalled that in the current coal controversy, there was no disagreement over working conditions, wages or hours but only over two other issues—one of which was the closed shop.

"Then you want to make the closed shop unlawful?" Wood asked.

"I only want to write into the law the right that everyone recognizes a man should have—the right to join or not to join," Hoffman replied.

Grand Jury Hears Murder-by-Train Plot Monday

The alleged plot in which Douglas Goodnough, 27-year-old painter, is accused of attempting to use a train to kill Blair Cupo, 22, a WPA worker, will be presented to the Fairfax County grand jury Monday.

Goodnough faces charges of felonious assault with intent to kill and obstructing a railroad in the only hearing so far scheduled for the grand jury, according to Commonwealth Attorney Paul E. Brown.

Mrs. Roosevelt Defends Parade for Somoza As One of 'Peace-Time Duties of the Army'

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday brushed aside criticism of the recent military parade for the President of Nicaragua and pointed out that the Army has "peace-time duties as well as war ones."

Protection is provided and honor is shown distinguished foreign visitors by a parade of that type, she said at her press conference. All nations provide some show of that sort when the head of another country arrives, and there is no discrimination between the head of a small nation or a big one, she stated.

She said there was no cause "to be ashamed of the Army" in peace times, or to refrain from making use of it in paying tribute and giving protection to a visiting President. "I'd a lot rather see soldiers out for peace work than for war," she said, "and there's no use in pretending we don't have an Army."

Plans for the entertainment of Great Britain's King and Queen were briefly touched on. Mrs. Roosevelt said the rooms in which the royal couple would stay had been cleaned, and painting had been done where necessary, but no other special preparations, such as change or purchase of furniture, had been made.

There is, however, a new rug on the offer of the second-story hall and another one downstairs. Whether she will attend the garden party at the British Embassy on June 9, the First Lady does not know. The musicale after the White House dinner for the King and Queen will present American artists and all-American numbers, she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt gave over the first part of her conference to Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, who explained in detail the new "food stamp" plan for the distribution of surplus commodities.

Mrs. Roosevelt said this provided a way for families to obtain more of the kind of food that is good for them. She pointed out that in some sections families had starved because relief funds were inadequate.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Detroit, May 11.—Professional football is suffering the growing pains that never did affect big league baseball. Comparatively, pro football is still very much in its infancy, and beset by salary troubles from which baseball, at the same stage of its development, was very much immune.

POVICH

Andy Farkas' threat to quit the Redskins and accept a coaching job is merely the latest of a long series of similar developments that should disturb professional football club owners. The hub of the situation is plain enough; pro football doesn't pay its players wages that are attractive.

Big league baseball, as we were saying, never had that sort of salary trouble to contend with in the days when it was a formative industry. And the reason for that is also clear enough. When, back in the seventies, baseball blossomed as a professional game, and players discovered they could play for pay, club owners could sign players virtually at their own terms.

The early big leaguers, as a class, were graduates of the back lots, with little schooling and without trades of any importance. They could command better salaries in baseball than they could in any other pursuit. In fact, the suspicion is that for many of them, baseball was a buffer against starvation or hoboism.

Pro Situation Is Far Different

But the football club owners must contend with a far different situation. Their athletes, at least a good 90 per cent of them, are college graduates. Intellectually, they are far superior to the early ball players. Jobs in industry and commerce, as well as in pro football, beckon. The wages that pro football can pay in this stage of its development may not be attractive to them, and the evidence is that in too many cases, it is not.

Thus, pro football, until it progresses to the point where it is more firmly established as a profitable enterprise, must suffer. It is no coincidence that no less than four Redskins have given up their pro football jobs to go into coaching or other pursuits and that now, a fifth, Andy Farkas, is threatening to quit because, frankly, pro football doesn't pay enough.

One of the reasons pro football players are not apt to feel compensated is that it's too tough a game. The pay, such as it is, is not apt to be steady. It's a bruising sort of contest, particularly as it is played by the pros who place a heavy premium on beef and brawn, and injuries are frequent. Ill luck on one play can ruin a player's career in football.

Right now, there isn't much balance to the wage scale of professional football. Two many star players are getting big salaries to the high dissatisfaction of their colleagues who are working for a comparative pittance. With the Pittsburgh Pirates last season, for example, Whizzer White was drawing a $15,000 salary. He may have been worth it, but the fact remains, that his $15,000 was probably equivalent to the aggregate wages of the entire set of regular linemen.

Redskins Face a Serious Problem

And with the Redskins last season, the $10,000 or $12,000 that Samy Baugh was drawing on his three-year contract, certainly didn't contribute to the joy of linemen who were making, at the most, $2,000 for the season. It wasn't a very happy state of affairs, either, when Baugh's colleagues saw him collect other thousands on indorsements and in honorariums, because they were helping to make him famous.

For the Redskins the possibility of losing Farkas is serious. The stocky little fullback was to be the nucleus of the Redskin backfield, along with Sammy Baugh. He never did get a chance to show his mettle last season after suffering a badly damaged foot in the game with the Brooklyn Dodgers. It pained him throughout the season, and the Redskins were virtually a one-man football team.

Sammy Baugh was the Redskins' only backfield threat, and last season he wasn't much of a threat. Baugh, like Farkas, was hurt and his capacities limited. But even with Baugh in good health, there is grave doubt that the Redskins would have been much of a power in the National Football League. They lost too much of their efficiency when they lost Cliff Battles. George Marshall's crack that "We won't miss Cliff Battles" deserves rank with the classic quotations. They didn't miss him, any more than Hitler would miss Benny Mussolini if it ever came to a show-down over there.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 11.—This is as good a time as any, what with the New York pari-mutuel racing bill about to pass, to suggest to the blokes who'll run the mammoth business that they must keep the admission prices jacked up to their present high society level if they hope to protect their property from the onslaughts of pari-mutuel Pauline and her thundering Amazons.

CONSIDINE

If they cheapen the show at the front gate, and follow the example of Boston and New Orleans, where the boys have made a race track about as hard to enter as a penny museum, New York racing will be suffocated by tidal waves of pinch-penny lady bettors, particularly a lot of grim housewives who shouldn't be permitted to attend any sporting event other than a bargain basement free for all.

The problem of the lady drunk making a bore or pest of herself in the polite saloons has engaged the attention of some of our best commentators. But her sister under the suet, pari-mutuel Pauline, is pretty much of a problem herself, particularly since the United States went into the horse park business.

Women are becoming the backbone of American gambling. They started on "Numbers," they made possible the upswing of bank nights, and they buy a lusty proportion of the millions of good and bad Irish Sweepstakes tickets sold in this country three times each a year. The poolroom dice game still has a gallant taboo on them, but at the red plush places, where you have to lose your money in a stiff shirt, it's as good as a man's life to edge up to a table, through those barricades of sequin, silver fox and red goo.

But the great average female, jumpy with the betting itch, hasn't the dough or even the inclination to crash one of the formal gambling dens. So she has turned to the mutuel tracks because the boys have made it easy for her to get in and slap down her damp folding money. At Boston the perfect gentlemen who designed the whinny sanctuaries had the ample housewives in mind. They built the cement paths leading to the mutuel windows with a nice downhill slant.

"Girls" Come Early for Trimming

Mabel, Sadie, Emma and Flossie, fattish and fiftyish and about as much at home around a thoroughbred as a spare tire, are an invariable quartet at the cheap and tawdry mutuel tracks, where there is not even a pretense at the sporting side of racing. They are too dumb, of course, to know that their pockets are being picked by the State and by the sterling breed-improvers who run the track only out of the goodness of their hearts. The girls come out to the park in a street car, or bus, or split a groaning cab, with a nice nickel tip to the ungrateful wretch at the wheel.

They come out nice and early, so they can eat their shoebox lunch and spread the garbage around evenly. They chip in and buy a program for a dime, and study their favorite journalistic tout. They wrangle loudly over just what he means when he says that Lepage "looks like best," and that Glue Larkspur, in the same race, "may take all." By the time they settle their fishwife argument the horses are coming out and there is a violent popping of pocketbook clasps, while the sportswomen each dig around for the 50-cent pieces that go to make up the necessary $2. Then they have to pick a daily double, and there is more shrill experting.

Sadie carries the money to the window, because she is lucky. The other girls go with her, to keep her company, and the guy behind the four of them gets a dirty stare when he suggests that they let one belle buy the ticket. The guy finally arrives at the window just too late to get his dough down on the 40-to-1 shot that wins the race, though he has the mild satisfaction of seeing Mabel and Flossie tear their hose by trying to climb over the concentration camp wire fence, to scratch out the teeth of the jockey who rode their out-of-the-money Glue Larkspur.

Fall Back on Hunch and Hairpin System

The girls pretty soon desert the newspaper informer, so Emma rudely borrows a green or a pink card from some male who hasn't the presence of mind to slug her. If all fails they fall back on their hunches, which is the way they wanted to bet anyway, and maybe mix that up with the hatpin system, or the alphabet system, or the my-mother-told-me-to-pick-this-one system. Flossie by this time won't speak to the others because, while they'll readily use the hatpin system, they won't use her oyster-fork-sticking system, which picks a win, place and show horse, thanks to the arrangement of the prongs.

There is something awfully grim about the sight of one of these pari-mutuel Paulines losing her dough. She's burning up her family's shoe money, more than likely, but even if she had the kale to bet, and lose, it would be painful to see the strain on her mug. She wasn't meant to hang around the horse yards, and it is brutal for a State to let a soulless machine turn her into a salisbury steak.

She has no philosophy to quiet her croaking grief when she loses her money, and no sense of decent restraint when, upon those yowling, yelping occasions, she scores on a $2.40 shot.

The only way she can be kept home is to keep the admission prices high enough to shock her shrewish sense of bargaining. And she should be kept out of every track, not only for her own sake but for the sake of a game that is already honeycombed with brazen high-handedness and needs only a few more smacks between the eyes, by the pari-mutuel Paulines, to make the freight-paying male suckers call it quits.

Yankees Gain Early Lead, Beat Browns

Champions Regain Top After Victory In Slugfest; Monte Pearson Is Winner

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 11.—Six runs the New York Yankees collected in the first two innings proved too big a handicap for the St. Louis Browns today and the champions captured a hitting circus, 10 to 8, to move back into first place in the American League.

Each team made 15 hits with the Yankees using two pitchers and the Browns five.

Monte Pearson, who was pounded out in the seventh, was credited with his third victory against no defeats and Ewald Pyle, the southpaw who faced only five men before being removed with two runs in and none out in the first, was charged with the loss.

Every player in the Yankee lineup hit safely at least once, but the most important blow was Rookie Charley Keller's triple with the bases filled in the second.

Ten of the St. Louis hits were divided between George McQuinn, Myril Hoag and Bill Sullivan with McQuinn hitting safely his first four times at bat to knock in three runs.

Capacity Crowd to See Bearded Game

A crowd that will tax the 3,500 seating capacity of the new Arlington (Va.) Stadium is anticipated Monday night when Lou Blue's powerful Boys' Republic semipros entertain the Lakehurst (N. J.) House of David nine under the arc lights at 8:15 o'clock.

Recently returned from a triumphant barnstorming invasion of the South, the bewhiskered and picturesque House of David will introduce in Joe Molet, acrobatic shortstop, Al Schacht's only rival as a barnstorming baseball clown.

Molet not only offers several original comedy specialties but also is famous for his impersonations of celebrated ball players and umpires. The invading troupers operate with the sanction of the original House of David, of Benton Harbor, Mich.

Milnar Hurls Shutout Ball; Tribe Wins, 7-0

Macks Turned Back, Ken Keltner's Triple Sparks Drive

Cleveland, May 11.—Al Milnar, southpaw product of Cleveland's sandlots, hurled the Indians to a 7-to-0 shutout over the Philadelphia Athletics today to hang up his second victory of the season and sweep the two-game series for the Tribe.

A triple by Ken Keltner was the dynamite behind a 4-run sixth-inning outburst which broke up a pitching duel with Bob Joyce, Philadelphia rookie. Milnar, who won a 2-to-1 extra-inning decision over the New York Yankees last week, gave up eight walks today, but has allowed only 1 run in his last 26 1-3 innings.

Roy Weatherly, Cleveland outfielder, had five straight hits. Umpire Bill Summers ordered Jeff Heath, Tribe gardener, out of the game after Heath upset the bat rack in front of the Indians' dugout when irked by Cleveland's failure to score in the fourth.

A Tiger Takes a Tumble as Nats End Losing Streak

Red Sox Meet Nats Here Tomorrow After Poor Trip

Alexandra May Start Against Lefty Grove; Wasdell, Wright Lead Attack in West

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, May 11.—Their victory famine ended by the bountiful supply of pitching served up by young Joe Haynes against the Tigers today, the Nats entrained for Washington tonight after an unhappy excursion into the West.

Six consecutive defeats, brought to a halt today by Rookie Haynes, followed a five-game winning streak of the Nats who played .333 ball in the West, where they won only three of nine games.

Tomorrow is an open date at Griffith Stadium, but on Saturday the Red Sox will move in for the first of a three-game series, and Bucky Harris in that series is contemplating a new pitching experiment on the heels of his success with Rookie Haynes.

Lefty Grove is scheduled to face the Nats on Saturday and in the event that the recently ill Dutch Leonard is unable to accept a pitching assignment, Harris is of a mind to start the Venezuelan, Alex Alexandra against Grove.

"I have an idea Alexandra will give the Red Sox trouble," said Harris of the Spanish-speaking right-hander who has appeared only in relief roles. "It's about time for me to find out how good a pitcher Alexandra is, anyway," he added.

Harris was no little elated by today's performance of Haynes in holding the Tigers to seven hits and two runs. "He showed me knows how to pitch and is the kind of a fellow who can keep us in a ball game when we're behind as well as in front. Haynes may be the best thing that has happened to this team in a long time."

Jimmy Wasdell was the club's batting leader on the 11-game road trip, compiling an impressive .450 mark with his 18 blows in 40 times at bat. Buddy Myer had a commendable .341 average and Taft Wright slugged at a .353 rate. Buddy Lewis hit only .275. Case nosedived to .222 and West hit a mere .111.

Case's mark for the trip is hardly an index to the manner in which he was slugging the ball, however, A half dozen times during the tour he was robbed of hits by third basemen who either caught his line drives or knocked down his hot smashes.

Site of Softball Opener Changed

President Mike Sklar yesterday announced the official opening of the Metro Night Softball League originally scheduled for the River Terrace Stadium Monday night has been shifted to Tuesday on the Seat Pleasant, Md., field.

This decision became necessary yesterday when River Terrace officials announced they would not install arc lights this season.

Tuesday night's Metro League double-header brings together True-Blue vs. Dixie Tavern at 8 o'clock, and Dr. Pepper vs. Golub's Market, 9:15 o'clock. In a 7 o'clock exhibition involving girls' teams National City All-Stars engage Treasury Independents.

William Woodward's American-owned Hypnotist, winner of the Derby Trial Stakes at Lingfield Monday, also received heavy betting. His odds shortened from 100 to 9 to 19 to 2 to make him joint second choice with Admiral's Walk.

Lady Maryland Wins Feature At Pimlico

Jockey Anderson Rides 4 Winners, Including Both Ends of 'Double'

Charts of Races on Page 28.

Pimlico, Md., July 11.—Gustave Ring's Lady Maryland shouldered 116 pounds and romped home ahead of her field in the $2,500 added Carroll Handicap, feature of the program today at the Maryland Jockey Club's turf plant. The Sir Greysteel mare, foaled at the Labrot farm at Annapolis, put on a stretch rush that her rivals could not match and won by three lengths over Rehearsal, running in the green of Mrs. R. H. Heighe. Bunny Baby, E. K. Bryson's hope, was third in the field of seven seeking the first money of $2,510.

A crowd of 10,000 saw Lady Maryland step the distance in a good 1:12 1-5, the same time made by Preeminent when the latter won the Carroll last year.

Jockey Irving Anderson, who rode both ends of the Daily Double to open the program, piloted the winners of the seventh and eighth races to bring his score for the day to four winners. He gave Mantagna a fine ride to take the day's finale at a $10.70 mutuel, with In Memory and Idle Elf following him to the line. In the seventh race, Anderson was on the front end with Miss Pecan, $19.20 shot. Longful, the favorite, and Nancy Mae completed the money bracket in that test.

Long shots scored in the first and second races much to the delight of those who invested the usual two bucks in the Daily Double of "9 and 11." Knightfors, a first-time starter from the string of E. K. Bryson, was the party of the first part and supplied a $17.60 mutuel. Flag Unfurled, the property of Moe Lowenstein, was the party of the second part and brought a $28.90 mutuel. Those who teamed the pair received a return of $351.50.

Marion MileyBeats Dorothy Kirby, Gains Semifinals

Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., May 11 (AP).—Defending Champion Marion Miley won a nip-and-tuck battle from Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, one up, today to advance to the semifinals of the Southern Women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Greensboro, N. C., former national champion, shot a sizzling game to swamp Mrs. Sam Israel, of New Orleans, 7 and 5.

Mrs. Page and Miss Miley meet tomorrow in the 18-hole semifinals.

The other two semifinalists are Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex., who won her quarter-final match from Mrs. E. L. Donaldson today by 7 and 6, and Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., who eliminated Mrs. George Wilcox, of Miami, 6 and 5.

Giants Beat Pirates, 4 to 1; Leave Cellar

Melton Pitches 4-Hit Ball as Terrymen Turn Back Bucs

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 11.—Four-hit pitching by Lefty Cliff Melton and a four-run cluster in the first inning gave the New York Giants a 4-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today and ended the Terrymen's one-day stay in the National League cellar.

The Giants lost no time going to work on Joe Bowman, getting all their runs on four hits and a walk right at the start. The game then, too late, settled into a pitching duel, with the Pittsburgh righthander scattering three hits over the next six innings before being removed for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. The Giants got one more safety off Mace Brown.

Melton, usually a Pirate nemesis, never was in trouble except in the eighth inning when Pittsburgh scored its only run on one hit. After an error and a single put two men on bases, Melton walked John Rizzo to fill the sacks and Gus Suhr to force in the tally.

It was the southpaw star's second victory after two early season set-

Haynes Goes Route in First League Start

Young Hurler Gives Detroit Only 7 Hits As He Ends Club's Losing Streak

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, Mich., May 11.—Rookie Joe Haynes, making his first start on a big league pitching mound, brought Washington's six-game losing streak to a sensational halt today. With a superb seven-hit performance, he pitched the Nats to a 4-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Apparently inspired by Haynes' clever pitching and as their seventh straight defeat seemed about to envelop them, the Nats came up with their first show of batting punch in a week and jammed three runs across the plate in the ninth to win the ball game.

Going into the ninth, Haynes was the apparent loser in a duel with Dizzy Trout, Detroit righthander who was making his second big league start. The Nats were facing a 2-1 deficit. And then, they lashed out against Trout

There was no early evidence of a Washington uprising in that ninth when George Case grounded to Higgins for the first out, but Buddy Lewis opened proceedings with a single into right field. Cecil Travis breathed life into the rally with a single to left that moved Lewis to third, and then the Nats got a break.

Shortstop Frank Croucher, whose superlative fielding had been choking off Washington rallies for two days, made a grievous muff of Taft Wright's grounder, and Lewis crossed the plate with the tying run.

Buddy Myer drove the winning run across with a single into right-field that scored Lewis, and Jimmy Wasdell gave the Nats a 2-run advantage with Washington's fourth hit of the inning, a single through the box which knocked Trout out of it.

And then, in the ninth, Haynes protected his 2-run lead like a consummate artist. He threw a third strike past Pete Fox for the first out, threw a third strike past Pinchhitter Dixie Walker for the second out, and sealed his victory by forcing Pinchhitter Cullenbine to ground out meekly to Myer.

Haynes, unruffled at any time, was mixing a blazing fast ball with his

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson,

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Twenty-one-year-old Joe Haynes figures for the first time in the Man of the Month point awards following his performance in beating the Tigers yesterday. Haynes draws the lion's share of the points awarded on the basis of that game.

To Haynes, five points, because he held the Tigers to seven hits and kept the Nats in the ball game both before and after they made the winning runs in the ninth.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he made three of the Nats' hits and drove across the winning run in the ninth.

To Jimmy Wasdell, one point, because he made three hits, including a double that led to the first Washington run.

To Buddy Lewis, one point, because his single in the ninth opened the Nats' winning rally.

Dodgers Beat Reds, 4 to 3; Idle Cardinals Take N. L. Lead

Brooklyn, Cincinnati Tied for 2d

Camilli's 5th Homer Of Season, With One On Base, Brings Brooklyn Triumph

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 11.—Dolph Camilli's fifth home run of the spring brought the Brooklyn Dodgers a 4-to-3 victory over Cincinnati today, dropping the Reds out of a tie for first in the National League and into a deadlock with the Dodgers for second place. The idle St. Louis Cardinals now lead the league.

Camilli's homer in the fifth frame came after Goodie Rosen had walked and overcame a one-run deficit which Ernie Lombardi caused with a circuit clout in the fourth.

Credit for the victory went to Van Mungo, although he had to be relieved by Rookie Russ Evans in the eighth. The Reds amassed six hits off Mungo and one off Evans. The Dodgers collected ten off Bucky Walters in giving him his third defeat against a similar number of victories.

Three of the Reds' blows made two runs in the first inning as Frank McCormick doubled behind Eddie Joost's and Ival Goodman's singles.

However, Brooklyn evened the count in the last of the inning. A hit, a walk and a hit batsman filled the bases, with Ernie Koy scoring on an infield out and Pete Coscarart racing home on Cookie Lavagetto's double.

Base Running Fatal To Bees as Cubs Win

Boston, May 11 (AP).—The Boston Bees gave a weird exhibition of base running and untimely hitting today while bowing to the Chicago Cubs, 6-2.

They collected 13 hits, including three doubles, from Vance Page, the Cubs' 33-year-old rookie right-hander, but were held scoreless until the eighth inning. The Cubs, who slugged Jim Turner for 14 safeties, sewed up the game in the ninth when Bill Herman cleared the loaded sacks with a triple.

The most glaring of the many opportunities wasted by the Bees came in the fifth when Eddie Miller singled and held up at third base when Elbie Fletcher rapped a vicious drive down the first-base line and was run down trying to stretch it into a triple.

Ted Lyons Beats Red Sox and Rich

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 11.—Veteran Ted Lyons hurled Chicago's White Sox to a 3-to-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox today and brought about the first defeat of the season for Rookie Woodrow Rich, 16 years his junior.

Lyons, 38 years old and in his seventeenth season with the White Sox, allowed five hits. After Ted Williams' single following two bases on balls gave Boston a run in the first inning, only two runners reached first base off the veteran knuckle baller until Jimmy Foxx slammed out his fifth homer of the season in the ninth. Foxx played the entire game despite a severe sirius attack.

The Sox, meantime, collected only four hits off Rich and Denny Galehouse, who pitched the eighth inning. Two of them, singles by Rip Radcliff and Luke Appling, came in the first inning and with a hit batsman and Larry Rosenthal's long sacrifice foul helped score two runs.

Gee Walker's double and two infield outs accounted for the third run in the eighth.

Eric Tyrell-Martin, member of the British polo team, is shown getting a bit of attention from his wife just after being hit on the cheek by a ball driven by Earle A. S. Hopping, of the American team, yesterday in a practice match at Westbury, N. Y., won by the invading British, 14-6. The Britisher's cheek was stitched up. He will be out of play for several days

Georgetown's Frosh Defeat Devitt, 12 to 9

Jim Kiernan Allows But Five Hits as Mates Slug to Win

Behind the five-hit pitching of Jim Kiernan, Georgetown University freshmen yesterday defeated the Devitt Prep baseball nine in a scoring spree at the Hilltop diamond that ended, Frosh, 12; Devitt, 9.

The freshmen were paced by the home runs of Miller and Mylnarski, who obtained five hits together out of eight times at bat. Kiernan was relieved by Bill Dieckelman in the sixth ininng, when Devitt batters came to life momentarily to score five runs, putting the score at Devitt, 9; Frosh, 7. The little Hoyas came back to score two that inning and three more in the eighth.

Farkas Denies He's Quitting Pro Football

"It's all the bunk."

Those were the words of Andy Farkas, Redskin back, yesterday when George Marshall called him over long distance telephone to verify a wire service story printed in a local afternoon paper that he was "through with pro football."

In fact, the conversation turned into a sales talk and after Mr. Marshall hung up the receiver he sealed a long envelope and addressed it to Mr. Farkas at Detroit, Mich.

Early as the first inning the Nats muffed their first scoring opportunity. They filled the bases against Trout with one out on a pair of passes to Lewis and Travis, and Wright's single into leftfield. And they got no results, what with Myer grounding to Greenberg, whose throw to the plate forced Lewis, and Welaj flying to McCosky.

They had scoring opportunities in each of the first five innings, but fizzled all of them. Haynes was stranded after his single to right in the second, and in the third after Wright and Myer singled with two out, Welaj popped to the infield.

Wasdell led off the fourth with a single, but never reached second, and in the fifth, Myer's single was completely useless inasmuch as Welaj hit into a force play.

All of a sudden, after two hitless innings, and after two were out in the eighth, the Nats finally reached Rookie Trout for a run. Jimmy Wasdell inspired it by banging a double into left field, and then Jake Early followed suit to score him.

At this point, with the tying run on second base, Pitcher Joe Haynes, a fair sort of batter, was permitted to hit for himself, and obliged the Tigers by striking out neatly.

For three innings, Haynes was superb on the mound for the Nats. He retired the first nine Tigers in order and it wasn't until the fourth, with one out that they got a man on base. He was Laabs, who walked. But after Greenberg drew a walk with two out, Haynes disposed of Rudy York nicely on a force play.

But in the fifth and sixth Haynes' magic disappeared, and with their first two hits of the ball game the Tigers got their first run. Pinky Higgins doubled against the left-field wall to start the inning, and it appeared that Haynes was over the hump when, on Fox's grounder to Travis, Higgins was run down between second and third. But along came young Crotcher with a two-bagger into left field, and Fox scored from first.

Charley Gehringer started trouble for Haynes in the sixth when he singled to right

1,900 Fans Watch Wild Match With Baxter Loser in 14½ Minutes

Spectators with a suppressed urge to be wrestlers broke down last night at Turner's Arena and swarmed into the ring in a storm centered about the head of the Golden Terror, who defeated Laverne Baxter in 14½ minutes after a "battle of villains" that saw walking canes and ringside chairs sailing through the air.

Baxter, after tossing the 303-pound hooded groan artist into the laps of ringside fans four times, made the mistake of starting to work on Referee Bennah Bortnick. The Terror climbed up Baxter's back and made short work of him, pinning him to the mat for the count.

In the early stages, the Terror tossed Baxter into the aisles, whereupon he returned to bounce a chair off the masked man's skull three times. Thrown out a second time, Baxter returned with a spectator's walking cane and chased his opponent around the ring. They were joined by two spectators, whom Baxter promptly threw back out.

The end found a bevy of wild-eyed customers urging Baxter to ignore the decision and give the hated Terror the works. When Baxter wrapped a towel about the masked man's neck, several entered the ring and began bouncing various objects on the Terror's head until they tired of the pastime and went home. About 1,900 fans watched the harrowing struggle.

In the semi-windup, Sam Stein defeated Rosy Red Ryan in 25 minutes with an Australian whitelock. Chief Chewaki defeated Dutch Schultz in 12½ minutes with a crotch hold. Dropkick Murphy dropkicked Gene Bowman to win in 25½ minutes, and Jim Clinstock defeated Jim Wright with a flying scissors in 13½ minutes.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

Several readers have written and wired us since the Kentucky Derby asking us what about that dream we had some weeks ago in which we saw a horse named Challedon dashing down there first and foremost.

RUNYON

We sense a gloating—note in these messages. A sort of a ha-ha-ha ring. The readers seem to feel that we have had our come-uppance. Still, the only think wrong with that dream was that we did not mention or attempt to define a vague blur that we now belatedly recall seeing in the dream out ahead of Challedon.

To tell the truth, we thought it was just Challedon casting his shadow before him. Now we know it was that horse Johnstown, moving so rapidly that he was just a mist in our dream. However, we wish to state that we have no apologies to offer for Challedon. He was largely a victim of environment.

Challedon is just a big country horse. He had never been around much until he went down into Kentucky. He was born on a quiet landscape in Maryland and grew up far from the city's madding throng. Once when he was quite young he made a trip to Rhode Island, but outside of that and an excursion to Delaware, his horizon was bounded by the State lines of Maryland.

Challedon a Rube

He was strictly a rube when he hit Kentucky to run against horses that had been everywhere and seen everything. We felt sorry for Challedon when they brought him out on the track and he saw that big crowd at Churchill Downs.

He was plainly ill at ease, and they had not helped him any by putting bandages as high as tall boots on each of his four legs. Challedon could see right away that he was not properly dressed for the occasion and this increased his discomfort.

You know how a fellow feels when he walks into a place and immediately senses that he is wearing the wrong thing, especially if he is a stranger in a strange land. He becomes self-conscious and depressed. That is the way it was with Challedon on Derby day. He knew those boots were a sartorial mistake. They were like a fancy weskit with evening clothes.

Furthermore, Challedon was accustomed to seeing around him the friendly open faces of his fellow Marylanders, and to hearing the comforting, homey music of "My Maryland," but there in Kentucky he saw only hostile kissers and heard only "My Old Kentucky Home." Challedon, as he was being led to the paddock, kept twisting his head to gaze at the fellow who was leading him, as if to make sure that this friend was still with him, anyway.

Johnstown Sneered

He stepped high and awkwardly in his boots. Probably never before in his life had Challedon so frequently longed for the tranquil Maryland countryside, especially when the citified Johnstown gave him one glance and openly sneered at him. We could see the sneer from away up in the press box. We think it brought out the inferiority complex in Challedon.

Another thing, Challedon was accustomed to the more neighborly atmosphere of the racing he had experienced in which the other horses had taken it easy out ahead of him until he got ready to run past them. This Johnstown city-slicked him by picking up his heels and running like all git-out right from taw and getting so far ahead of Challedon that the race was over when he decided it was time to run past Johnstown.

The best Challedon could do was to finish second, a Salt Lake City block behind Johnstown, and we will never forget the reproachful expression on Challedon's face as he peered through the haze of dust raised by Johnstown at Johnstown's tail lights. You could see that Challedon was thinking that this was pretty sharp practice.

Mother's Son

We thought so, too, but we got some consolation out of Johnstown's victory in reflecting on the traditions it had busted. For one thing, some horsemen say that a horse with long floppy ears is generally not much good and Johnstown has ears like a Missouri mule. For another thing, those same horsemen said that an offspring of Jamestown could not waddle a mile and a quarter with four men pushing him and Johnstown is a son of Jamestown. We love seeing traditions like that ruined.

Of course the one probably really responsible for Johnstown's ability to carry on is his dam, an old crippled mare named La France, from the distance-running family of Sir Gallahad III. But mothers never get proper credit for exploits of their children, and we notice that sports writers keep talking about Johnstown as just "the son of Jamestown," and never as "the son of La France."

This would be the proper reference in connection with Johnstown for he is strictly his mother's son, if you take the performances of other sons of Jamestown from other mothers into consideration.

Navy Trackmen See a Victory Over Dukemen

Middies Off to Blue Devils' Stronghold Compete Tomorrow

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 11.—Navy track stars packed their bag for a Southern jaunt tonight, primed for a win against the Duke University thinclads Saturday.

Despite the 77-49 defeat at the hands of North Carolina Saturday, Navy Coach Earl Thomson was satisfied with the showing of the Middies. Duke hasn't the all-around balance of the Tarheels, and Thomson figures his charges are due to break through.

Much hinges on the legs of Leon Chabot and Bob Kirkpatrick. Chabot, Navy's only first-rank sprinter, pulled a tendon slightly winning the 220-yard dash. He also took the century against Carolina.

Kirkpatrick was withheld from the 440 Saturday. He also has a pulled tendon. Thomson figures both Chabot and the double furlong star will be ready to go against the Dukes.

The Navy coach was loud in his praises of Capt. "Barney" Oldfield, Navy miler. The Navy skipper lost to Jim Davis, Tarheel ace, in a thrilling stretch duel. Oldfield turned in 4:16.6 mile, seven seconds better than his previous best. The seven seconds was sheer fighting heart, Thomson said.

Peacock and Sharkey Face Test in Four-ball Play Sunday

Rolling Road Scene of 2d Round Match

Indian Spring Duo Meets Otto Greiner, Ed Stinebert; Meyer, Taylor Play Hosts

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Indian Spring's No. 1 and favored duo of Roger Peacock and Buddy Sharkey will face formidable opposition in the second round play in the Maryland State Golf Association fourball championship Sunday at Rolling Road, in Catonsville, meeting Middle Atlantic and State Champion Otto Greiner and his partner, Ed Stinebert, the top team from Rodgers Forge.

It is the outstanding engagement of eight matches, that find District and Baltimore duos opposing in all but one, where Claude Rippy and Jock Olmsted, of Indian Spring, will be heavy favorites over P. J. Winkler and Harry Holland, Congressional's No. 2 team.

The host club, that has two of the strongest teams, on paper, in the tourney, find its first team of Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes, virtually unbeatable over their home course, meeting Max Taylor and District junior champ, Dick Meyer, of Manor. The other, Ernie Caldwell and Gene Bruning, play Columbia's sole remaining duo of George Miller and Martin F. McCarthy.

In other matches, Capital teams should just about gain an even break in the day's play. Manor's team of Harry Pitt and Tommy Bones should win over Edgar Lucas and W. G. Earer of Baltimore C. C., and Louis Fuchs and Earl McAleer, Congressional's top players, will be the choice over Bonnie View No. 1.

Johnny Miller, whose partner from Beaver Dam, Eddie Bean, will be unable to play, will be underdog against Hillendale's youngsters, Johnny Farrell and Paul Hampshire, while Capital Club's last hope, Billy Houghton and George Molloy, will be about even with Jess Dowling, jr., and Robert Jones, of Hillendale.

Upper Bracket

1:05 p. m.—Rodgers Forge No. 1 (Otto Greiner and Ed Stinebert) vs. Indian Spring No. 1 (Buddy Sharkey and Roger Peacock).

1:10 p. m.—Hillendale No. 1 (Jess Dowling, jr., and Robert Jones) vs. Capital No. 1 (Billy Houghton and George Molloy).

1:15 p. m.—Rolling Road No. 1 (Spencer Overton and E. G. Barnes) vs. Manor No. 2 (Dick Meyer and Max Taylor).

Lower Bracket

1:20 p. m.—Indian Spring No. 2 (Claude Rippy and Jock Olmsted) vs. Congressional No. 2 (P. J. Winkler and L. Holland).

1:25 p. m.—Baltimore C. C. No. 1 (W. G. Earer and Edgar Lucas) vs Manor No. 1 (Harry G. Pitt and Tommy Bones).

1:30 p. m.—Columbia No. 1 (Martin McCarthy and George Miller) vs. Rolling Road No. 2 (Ernie Caldwell and Gene Bruning).

Two Golf Entry Lists Close Today

Today is the deadline for entries to next week's two important golf tournaments, the Maryland State Women's play at Congressional and Chevy Chase Invitation.

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne is accepting entries for the women's play up to 1 p. m. at the Kennedy-Warren, and particularly wants the higher handicaped players, as match play provisions will be made for all.

Robert Stead, jr., will close the Chevy Chase entries at 6 p. m. at the club.

Roosevelt Golfers Beat Anacostia

Roosevelt High golfers moved a step nearer a successful defense of their Dawes Cup inter-high championship by blanking Anacostia, 9 to 0, in a postponed match yesterday at National Woman's Club.

It left the Riders with four victories against no defeats, and they need a victory or tie against Western today at Indian Spring to clinch the championship. Waggaman was best with a 72.

Gruver (R) defeated Harvey, 6 and 5; Waggaman (R) defeated Bridgett, 3 and 2. Best ball, Roosevelt, 7 and 6.

Patterson (R) defeated Towney, 3 and 2; Powers (R) defeated Miller, 9 and 8. Best ball, Roosevelt, 6 and 4.

Coleman (R), defeated Lowrey, 7 and 6; Conning (R) defeated White, 8 and 7. Best ball, Roosevelt, 7 and 6.

Hopewell Netmen Win in Semifinals

Charlottesville, Va., May 11 (AP).—Hopewell High defeated Lynchburg today, 5 to 4, in the semifinal team match for the Class "A" tennis championship of the Literary and Athletic League.

The Hopewell team won two of the six single matches and all three doubles. They will meet Portsmouth, eastern district champion, tomorrow morning for the State title.

Individual and double matches for classes "B," "C" and "D," public and private schools, were curtailed by rain. They will be continued tomorrow.

Washington Horse Show Set June 2-4

Meadowbrook Saddle Club Scene of Event For 3-Day Period

By Anne Hagner

With a well-rounded prize list, the Washington Horse Show will swing into action June 2, 3 and 4 on the show grounds at Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Chevy Chase.

F. Morgan McConihe, secretary of the show, announced 59 classes during the three-day period, including events for hunters, open jumpers, three and five gaited saddle horses, Army horses and juniors.

Following a custom that has proved to be successful in past, the committee offers two separate divisions for hunters, one where conformation will be an important factor in totaling the judges' scores, and the other for working hunters, with performance and way of going to count. This those who keep their horses primarily for hunting will not be competing against pampered show-ring performers.

A feature of the show that will attract exhibitors and spectators from Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee, and southern Virginia are the classes for three and five gaited saddle horses, who make but one local appearance a year in the vicinity of Washington. Saddle horse enthusiasts are already practicing their cries of "Let 'em rack," for which the five-gaited mounts exhibit their fastest, showiest gait.

Among the assured entries is last year's hunter champion, the Alvin Untermeyers' great brown gelding, Hexameter, who will come from Greenwich, Conn., in an effort to repeat his triumph. Ridden by Patricia Bolling and trained by Charles Lewis, former Washington horseman, Hexameter's flawless way of going and manners have frequently rated him above horses of slightly superior conformation.

The Untermeyers also are expected to bring South with them Illuminator, a chestnut gelding that scored in 3-year-old classes last year, and Cinelli, an imported Italian horse which dominated the open jumping classes at Madison Square Garden last fall.

Others who will no doubt be on the docket when the entries close May 24 are Mrs. John Hay Whitney, whose chestnut hunt team, composed of The Bear, Cherry Red and Dr. Carr, a new addition to her stables, is expected to stir up interest among the hunting set; Howard G. Haffener's Bobby E., who surprised in last year's show by copping the reserve hunter championship; Mrs. George Greenhalgh's outstanding string of horses from Berryville, Va., and U. S. Randle's Sport Marvel, Randle's Princess, Randle's Agent and others that were not included in his recent auction sale.

The show is, as last year, sponsored by the Junior League of Washington, and all proceeds will be donated to charity.

Louise Claytor Loses, 7 and 6, To Mrs. Letts

Mrs. Pychon, With Aid Of Handicap, Defeats Mrs. Bishop Hill, 2 and 1

Mrs. F. D. Letts, medalist, defeated Louise Claytor, defending champion in the French High Commission Clup play at Chevy Chase yesterday by a one-sided 7 and 6 margin in the quarter-final round.

Mrs. Letts took advantage of several handicap strokes in scoring the upset triumph while in another surprise Mrs. Bishop Hill, club champion, gave up eight handicap strokes and lost 2 and 1 to Mrs. C. E. Pynchon. Mrs. L. O. Cameron and Mrs. G. H. Chase finished all even and will replay the round today.

Reeve Lewis Has 70 In French Cup Finals

Reeve Lewis played the Chevy Chase course in 70 yesterday, one stroke over par figures and defeated P. S. Ridsdale 2 and 1 in the semifinal round of the men's French High Commission Cup play.

Lewis and Landra B. Platt, who defeated Ralph Quinter, sr., in the semifinals, will meet for the title.

First Flight

Mrs. Montgomery Blair defeated Mrs. Seldin Chapin, 3 and 2; Mrs. L. O. Cameron and Mrs. G. H. Chase, all even, to play off today; Mrs. F. D. Letts defeated Louise Claytor, 7 and 6; Mrs. C. E. Pynchon defeated Mrs. Bishop Hill, 2 and 1.

Consolation

Mrs. Oscar Coolican defeated Mrs. B. L. Jackson, 3 and 1. Mrs. Landra B. Platt, Mrs. H. Rowan and Countess Van der Straten drew byes.

Second round—Countess Van der Straten defeated Mrs. Rowan, 1 up.

Slow-Moving English Baseball Has Thrived Here for Over 50 Years, Players Say

By Al Hailey.

Cricket, the manly sport which sets the hardy Briton off in a chorus of such things as, "jolly well done, old man," is thriving right in Washington—in fact, it has flourished here upward of 50 years.

A small band of English-born Washingtonians has been bravely carrying on the national game of their mother country with hardly a whisper about anyone as to what they were about—remaining virtually a phantom organization known as The Washington Cricket Club.

Yesterday, however, the local exponents of crickets broke down and told all, revealing just what it takes to be a cricket player and ad libbing as to why they have gone through the years without coming into the public eye.

Founder Unknown

Nobody knows exactly who founded the Washington Cricket Club. As various Englishmen arrived in Washington to take up residence, they just drifted into membership through the channels all Englishmen fall into in a strange country.

William Warren, who has played with the club over 40 years, the oldest member, said yesterday the club was going strong when President McKinley was inaugurated and that from looks of things at that time the Washington Cricket Club was certainly no fledgling organization.

The club's team at present is taken from the 15 active members—a goodly portion of whom come from the staff of the British Embassy here. In practice on their field yesterday—the estate of L. McCormick Goodhart, of the British Embassy, Langley Park, Md.—the cricket team was a bewildering thing to behold.

Players were all over the field, holding down such posts as bowler, wicket keeper, square leg, mid-arm, silly slip, long off and points north and south. Alfred Wynne, secretary of the club, endeavored to explain things.

"Cricket is not a game adapted to the American citizen, for it is too slow," Wynne began. "For instance, we may play a game all afternoon and score more than 100 runs.

"Then the average cricketer is usually a man too old for your fast game of baseball and one who doesn't like golf. We have three former ball players, however, and they make excellent outfielders because they can rifle the ball in much better than the average cricketer."

The average cricketer, it seems, hurls the ball with a round-house overhand swing, thus achieving a much higher trajectory than the seasoned baseball player.

Frederick Auto Races On Tomorrow

22 Entrants to Face Starters Flag; Seven Makes of Cars Entered

In the parlance of the trade, there'll be a lot of "good iron" on display tomorrow when the 22 entrants face the starter's flag in the big car race at Frederick, Md.

No less than seven different makes of car are entered, with the most popular the Riley Special and the Cragar Special.

Mark Light, one of the favorites and the present Eastern speed king, will be behind the wheel of his modernized Miller, believed to be the fastest car in competition today.

It was in this car that Light hung up the new track record at Reading, Pa., two weeks ago. Charley Carey and Rex Williams, Light's two closest competitors for top honors, will be driving a D.O.Hal and a Riley, respectively.

Others driving Rileys are Tex Arts, Roy Graham, E. J. Hoppe and Charley Clifford. The Cragar supporters number Danny Goss, Tom Matson, Jerry Dunmoyer, Joe Sacantilo, Dusty Rhoades and Lem Marrow.

A lone home-made car will vie with the factory jobs and the owner is Art Hepburn. Young Hepburn, who built the car with the aid of his mechanic, Stover Babcock, is the son of the chief of police of Brentwood, Md.

Fair weather is promised for tomorrow and a capacity crowd is expected to be on hand when the first time trial gets off at 2 p. m.

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

Wachaprague on the Virginia Eastern Shore still seems to be about the best bet over the week-end. The catches are about equally divided between hardheads, kingfish and sea trout, and averaging from 40 to 60 to the boat. Conditions at Chincoteague and down the Cape are about the same as at Wachaprague.

ACKERMAN

Catches of hardheads up the Patuxent have been far below normal, but withal, worth going out for. The take per boat at Benedict has been running from two and three to a dozen. The going will be far better in another week.

The best catch we have heard of in the Plum Point area was caught from Sam Dixon's pier some days ago, when three local anglers took 20 nice ones.

We had hoped to be able to give definite news of bluefish in the lower bay. They are there alright, but so far only for netters.

It looks as if Washington will be well represented this week down on the North Carolina coast. Some are heading for Atlantic, others to Hatteras Island, but the great majority are stopping at Manteo and Wanchese for the channel bass fishing off Oregon Inlet.

Must Weigh Them

Don't forget to weigh your big fish in the tournament which got under way on the 1st of May, although in the channel bass class it looks as though an 11-year-old boy, Kent Oglethorpe, of Norfolk, has already sewn up the record for 1939 with his 73-pounder taken fishing with Capt. Lee Dough at Oregon Inlet. It is too bad the fish was not taken in fresh, for it was only 12 ounces under the worlds' record of 74 pounds after it had been out of the water 10 hours.

Many anglers enjoyed the sport offered by the great barracoudas found off Frying Pan shoals all last summer. They are back again, according to Capt. K. T. Tarstensen, of the lightship, and have been since April 20, when Earl Lewis, one of the crew, speared one 57 inches long and weighing 36 pounds.

We had a swell picture of Dr. Bill Wilkins and a 9-pound bonefish he had caught at Marathon, Fla., with our Monday column. Somehow it was labeled a bluefish—and have we heard about it. One letter from Atlantic City asking where all those years we sojourned in the Peninsula State were spent. Another from our fellow fishing scribe, Pete Chambliss, on the Baltimore American. And telephone calls too numerous to mention. Yet the picture ran only in the early edition. We wonder what might have happened had it been in the city edition.

New Appointment-

As yet we have not heard from Dr. Wilkins, and he is the one who really has a right to squawk For any angler who has the luck to take a "White Fox" of the Florida grass flats weighing 9 pounds has a right to make an issue of such a boner. Our apologies Bill, and we hope this sets everything straight.

We have head from several reliable sources that Virginia's Governor is looking to the Piedmont section for a possible appointment to the fish and game commission. That can mean but one thing. One of the most outstanding members of the present commission, Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, might not be reappointed, in spite of the fact that he has been indorsed by the great majority of sportsmen's clubs in the State.

No need for detailing his many accomplishments during the decade he has served in this capacity, only that there is need for action, if you are a Virginian and want to enjoy the benefits of the direction of an able mind, and of a sportsman.

Only Five Horses Ready to Face Johnstown in Preakness

Starters To Be Named Early Today

GildedKnightCoupled With Johnstown InBetting on $50,000 Classic Tomorow

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 11.—Only five horses appeared ready toda to oppose the rugged Johnstown's bid to cap his Kentucky Derby triumph with a victory in the historic Preakness Stakes at Pimlico Saturday.

When the names of the Preakness starters are dropped into the entry box tomorrow morning, these probably will be the 3-year-olds designated to oppose William Woodward's colt in the $50,000 added Maryland classic:

Wheatley Stable's Gilded Knight.
W. L. Brann's Challedon.
Saratoga Stable's Volitant.
King Ranch's Ciencia.
Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Impound.

Gilded Knight and Johnstown will be coupled as an entry in the betting as both are trained by Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons. Indications are they will be backed into odds as short as 2 to 5.

Season's Richest Purse

Six starters, at a fee of $500 each, would make the gross value of the Preakness $71,345—the season's richest purse for 3-year-olds.

Not since 1918 has there been as few as six starters in the Preakness. In the 1918 running, the event was split into two divisions. There were only six starters in the division won by Jack Hare, jr.

In the forty-ninth running Saturday, Johnstown will be meeting only one horse that opposed him in the Derby—Challedon, who trailed six lengths behind for second place.

The big bay son of Jamestown has not raced this season against the horse that promises to give him his greatest opposition—Gilded Knight, winner of the Chesapeake Stakes.

Nor has Johnstown met Ciencia, only filly eligible for the race. But in the Wood Memorial he beat both Impound and Volitant.

It is a classy field that stacks up against the big bay colt in his march to the 3-year-old crown, however, and anything may happen, though most of the money will be riding on Johnstown and the pink "J" on his nose.

All the probable starters have finished their heavy work and been pronounced in the best of shape by their trainers.

Accepts Invitation

Johnstown, his stablemate, Challenge, and Gilded Knight galloped a slow 2 miles today. Johnstown and Gilded Knight will get a short blowout in the morning, then rest. The others will follow a similar routine.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor today accepted the invitation of Alfred Vanderbilt, president, and Henry A. Parr 3d, treasurer of the Maryland Jockey Club, to present the historic Woodlawn Vase to the Preakness winner.

O'Conor said he had invited Gov. A. B. (Happy) Chandler of Kentucky to be his guest for the race.

Ral Parr Colt Wins Yearling Show Honors

Third Time in 8 Years Maryland Sportsman Has Won Championship

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., May 11.—Maj. Ral Parr, Maryland sportsman, furnished in a bay colt by Imp Aethelstan II—Fair Advocate the champion of the yearling show staged this morning at Pimlico. It was the third time in the eight-year history of this now important show that Maj. Parr took first honors in the colt class, but the first time his stock has been awarded a championship.

Maj. Parr was, perhaps, the most impelling force in the movement that culminated in the formation of a syndicate of Maryland breeders that imported Aethelsten from France in the fall of 1936.

Two of the other yearlings among the ten best were sired by imported stallions, one by Labrot & Co.'s Imp Kantar and the other by Mrs. Heighe's Imp Theatrical.

Champion—Maj. Parr's bay colt by Imp Aethelstan-Fair Advocate.
Reserve champion—Mrs. Heighe's Tamil, bay colt by Imp Aethelstan-In India.
Class 1—For Colts
2—Mrs. Heighe's Tamil, bay colt by Imp Aethelstan-In India.
3—Dr. Walter Wickes' bay colt by Canter-Belle of Plymouth.
4—Chester F. Hockley's brown colt by Imp Kantar-Mystify.
5—Maj. Parr's chestnut colt by Imp Aethelstan-Knightess.
Class 2—For Fillies
1—Mrs. Heighe's Dividend, bay filly by Imp Aethelstan-Miss Dinwiddie.
2—Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Williams' chestnut filly by Discovery-Fair Vixen.
3—Labrot and Co's. gray filly by Imp Aethelsan-Imp Florestine.
4—Mr. Vanderbilt's bay filly by Discovery-Gal O'Corsica.

Horses to Watch At Pimlico Track

GAYLASS—Has been raced into condition on the milers. Will be dropping down in her class at Charles Town.

ELSIE J.—Showed several fair races on milers. Has always been partial to Charles Town track.

IDYLLIC — Has been rested since Oaklawn Park. Will show to advantage in first start.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KNIGHTFORS, $17.80, $9.60, $4.10; MAESTRO SASCHA (Parr entry), $7.70, $4.00; GOOD RECEPTION (Hopst entry), $2.30.

KNIGHTFORS came to inside of LITTLE MOWLEE to take command approaching stretch, drew clear and held MAESTRO SASCHA safe in closing drive. The latter, keen forward factor from start, closed gamely, but could not menace winner seriously in closing stages. GOOD RECEPTION lacked early speed and closed with good energy under a hard drive. ECOPAN raced on outside of leaders to the stretch and weakened in closing eighth.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:48. Off 2:50. Winner, M. Lowenstein's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG UNFURLED, $28.90, $8.20, $5.20; PLOT, $3.20, $2.70; SOARING HIGH, $4.80.

FLAG UNFURLED, lacking early speed, responded to urging to improve position steadily on outside, came boldly to wear down PLOT inside eighth pole and was opening a gap at end. PLOT, closest to pace of SCULLERY MAID, came around leader to get to front entering stretch while bothered by pacemaker and came gamely when clear. SOARING HIGH went in first flight from beginning and closed with good energy.

Daily Double, Knightfors and Flag Unfuried, Paid $351.60.

THIRD RACE—Three miles. Purse, $1,000. The Billy Barton Steeplechase. For hunters. Start good. Won handily; place same. Went to post 3:16. Off 3:18½. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Whitney's b. g. †Montpelier entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—PAPER MOON, $9.70, $3.30, out; SLIEVEREIGH (entry), $2.40, out; STARS AND STRIPES II, out.

PAPER MOON, nicely handled and fencing well with the exception of a poor landing at nineteenth fence, followed close to early pace of STARS AND STRIPES II, was under restraint when SLIEVEREIGH took command after a mile and a half, disposed of latter when asked and drew out, finishing well in hand. SLIEVEREIGH, allowed to settle into stride and not hurried for a mile, improved position boldly to take command when placed to drive during second mile and tired gradually thereafter. Mr. Jones appeared to have misjudged distance of race. STARS AND STRIPES II set good pace for mile and dropped back thereafter. MUSKOGEE was taken up early while tiring.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:53. Off 3:54. Winner, Bomar Stable's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—YELLOW TULIP, $9.20, $4.90, $4.10; GORSE, $6.90, $4.90; ZOSTERA, $7.30.

YELLOW TULIP, steadied along within striking distance of pace, responded willingly when shaken up approaching stretch and wore down ZOSTERA to win going away. GORSE lacked early speed, improved position gradually after going wide for racing room nearing stretch and closed with excellent courage. ZOSTERA was sent to front when room was rated while setting good pace, but weakened under drive in closing sixteenth. OLD NASSAU was badly outrun to stretch and closed some ground.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:22½. Off 4:28½. Winner, Mrs. W. P. Stewart's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY MORN, $3.80, $3.40, $2.80; GRAND PAGEANT, $5.70, $4.20; SCANDALOUS, $9.70.

EARLY MORN, off slowly, was rushed up along rail, came through narrow opening to get to front and held away thereafter under energetic handling. GRAND PAGEANT was taken to outside for racing room leaving backstretch, went to leader gamely, but hung in final sixteenth. SCANDALOUS closed full of run. SUN GIRL responded when shaken up to close some ground.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Carroll Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. fillies and mares. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:53½. Off 4:57. Winner, G. Ring's ar. m. (4), by Sir Gallahad—Palestra. Trained by F. D. Watts. Net value to winner, $2,510; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $100. Time, 1:12 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY MARYLAND, $6.10, $3.30, $2.50; REHEARSAL, $4.60, $3.20; BUNNY BABY, $3.00.

LADY MARYLAND, kept on outside and running free from start, came around leaders entering stretch, took command nicely and had some speed in reserve. REHEARSAL, steadied along closest to pace of REDLIN, went to front briefly, but could not resist winner while placed to intermittent punishment. BUNNY BABY was outrun to stretch while racing wide and closed full of run. RISSA ran evenly while racing around.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:27½. Off 5:28½. Life Insurance In Force Here Gained 3.7%

Holdings in U. S. As a Whole Rose 1.3% Over 1937

By Thomas M. Cahill.

An aggregate of $658,216,000 ordinary life insurance was in force in this city at the close last year, an increase of approximately $23,485,000, or 3.7 per cent above that of the preceding 12 months, according to estimated annual figures of Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau, Hartford, Conn., these statistics being exclusive of group and industrial insurance.

Ordinary life insurance in the United States as an entirety advanced approximately $1,000,000,000, or 1.3 per cent in 1938, bringing the total to $75,595,209,000, exclusive of group insurance. A total of 34,064,418 individual ordinary policies were in force at the end of 1938, or more than one for every family in the country, exclusive of industrial and group policies.

Carr to Speak in Finals

Roland T. Carr, of Riggs National Bank, won over six contestants from other cities in the recent local district public speaking contest of the American Institute of Banking, this being his second victory in a similar competition. Mr. Carr will represent this territory of the institute in the finals at its annual convention in Grand Rapids, Mich., as he did last year at the Omaha convention. Washington Chapter of the institute has had a course in public speaking on its curriculum for nine years and in that time has had representatives in the national finals on three occasions.

Hanes Praises Lending

Never has the country had more ample credit facilities than it has today, according to First Vice President Robert M. Hanes of the American Bankers Association, these facilities being provided through many Government institutions, chartered banks and other financial agencies and having been streamlined as to terms, conditions and rates to meet individual conditions.

Mr. Hanes reminds that all existing credit agencies are doing their full share and that there is no need of any new ones, presenting in his recent Chamber of Commerce address, on "Adequacy of Present Financial Agencies," views of unusual interest to bankers, as well as these who declars banks are not doing all they can to grant loans. The most welcome visitor in a bank today, Mr. Hanes declared, is a meritorious borrower.

Anacostia Bank Elections

At the annual meeting of stockholders of the Anacostia Bank the following directors were re-elected: J. F. Campbell, R. U. Cooper, Frank M. Dent, George S. King, W. L. Koontz, George S. Maier, J. R. Pyles, Ernest J. Read, Elmer M. Smith, L. W. Thompson, Robert Thompson and Irving Yochelson. The directors met immediately and re-elected the following officers; J. F. Campbell, president; W. L. Koontz, vice president and cashier; L. W. Thompson, vice president; Carl C. Smick, W. W. Young and Allen H. Cannon, assistant cashiers, and George C. Gertman, attorney.

Joint C. L. U. Annual Dinner

At the recent joint annual dinner of the Baltimore chapter, C. L. U., and the Washington chapter, C. L. U., at the Baltimore Country Club, a number of the members were present to hear Joseph H. Reese, C. L. U., of Philadelphia, president of the National Chapter of Chartered Life Underwriters, deliver his address. He chose as his topic "Taking Stock." He reported that there are now over 1,500 holders of the C. L. U. designation, and that almost 1800 are preparing for examinations to be held in June.

F. A. Savage, jr., C. L. U. president of the Baltimore Chapter, presided and introduced H. Cochran Fisher, C. L. U. president of the Washington Chapter, and Ernest J. Clark of the American College of Life Underwriters, who introduced Mr. Reese. Mr. Clark was one of the founders of the American College, which awards the C. L. U. designation. Next year the joint annual dinner will be held here.

Insurance Payments Gain

Every day in 1938 life insurance policyholders and beneficiaries in the District of Columbia were paid $36,712, or a total of $13,400,000 for the year, according to a special compilation by The National Underwriter, weekly insurance newspaper. This represents an increase of $1,273,000, or 10 per cent, over the 1937 total of $12,127,000.

The District ranked 37th in life insurance payments among all states while it is 39th in size of population. The per capital payment in 1938 was $21.64 compared to $19.59 the year before. In Washington $13,400,000 was paid in 1938, compared to $12,127,000 in 1937. Washington ranked 18th among all cities in the country.

Substantial life insurance payments were made in nearby States. Maryland having $42,000,000 with Baltimore as its leading city with $16,730,000; Virginia's life insurance payments totaled $38,200,000, led by Richmond with $3,760,000 and Pennsylvania received $277,000,000 led by Philadelphia with $34,650,000.

Win Recognition

National recognition for their personal production record last month has been won by C. B. Ray and V. W. Summers, Washington representatives of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., according to word received here today from the home office in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Mr. Ray ranked among the first 15 of the company's 1,200 sales representatives in total personal paid production for April. Mr. Summers was named on the company's list of national leaders in number of applications written last month. Both men ranked among the first five in amount of business paid for last month on the lives of old policyholders.

Low-Cost Housing Needed for Masses, Bankers Hear

New York, May 11 (AP).—"People with small incomes carrying moderate loans on homes they could afford to occupy have met their obligations better than those with better incomes living in better class homes," John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, said today.

Addressing the annual meeting of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, he recommended a reduction in the price of low-income homes, saying: "I think the experiences of recent years are bringing home to all who are earnestly interested in housing the fact that we have not yet solved satisfactorily the problem of producing the best possible house to meet the needs of the great mass of our families whose annual incomes, even under the most favorable circumstances, must be regarded as moderate.

"Careful studies which have been made show conclusively that over 80 per cent of the urban families of this country cannot afford to own homes which cost more than $4,000. It is very difficult to provide a satisfactory house within that limit, in most of the northern sections of the United States, but in those areas, there is undoubtedly a very great market for the $5,000 house."

Californian Indicted For SEC Violations

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday that Bernard Toplitsky, of Los Angeles, pleaded guilty in Federal District Court in Los Angeles to charges of violations of the fraud and registration provisions of the securities act of 1933 and the mail fraud statute. The plea of guilty was to three out of the 11 counts charged in the indictment. United States District Judge Paul J. McCormick, before whom the plea was entered, set sentence for July 10.

The indictment, returned on February 15, 1939, charged that the defendant sold thousands of shares of International Vanadium stock to investors in California at prices ranging as high as $5 a share on the basis of false representations that the stock was going to be listed on the New York Curb Exchange, that the Securities and Exchange Commission had granted a permit for the listing of the stock, that the stock was going to open on the New York Curb Exchange at a price from $5 to $11 a share, that the mining property had been formerly owned by a German syndicate which was then trying to acquire control of the property, and that the International Vanadium Corporation was actually producing and selling its products.

Lendable Bank Funds Soar to High Record

By the Associated Press

Lendable excess reserves of the banks rose to a new record high of $4,190,000,000 in the week ended May 10.

The Federal Resrve said the total increased $110,000,000 during the week, most because of Treasury gold purchases and Treasury spending.

Wheat Price Jump Cut by Profit-Taking

Active Trading Sends Grain Up 1 to 2 Cents In Early Hours

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 11.—With wheat selling above 80 cents a bushel for the first time since early last summer, prices of all grains advanced 1 to 2 cents in a very active trade today, but later lost most of the gains and in some cases fell back below yesterday's closing levels.

All deliveries of wheat, oats and soybeans and September rye established new highs for the season before heavy profit taking caused a reaction. Corn hit a new high since February. Buying of May contracts, particularly wheat and oats, because of high premiums quoted for actual grains stimulated the advance. There was some removal of hedges in the corn and oats pits, presumably on grain destroyed in today's spectacular elevator fire in the Calumet district on Chicago's south side.

The fire, which broke out just before the market opened and spread to five large elevators, caused uneasiness among shorts, particularly in the wheat pit. Before trading started contracts involving more than 6,000,000 bushels remained to be settled either by pit operations in the next nine days or delivery of actual wheat by the end of the month.

Profit taking on the upturn in wheat of as much as 2 cents in May contracts and 1 cent in deferred deliveries wiped out most of the grains and the market closed very irregular, with May ⅛@⅜ higher than yesterday at 78⅜@78¾, while July and September were unchanged to ⅜ lower at 73⅞@74. Corn closed unchanged to ⅝ higher, July 51⅞@51⅝, September 52½@52⅝; oats ⅛@½ lower; rye ⅛@⅜ up; lard 2 lower to 3 higher.

Stock Prices Slump as Volume Traded in Drops to 400,000 Shares; Bond Trading Quiet and Irregular

New York, May 11.—A couple of active days a week is about all the stock market can stand and today it slumped back again into the doldrums. Only 400,190 shares changed hands on the big board and the street is hearing rumors of this and that firm which is being forced to reduce its pay rolls and cut down its office space. The end of this month is expected to bring a number of important firm change announcements.

Prices moved in accordance with the dull trading. The last hour sell-off of Wednesday was continued at the opening and only modest progress was made later in cutting down these losses. The composite average showed an insignificant decline of 0.72 point. Aviations eased slightly more than other departments while a show of firmness was made by the store stocks and steels. Few price changes exceeded a point in either direction.

Chrysler Most Active

The 15,100 shares turned over in Chrysler made it the most active stock of the day, although this is no more than has been seen in two or three early morning blocks of this speculative favorite when the market has moved with determination. Chrysler was up a half point and steel a quarter. Borden shot into the list of 15 most active stocks with a fractional gain. A strong spot was Sears Roebuck, up 1½, as did duPont. Telephone was well supported. Farm equipment shares had a poor day, on rumors Congress may not be as generous with farm relief as had been expected and International Harvester closed off 1⅝ points.

Washington Developments

While the market held fairly stable, there were two Washington developments which disappointed investors. One was the expected appointment of Thomas Amlie to the Attorney General's office. Amlie's appointment to the I. C. C. was withdrawn after the wave of opposition which swept the country but apparently the faithful must be cared for. But if proof were needed, here is another piece of evidence to be added to the already imposing pile of evidence that the Administration has no intention of attempting to please business.

Morgenthau's Tax Plan

Reports of a rift between the President and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau over the expected introduction in Congress of the Treasury's tax bill also was regretted in the street. The President has no intention of supporting the Treasury's plan, which was drawn up with great care and with some thought as to the necessity of helping business if taxes are to be collected. Presidential opposition would without doubt be sufficient to keep the measure from becoming law, and would be additional evidence that there is no such thing as a business appeasement program.

Steel Price War

Within industry the day's chief development included the possibility of the steel industry facing another price war similar to that of last October. The fight threatens over the same type of business, namely the steel for the automobile manufacturers. Steel men admit there has been some shading in the Detroit area but claim that the tonnage placed at the lowered figures is small. In the fight last October, United States Steel met the competition for the first time but the result was apparent in its first quarter earning statement, when it netted only 18 cents a preferred share.

The weekly carloading report showed a decline of 2.2 per cent compared with the previous week, with coal showing the largest decline. This situation should be righted soon, however, with the coal deadlock virtually broken.

Bond Trading Irregular

Small and irregular variations occurred in a quiet listed bond market sessions today. Long-term issues of the United StaStes Treasury showed a few more highs, but some of the active bonds slipped a trifle. Best grade corporate investments were maintained, while speculative bonds disclosed more small gains than losses. Turnover in all bonds amounted to $4,650,000.

Polish Issues Rise

The foreign list was mildly interesting, as Polish bonds jumped about 3 points on the British assurance regarding Danzig. German and Italian issues advanced fractionally. Fresh buying appeared in the Argentine and Canadian groups, owing to the commodity aspects of such securities, but the high grade Scandinavians idled. Only modest attention was paid to the Latin-American default issues.

Railroad Liens Dull

Medium-priced railroad bonds turned dull, while debate proceeded as to remedial legislation. Borderline and default rails eased. Alleghany Corporation issues remained irregular, but utility holding company bonds were in demand. Some of the industrial convertibles dipped, owing to the downward trend of related equities. Local traction bonds lost some of their recent gains, and communications issues likewise receded.

Accountants Tighten Auditing Procedure

New York, May 11 (AP).—The American Institute of accountants has adopted a report by a special committee on auditing procedures which calls for corroboration by actual physical tests of inventories listed on a firm's books as well as confirmation of accounts receivable by direct communication with debtors.

The institute's action in laying down broad principles for guidance in accounting practices was regarded as fulfillment of promises made last fall when the McKesson & Robbins scandal brought to light vast inventory deficiencies which accountants had failed to uncover. Members of the organization are expected to put into effect as soon as practicable the new methods recommended by the institute.

Briton Discusses Trade Agreements

By the Associated Press

Robert S. Hudson, secretary of Great Britain's department of overseas trade, conferred with American Government officials yesterday on methods of increasing economic co-operation between the United States and Britain.

He talked with Assistant Secretary of State Frencis B. Sayre and State Department Economic Advisor Dr. Herbert Feis. Also present was British Commercial Attache H. O. Chalkley. Their talk centered largely on trade agreements.

Wisconsin Factory Employment Rises

Madison, Wis., May 11 (AP).—The Industrial Commission announced today that Wisconsin factory employment increased .6 per cent and payrolls 7.3 per cent during April, compared with the same month last year, and predicted the upturn in employment would continue in May and June.

During the last eight months, the commission said, the durable goods industries of the State have expanded employment 12.3 per cent and payrolls 23.8 per cent. The number of workers increased from 95,800 in September to 107,600 in April.

Colgate-Palmolive to Redeem Stock Issue

New York, May 11 (AP).—Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., directors voted today to redeem 50,000 shares of the company's 6 per cent preferred stock on August 1 at the call price of $102.50 a share, plus accrued dividends from July 1. Redemption will be by lot from the list of stockholders of record May 23.

Calling the stock will reduce outstanding preferred shares to slightly more than $18,000,000 effecting a saving in preferred dividends of $300,000 a year, equal to 15 cents a common share, the company said.

Cotton Futures Dip In Heavy Selling as Subsidy Bill Fails

New York, May 11 (AP).—Cotton futures fluctuated erratically today while the market kept an ear to the ground for Washington news affecting the staple. Final prices were 2 to 6 points net lower.

Failure of the Bankhead export subsidy amendment to pass the Senate was the signal for a general selling movement from British and continental acounts while the Liverpool market was bid up.

The spot delivery chalked up abrupt price changes as covering by trade shorts was countered by profit taking. May was off as much as 15 points at one while in the New Orleans market May ended 7 points below the final price here, which caused considerable comment.

Chain Store Sales Volume Advanced During April

New York, May 11.—Chain stores continued to show a substantial upward trend in sales volume in the month of April, according to the monthly compilation released yesterday by Childs, Jeffries & Thorndike, Inc. The first 25 chains to report had an aggregate April volume of $260,267,215, an increase of $18,351,263, or 7.6 per cent over the same month the previous year.

For the four months ending April 30 these chains had sales totaling $878,951,233, which compares with sales of $820,775,226, an increase of $58,176,007, or 7.1 per cent above the same period of 1938.

This showing compares favorably with April, 1937, when the same chains reported sales of $244,399,319, and for the like four months period in that year of $861,293,262; and again with April, 1936, when they reported sales of $220,897,775, and for the same four months of $746,210,448.

Gold Importations Set Record in April

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department said yesterday April imports of gold set a record of $606,027,427. England alone, sent more than half of the gold, $384,951,476. Other large shipments included $84,602,951 from Belgium; $44,563,925 from the Netherlands; $55,679,749 from Switzerland; $7,685,897 from Canada; $4,944,487 from India, and $5,528,062 from Japan.

Although the most recent heavy gold movement started in March, that month's imports amounted to only $365,436,437. In April of last year, only $71,236,453 of the metal came here.

Silver imports in April totaled $7,142,537, including $1,460,945 from England; $3,349,917 from Mexico; $581,812 from Peru; $587,708 from Japan, and $554,731 from Canada. Exports in the month totaled $230,854 of gold and $2,053,586 of silver.

14 Arraigned In Insurance Poison Deaths

Widow Collapses In Cell at Sight Of 'Witch Doctor'

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 11.—Two arsenic widows, caught in the intrigues of the Philadelphia murder syndicate, protested their innocence of husband murder today while detectives prepared their cases and those of 22 other persons for early trial.

In all, 13 were held at three hearings conducted during the day in different courtrooms, according to the Associated Press. Most of them were held without bail for the court. One, Stephen Crispino, was held for extradition to New Jersey for trial on charges of conspiracy in a drowning off Sea Isle City that authorities called an insurance slaying.

[Detectives have estimated "as many as 100" persons might have been killed by the plotters in the last 10 years. Poisonings, drownings, head-breaking and automobile "accidents" have been laid to the ring.

Poisoners Poisoned

[Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt said some wives gave the ring a flat fee or a percentage of insurance to kill their husbands; others bought poison the ring called "witch's brew" and administered it themselves. In some cases, he said, the poisoners later were poisoned to silence them about the ring's deals in death.—Editor's note.]

As an order was issued for exhumation of her husband's body, Mrs. Millie Giacobbe, 50, collapsed in hysteria in her cell at sight of the sinister tailor, Paul Petrillo, self-styled "witch doctor," whose cousin, Herman Petrillo, has admitted 21 murders for the syndicate.

Mrs. Giacobbe's lawyer, Claude Lanciano, announced that he had asked the New York toxicologist, Dr. Norman W. Elton, to come to Philadelphia for an examination of his client to determine whether she had been poisoned.

Lanciano denied a police statement that Mrs. Giacobbe, who twice tried suicide after her arrest, had confessed complicity in her husband's death. The police version was that she accused Paul Petrillo of seducing her with the "evil eye" into becoming his paramour, then plotted with her the death of her husband and his wife.

While eight others were being arranged today, Mrs. Josephine Romualdo, mother of two children, issued through her counsel a denial of guilt in the death of her husband, Antonio. She attributed her plight to her belief in "hex" and the machinations of Mrs. Carina Favato, whose confession of three murders during her trail revealed some of the more bizarre aspects of the syndicate's methods of selling murder to dissatisfied wives.

Victims Superstitious

Mrs. Romuldo's statement revealed the type of persons the syndicate found its best prey—superstitious women of foreign origin, virtually all believers in witchcraft.

"I am completely innocent," said the Romualdo statement, issued through Attorney Abraham J. Levy, jr. "It is true I am a believer in 'hex' and have been all my life, and that's why I am in this trouble.

"About 10 years ago, I went to a doctor because I felt I was losing my husband's love. I was given a powder to put on his necktie, in his hair and in his shoes.

"It didn't work, and then about two years before my husband died I heard about the reputation of Mrs. Carina Favato, who lived in my neighborhood.

"I went to her and told her my husband was acting strange and cool toward me. She 'put the eye' on me and told me I was under a spell and that everything would be all right again between me and my husband. She told me to leave it to her, but told me to send my husband around. I did.

"She gained his confidence by hiring him to do odd jobs around her house. Mrs. Favato fed him, but the treatment didn't work. I went back to her and told her my husband was still cool to me.

"Mrs. Favato said to me, 'Now I'm going to start a love potion.' She showed me a bottle filled with liquid. She told me it wouldn't harm him and gave me a spoonful to prove it. It had no effect on me.

Held Without Bail

"But after that he started to fail in health and then he died. I know nothing about how or why he died."

Mrs. Romualdo was held without bail. Detective Capt. James Kelly named Herman Petrillo and Mrs. Favato as co-defendants in the death of her husband November 13, 1936. He said city chemists had found arsenic in Romualdo's vital organs.

Others arraigned today were:

Cesar (Jumbo) Valenti, 55, former heavyweight prizefighter with half a life time in Italian and American prisons, charged with complicity in the arsenic murder of Mrs. Favato's husband, Charles. He was held without bail.

Morris (Louis the Rabbi) Bolber, Brooklyn, N. Y. grocer who posed as a "psychiatrist," and David Brandt, 32, former University of Pennsylvania veterinary student, both charged with the arsenic murder of Romaine Mandiuk, February 22, 1935. They won a continuance. Brandt "eventually will be held for several murders," according to Vincent P. McDevitt, assistant district attorney, who asserted that "events have happened so quickly in the last 48 hours that it is a gigantic job to keep abreast of the ramifications of this iniquitous ring."

Mrs. Agnes Mandiuk, accused with Bolber and Brandt in her husband's death.

Mrs. Marie Woloshyn, charged with the planned hit-and-run death of her husband.

Mrs. Giacobbe, held without bail in her husband's death, with Bolber, Paul Petrillo and Gaetano Cicinati, 45, ordered held as accessories before and after the fact.

Mrs. Rose Davis, charged with killing her first husband April 9, 1932, held without bail with Bolber, Paul Petrillo and Cicinati, also held as accessories.

Mrs. Rose Smigel Shenkman, held without bail for further hearing in three weeks in connection with the death of her first husband. The court was advised that the district attorney's office has not yet completed its investigation of her case.

Coroner Charles H. Hersch today ordered exhumation of the body of Mrs. Giacobbe's husband as well as that of Abe Sherman, whose wife, Dora, also is in custody.

Lanciano said he agreed with Mrs. Giacobbe "that she may be a victim of poisoning" and so asked the toxicologist to make arsenic tests.

He denied that she had made any confession to authorities. Police have said they have a photostatic check showing Petrillo collected $480 from life insurance policies held on Giacobbe but added that "his widow got most of the money."

"Mrs. Giacobbe was firmly convinced that Petrillo possessed powers of witchcraft," Lanciano said. "She became hysterical when she saw him in the cell block and had to be led away. She did not know that Petrillo had an insurance policy on her husband.

Told Her He Loved Her

"Paul Petrillo told her three months later that he loved her madly and had gotten her husband out of the way. Mrs. Giacobbe ordered him from her home, and then recently discovered that Petrillo held a $1,000 insurance policy on her life.

"I summoned Dr. Elton because she has been in poor health and fears she may be a victim of arsenic"

Lanciano said when Mrs. Giacobbe learned an insurance policy had been taken out on her husband she was unable to understand why the signature was a mere "X," though her husband could read and write.

Herbert Campbell, assistant district attorney of Cape May County, N. J., came here today to arrange for extradition of Samuel Crispano, of Reading, who today was ordered held without bail for extradition to Cape May.

Crispano was charged with being one of three men who pushed Joseph Arena from a fishing boat off Sea Isle City, N. J., drowning him for his life insurance. Others allegedly involved in the death are Arena's widow, Paul Petrillo and Bolber.

Doctor "Implicated"

One of the homicide squad said a physician was "implicated" in the death of Mrs. Jennie Peno, believed to have been a victim of the syndicate's New Jersey branch. She was first wife of Gaetano Peno, 35, of Salem, N. J., who died Monday in Philadelphia General Hospital, a day before detectives began searching for him for questioning about his wife's death. Detectives said he would have been a key witness against the physician.

Other detectives revealed that evidence has been discovered that a Brooklyn, N. Y., resident was among the ring's victims. The evidence, including identity of the Brooklyn victim, was turned over to New York police, they said, but was not disclosed publicly for fear of providing too much information to the Brooklyn killers.

Paul Petrillo, it was reported, held as many as 60 policies on victims. The Philadelphia Record said tonight that Petrillo blamed Bolder and Brandt for the murder of Mrs. Peno.

The bald little peddler of spaghetti and arsenic declared Peno was lured into the death plot against his wife by the promise of a "beautiful lady" who "was crazy about him," the Record quoted Petrillo as saying.

But, the purported statement added, Bolder and Brandt shared the insurance with Peno and then "left him in the lurch."

It was reported that Petrillo, whose name became more and more prominent in the developments of the last 24 hours, was ready to turn State's evidence. But his counsel, Lemuel B. Schofield, told reporters there would be "no statement tonight."

Two-Alarm Fire Damages British Attache's Home

Smoke and flame spurt from the second floor of the home of Capt. George Pirie, Air Attache at the British Embassy, at 3225 Highland place northwest. The blaze raged out of control half an hour after fire apparatus arrived. Capt. Piere, his wife and two children, who were in the living room of the colonial dwelling, escaped uninjured

No, this isn't a debutante's corsage. Nor a futurist painting. It's an air view of the Shoreham Terrace, largest outdoor dance spot in the world, opening on Monday, May 29. Inset is Barnee, leader of the Lowe Shoreham orchestra

By MARRY HARRIS.

SHOREHAM TERRACE OPENING SOON. Summer officially comes to Washington with the annual opening of the Shoreham Terrace, one of the most beautiful outdoor dancing spots in the country (or the world, for that matter).

The Terrace, it's just been decided, will open on Monday, May 29, the evening before Decoration Day. Barnee and his orchestra will provide dance tunes, as in previous seasons. With a seating capacity of 1,500, the Terrace is easily the largest outdoor place of its type in the world.

Overlooking Rock Creek Park, lovely as any spot on the Riviera—the Terrace is like a setting designed by Urban. Rimmed by trellises of pink rambler roses, open to the moon and stars of the dark-blue night sky, always filled with the gayest and brightest of crowds, echoing with Barnee's polished dance rhythms—the Terrace ranks as one of the Capital's finest show spots.

BYRD OFF TO? After enjoying borscht and other Russian dainties at Troika, Admiral Richard Byrd told Greeter Mischa that he thought he'd go back to the South Pole some time soon. My goodness! Troika's new air-conditioning makes the place cool enough for even an Antarctic explorer! Some of the many parties appreciating Troika's new cool breezes were those of Representative Clarence Cannon, Dr. Albertini (Cuban sugar king) and those 22 Ohio high school seniors sponsored by Representative W. A. Ashbrooke, of Ohio.

HOOVER LIKES PIRATE MUSEE:

Portwatch Patsy, custodian of the Pirates' Museum, tells us that G-Man J. Edgar Hoover especially enjoyed inspecting the antique guns of the collection. Looking at a pistol notched by some buccaneer killer, he remarked that "Baby Face" Nelson didn't notch his gun, but instead notched the edge of his watch case to keep track of his homicides. J. Edgar also liked the belt with handcuffs attached, remarked that practically the same device is now used to secure criminals.

PEGGY'S OFF AGAIN: Cafe Caprice's Peggy Townsend is going to New York again for a couple of days. It's the aftermath of that Paramount test she recently took. This begins to look promising for Hollywood, but threatening to Washington which looks forward to seeing Peggy on the Powhatan Roof.

SMARTEST TRICKS: The way that Paul Kain (always the original) plays "Happy Birthday" in fancy swing for birthday parties. He dresses up this standby number in uncanny rhythm, jams it and jives it, until you think it's about the best thing you ever heard. Anyone for whom Paul plays "Happy Birthday" must feel years younger instead of a year older.

Absolutely anything that Madrillon's Carr and Don do on the double pianos. The boys make the pianos sound as though a dozen litters of kittens were on the keys.

So get yourself reservations for Shar-Zad either for tonight or tomorrow, for the Biltmore Boys and Lou Martel, a set of the most popular and likeable melodizers ever to come to town will be saying goodby for the season after tomorrow.

The way that Pete Macias and his lads of the Lounge Riviera wind melody and rhythm in and around, with every member of the band playing (except Pete) several instruments. Senor Macias just keeps on going to the World's Fair on the piano.

Those terreefic songfests staged by Dick Koons and his entire orchestra in the Mayfield Lounge. Dick, one of the town's really juvenile maestros, not only originated the "Glee Club" idea, but has improved on it constantly through novelty arrangements.

HIGH SCHOOL MEMORY: Mayfair's nightingale, Louanna, and Charles Collins (dance partner and husband of Dorothy Stone) were schoolmates. They played in the same high school band in Oklahoma City. Louanna also played for Charles in his first Charleston contest. He won it and started his dancing career.

BY GOLLY! BY GOLLY! If you don't know Cecil Golly is coming to Glen Echo come Monday, by golly! you must be blind, considering those Glen Echo ads. All we can add is that the Golly band is nationally noted for streamlined swing, hot scat singing, all 'round entertainment value.

It's the last two nights of Herbie Holmes' long and successful engagement. He jumps from here to Milwaukee's Schroder Hotel, will later go to the Chicago Theater.

VERRI CUTE: Carmella La Verri, piquant singer, has just joined the Uptown cocktail lounge's entertainment crew. With Buddy Parsons and Arthur Howe, she will make the Uptown the home of triple fun as well as double cocktails.

PRETTY PERSONAL: Al Simmonds (Brown Derby) is on a reducing regimen. He's getting most of his exercise by pitching horseshoes and bag punching down at his Maryland shore cottage.

Jimmy Santmyer, now at the Pall Mall Room, has played at most of the important spots in town, including the Wardman, Carlton and Madrillon.

Lew Berman (Rainbow Room) vows he'll never own another dog. Lew had a police dog, "Buddy," who anticipated the "seeing eye" dogs by taking a blind Boston bulldog for walks. When "Buddy" passed on, Lew decided that he should never have a successor.

Matt Windsor (Anchor Room) plays Gypsy music with such intensity that the Anchor customers chime in and try to sing it, even though "Down By the Old Mill Stream" is more in their line.

If you want to know anything about the World's Fair, just ask Bill Strickland, maestro and emcee of the Lotus. Bill has just returned from the fair with a bale of literature, including the fair's daily newspaper.

Lilyan Dell (Hour Glass) has not always been a singer. She started her professional career as a dancer in the Rex Theater in Paris.

Angie Rodante (Hi Hat) started to sing in public at the ripe age of 7. She had a contralto voice even then.

Bend an ear to Eddie Sauerwald's trumpeting next time you're in Bamboo Gardens. He's one of the best in this territory.

The Messrs. Raymond and Bernard Lurba, whose new Neptune Room is pack-jammed every afternoon and evening, have been in the restaurant business for 21 years.

2-Alarm Fire Does $15,000 Damage Here

British Air Attache And Family Routed From Their Home

A two-alarm fire, which caused damage to building and furniture estimated at $15,000 last night, routed the family of Group Capt George C. Pirie, Air Attache of the British Embassy, from their home at 3225 Highland place northwest.

While flames roared through the top floor of the three-story dwelling, Mrs. Pirie rushed to the second floor and saved jewelry valued at $4,000. Set in a grove removed from neighboring buildings, the white colonial building, oldest in Cleveland Park, was threatened for a time with destruction.

The blaze was discovered by Capt. Pirie while he sat with Mrs. Pirie and their children, Alan, 9, and Elizabeth, 11, in the first floor living room. Hearing a crackling noise above stairs, he found the top floor engulfed in flames.

Little opportunity was given to remove furniture or other effects and damage could not be ascertained at once. The building, occupied by the Piries two years, is owned by Hugh Saum, of Riverdale, Md.

Endeavoring to estimate damage during the height of the fire, Capt. Pirie showed great concern over one item of personal property.

"I hope," he said, "the uniform in which I expected to met the King isn't ruined.'

One of more than 1,500 spectators lost his wallet to a pickpocket who escaped with the victim and a dozen bystanders in pursuit.

Hikers to Celebrate

A hikers' jamboree will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the Hillcrest ballroom, 2800 Thirteenth street northwest, under the auspices of the Red Triangle Hiking Club and the Capitol Hiking Club.

Scholars to Get Awards

Awards will be presented to students of Sidwell Friends School, 3901 Wisconsin avenue northwest, at 9 a. m. today by George Washington Post, No. 1, American Legion.

Mount Vernon Ladies Open Session, Lay Wreath on Tomb

The Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, represented by its 27 vice regents, began a 10-day business session yesterday at Washington's mansion on the Potomac.

The session opened with the traditional placing of a wreath on the Tomb, and in the afternoon a report of stewardship was given the vice regents by Charles Cecil Wall, the Mount Vernon superintendent. This report followed one by Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, of Iowa, the regent of the association.

The business sessions were confined strictly to the association members, and it was stated at the conclusion that all reports dealt solely with the activities and work accomplished in the last year. It was said that some interesting donations had been received for the shrine, but mention of these would be withheld until later in the 10-day session.

The high light of the session comes May 17, when Gov. James H. Price of Virginia and the board of visitors will be guests of the association at Mount Vernon. With the ladies of the association, the board and the Governor will inspect the mansion and grounds and be acquainted with the association's plans for maintaining the Washington home.

On Sunday, the regents will attend Pohick Church, where Washington worshiped. Monday they will be guests of the National Mary Washington Memorial Association at Kenmore, in Fredericksburg. The ceremonies there will commemorate the 150th anniversary of the death of Washington's mother.

The association was founded in 1853 by Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham for the purpose of preserving the home and tomb of George Washington.

Health Department Warns of Impostor

Police were told yesterday by Dr. Reid Ashworth, head of the health department food inspection bureau, that an impostor, posing as an inspector, has been selling spurious tickets.

Dr. Ashworth said the men represents himself to be one Dr. Shea, of the health department.

Hussy Isn't Liked

Richmond, Va., May 11 (AP).—Six residents of the Fairfield district of Henrico County petitioned the board of supervisors to change the name of their street. The present name is Hussy, or Huzzy, lane—the petitioners spelled it both ways.

Roosevelt to Play Western

Central Plays Wilson Nine In Other Tilt

Eastern Section Teams Remain Idle; Travis Again Out Of Riders' Line-up

By Bill Burnett

Picking up the slightly tattered threads of its hopes for an interhigh baseball championship, made that way by Western's rude thumping two weeks ago, Roosevelt High goes into the thick of the series wars today. Again Western furnishes the opposition. It will be one of two West section clashes on the day's card, the East section being quiet for the time being. Central meets its chief nemesis in the other tilt, Woodrow Wilson, and both games start at 3:30 p. m.

Today's matches are an exact recurrence of battles two weeks ago. On that occasion both of the top-heavy favorites, Roosevelt and Central, went down under a flurry of base hits by their poorly thought-of opponents, and the battles at Roosevelt and Central, respectively, today furnish the host clubs a chance to prove it was all a mistake.

Travis, Thrift Eligible

On Monday, chances of the Riders for all other inter high games were greatly enhanced by the reappearance of two of their brightest stars in the line-up. Ernie Travis and Johnny Thrift, both seasoned and hard-hitting players, came back after a siege of scholastic ineligibility. On Tuesday, however, Travis went back to the spectator class when he injured his back rather seriously sliding into home plate in a trampling of Maryland's yearlings. He will be out for at least two weeks, excluding him from next Friday's argument with Central as well as today's scrap.

Western is at the top of the west section rankings, and though Wilson holds little hope of winning the sectional crown, it can seriously damage Central's once flourishing prospects with a victory. The latter will be forced to work minus its ace catcher and slugger, Harry Martin, due again to advisory releases.

Starting Pitchers

Starting pitchers will probably be: At Roosevelt, Eddie Vermillion (1-1) vs. Carmel Nance (1-1), and at Central, Dick Rozzelle (1-1) vs. Joe Welles (1-0).

Two other public school nines, besides those involved in the interhigh doings, also go into action today. Anacostia attempts to wear off a few rough spots in a game with Bethesda-Chevy Chase on the "flats," and Eastern will play host to Washington-Lee's rampaging youngsters. The Indians are triumphantly astride the east section lead, while Eastern wallows in what seems a hopeless effort to get moving.

Activities are closed out for the day in two games in the suburbs, Mount Rainier meeting its Maryland rival at Maryland Park, and a prep school clash occurring at Garrett Park between Georgetown Prep and Landon.

Virginia's Frosh Slug to Win, 17-8

Lexington, Va., May 11.—Virginia Freshman ball players blasted 16 hits and cashed in on 10 Cadet errors to beat the V. M. I. first-year nine here today, 17 to 8. The setback was the first in five starts for the Cadets and evened the series at one game apiece.

The Cavaliers scored in six innings, hammering three Cadet pitchers. The Cadets, on home runs by Wray and Moore in the second inning and another rally in the fifth, pulled up within a run of a tie but failed to score on Coupland in the last four frames.

Lowman's homer in the ninth helped to add four runs to the Virginia totals.

Red Sox Star Suffers Sinus Infection Of 10-Years Standing

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 11.—Baseball's "comeback kid" of 1938—Belting James Emory Foxx, of Boston—is making it stick despite a 10-year-old misery in the head.

For a decade the husky Red Sox first baseman has suffered from sinus trouble, but until the 1937 season came along the record books never gave it away. One of the greatest "power" hitters in baseball, he was handicapped by the infection in 1936, yet managed to average .338 at the plate.

Then his mark fell to .285 in 1937 He followed this last season with one of the most remarkable form recoveries in the game's history, slugging .349 to win the American League batting championship and most valuable player award—an honor he had won in 1932 and 1933.

For the past two weeks he's been playing with a temperature of about 100 degrees. The sinus infection, returning this spring after an attack of influenza, has impaired the vision of his right eye. But through yesterday his batting average was .415, third highest in both major leagues.

"Maybe this is the year I can lick this thing," he said today. "It can't last forever. I'm going to struggle out there each afternoon and try to ride right over it."

When the blacksmith-armed Jimmie hit only .285 in 1937 many fans thought his brilliant career had ended. But last season he hit 50 home runs and led the American League in runs driven in, with 175.

Through 1938, his thirteenth in the majors, his lifetime major league batting average was a remarkable .335. In three World Series, while with the Philadelphia Athletics, he averaged .344 with his stick.

He figured in one of baseball's biggest deals in 1935, being traded by the A's to Boston, along with Johnny Marcum, for a reported $150,000 and two players.

Johnstown Trains Okay For Preakness

One More Short Drill Awaits Derby Winner Before Big Race

Pimlico, Md., May 11.—"A short blow out tomorrow morning and then we'll settle down to await the Preakness."

Thus spoke Trainer "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons after he had seen the Bel Air stud's Johnstown and Challenge and the Wheatley Stable's Gilded Knight, whom he will saddle in the Maryland Jockey Club's classic on Saturday, gallop two slow mines in Indian fashion this morning.

A few minutes after 8 o'clock, Fitzsimmons' charges, now 1 to 5 favorites to capture the closing mile and three sixteenths feature of the Maryland Jockey Club's spring meeting, were sent on the track.

With Johnstown leading, Gilded Knight second and Challenge another length behind, the favored entry for the Preakness, galloped twice around this historic racing plant.

Their exercise boys pulled them up in front of the old clubhouse at the southern end of the track. They were turned around and walked slowly back to the paddock. Trainer Fitzsimmons and assistants George (Fish) Tappan and Tommy Driscoll looked 'em over from head to hoof as they walked around the paddock ring several times. Satisfied that Johnstown, Gilded Knight and Challenge were okay, Fitzsimmons gave the signal to walk them back to the barn.

Johnstown will occupy stall No. 24 in the last barn at the southern end of the track. This is the same stall that held William Woodward's Gallant Fox, 1930 winner of the Preakness, and Woodward's Omaha, victor in the 1935 running of the 3-year-old classic. Out of stall 24 will likely come Woodward's third Preakness winner, at least that's what stable attendants say. These men feel No. 24 so lucky that they are going to wager on No. 2 and No. 4 in Saturday's daily double regardless of what horses hold these numerals.

Luckett to Manage Order of Eagle's Nine

Jim Luckett has been appointed manager of the Fraternal Order of Eagles softball team, and has scheduled the first practice for tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 at Hayden's Field, Alexandria. All candidates for the team are requested to report.

The Eagles will perform in the Class B division of the Alexandria Softball League.

4 Navy Riflemen On All-American Small Bore Team

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 11.—Navy's undefeated sharpshooters today took four out of five places on the Intercollegiate All-American small bore rifle team.

The Naval Academy was advised by the National Rifle Association that four of the Middie riflemen made the first team, and a fifth was selected for the second squad.

Kansas Midshipmen grabbed the lion's share of the honors. Three of the five honored are Jayhawkers.

Midshipmen on the first All-American are: W. A. Stile, jr., Kansas City, Kan.; J. W. McConnaughhay, Newton, Kan.; J. C. Roper, Hixson, Tenn.; J. W. McCoy, Clarksville, Tex.

Midshipman C. Ross, jr., Wichita, Kan., was named to the second All-American.

Helen Smith Belle Haven Golf Chairman

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, May 11.—Mrs. Helen Smith has been appointed chairman of ladies' golfing activities at the Belle Haven Country Club for the coming season, according to announcement today by R. L. Kane, chairman of the club golf committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. Robert Blickle and Mrs. John A. Luse, both of whom have been active with the Belle Haven ladies' team for the past several seasons.

The new chairman has announced plans for the first Ladies' Day program, to be held next Wednesday at the club, when a putting contest and 9-hole handicap tournament will be featured. Luncheon will be served at 12:30, following which a general discussion of plans for the season will be held.

Dick Marshall, Belle Haven president; Tom Ryan, club pro, and R. L. Kane will attend the luncheon for the purpose of helping work out a ladies' program for the season.

Committees to serve under the new chairman include the following: Mrs. Clarence Robinson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jack Howard, treasurer; Miss Elsie Cole and Mrs. John Shuptrine, tournament; Mrs. Aubrey Callahan and Mrs. Earle Knight, handicap, and Mrs. Al Wilson, entertainment.

Elkton Defeats Dayton Nine, 17-7

Harrisonburg, Va., May 11.—Elkton High, Eastern divisional title holders, made their debut in Rockingham County High School League championship competition by slashing out a 17-to-7 victory over Dayton High, Western winners, in the opening game of the series. The second game will be played here Saturday.

Lud Davis limited Dayton to three hits and fanned 16, while Elkton clouted Estep who fanned 12, for 15 safeties, including five extra base blows with men on base. Fourteen errors caused the score to mount.

Conference Tourney In Second Round When Rain Halts Play

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., May 11.—Nearly two rounds of singles play were completed in the Southern Conference Tennis Tournament today before a thunderstorm halted late afternoon matches.

Three second-round matches have yet to be played, but Coach John F. Kenfield, of North Carolina, tournament director, said he hoped to get both the singles and doubles matches into the semifinal bracket before Saturday. Two first-round doubles were finished today and several matches were under way when the storm broke.

North Carolina sent four men, Rider, Bill Rood, Early and Rawlings through today's matches safely, but Early and Rawlings still have second-round opponents to meet. Early meets Phillips, of Maryland, and Rawlings plays the winner of the Dick Pinck-Lorimer Walker match.

Early round upsets found Ritzenberg, Maryland ace, defeating a tired Carl Rood, of North Carolina, 6—2, 6—1. Phillips, also of Maryland, turned in a 6—3, 6—1 victory over Jim Murray, of N. C. State, and Askin, still another Terrapin entry, stroked his way to a 7—5, 3—6, 6—3 triumph over Ager, of Duke.

Virginia Golfers Defeat Rutgers

New Brunswick, N. J., May 11 (AP).—Virginia's long-driving golfers stopped here today long enough to tee off to a 7½ to 1½ victory over Rutgers University before taking the road again. It was the ninth win for the Southerners and the Scarlets' fourth loss.

Ted Whitlock, Rutgers sophomore, was the only winner for his team as he eked out a 3-and-2 win over Charlie Middleton. The Scarlets gained their other half point by splitting one of the best ball matches.

Cushman (Va.) defeated Cochrane, 4-3; Brand (Va.) defeated Weinberger, 2 up; Cushman and Brand won best ball, 3-2; Oehmig (Va.) defeated Bishop, 6-5; Ferris (Va.) defeated Brown, 5-4; Whitlock (R.) defeated Middleton, 3-2; Buttle (Va.) defeated Braid, 1-up; Whitlock and Braid tied with Middleton and Buttle for best ball.

Bridgewater Eagles Beat Hornets, 8 to 5

Harrisonburg, Va., May 11.—A five-run rally by Bridgewater in fifth today paved the way for the Eagles' 8-5 victory over the Hornets. Dwight Shull hurled for the Eagles and led batting with three hits.

Eagle batsmen rallied in eighth to put the game on ice on Ruby's homer and hits by Shirkey and Shull

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A ludicrous incident in which two tin soldiers in a continental team game decided to try their luck at psyching, is shown by today's hand. The disastrous result was that they lost a perfectly good game in spades because of their tomfoolery.

At the other table of the match where a more sober demeanor was maintained, the opposite side played the hand at diamonds for a save.

East and West bid five diamonds over four spades, and were not doubled, went set four, and congratulated themselves at the fine profit they scored.

When the psychic artists met the hand, the bidding was nothing short of marvelous. It is shown along with the cards in today's box.

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 5 2 ♡ 10 3 ◇ 10 7 6 4 ♣ A K Q 10 3
WEST: ♠ J 4 ♡ 4 ◇ K Q J 8 5 3 2 ♣ 8 5 2
EAST: ♠ K 10 6 ♡ A K Q J 9 ◇ A 9 ♣ 9 7 6
SOUTH: ♠ A Q 9 8 7 3 ♡ 8 7 6 5 2 ◇ None ♣ J 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 NT.	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Dbl.	Pass	4 ◇
5 ♣	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♡

East opened with one no trump, the forcing bid of the Vienna system. South had an inspiration to bid two diamonds, and when West passed North did his best to confuse the situation still further with an equally psychic two hearts.

North, after showing his real suit, clubs, and being doubled by East, turned to that player and inquired: "What did you understand from your partner's four diamond bid?" East, not surprisingly, replied that the whole of the bidding was beyond his comprehension.

The bidding proceeded on its merry, mad way, until South found himself faced with the problem of taking 11 tricks at a trump contract in which he was void.

After his herculean efforts, which resulted in his being seven down, he had to face still a further trial from his partner, who mildly inquired if "he did not think the spade suit worth mentioning."

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Tonight the six semifinalists in The Post-A. F. G. E. "Beauty With Brains" Contest will confront Judge Mark Question in the Umbrella Court of the Air. One of the six girls will emerge with the title of "Miss Beauty With Brains" and on the 19th will go to the New York World's Fair to be guest of honor on Government Employes' Day, May 20. But each of the six semifinalists is assured of an all-expense trip to the fair, though they will go at various times as guests of the A. F. G. E. The semifinalists were selected from a large field of candidates.

Incidentally, Herbert Strople, the A. F. G. E.'s chairman of the World's Fair committee, reports that hundreds of Government employes are flocking to make reservations for the trip to the fair the organization is sponsoring on the week-end of the 19th of May. A special train leaves Washington at 1:30 p. m. Friday and returns at midnight Sunday. The party will include the titleholder in the contest. She will attend several functions arranged in her honor in New York.

Jobs: The C. S. C announces an open competitive examination for the position of lay inspector in the Bureau of Animal Industry, Agriculture Department, at $1,620 a year. Applicants must have lived for six months since their twelfth birthday on a farm or ranch producing livestock; or must have had certain experience in handling livestock or have engaged in the preparation or processing of meat or meat-food products. The top age limit is 40; the deadline on applications is May 29.

Public Works Administration employes will hold their spring dance in the west ballroom and cocktail lounge of the Shoreham Hotel tonight. The occasion is the sixth anniversary of the establishment of the PWA. Employes of other Interior agencies, including all I. D. R. A. members, have been invited. J. J. Madigan, executive officer, PWA, heads a lengthy and representative list of committee members.

The U. S. Maritime Commission's baseball squad, which has entered the departmental league, includes: Haworth, first; Tirling, second; Cummings, third; Mansfield, shortstop; Valentine, catcher; Warvel, Frischi, Cross, Zurik, outfield, and Giller and Milliken, pitchers.

Bureau of Engraving and Printing's baseball team, which competes in the Departmental League Mondays, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday at 5 p. m. on the Ellipse, includes: Howard, third; Hawkins, shortstop; Auerbach, first; Calvi, second; Healy, catcher; Alteri, Murphy, Benedictus, Kennedy, Kirkpatrick, Keller and Tippet, outfielders; Mess and Felix, pitchers.

Recent retirements from the Government Printing Office were: Lewis K. Adams, compositor, 31 years' service; George R. Erler, group chief, 32 years; Charles F. Mullen, imposer, 37 years; Charles H. Smith, stores helper, 30 years; Herman L. P. Smith, proofreader, 33 years; King Whittington, repairman, 31 years, and Harry B. Yates, bookbinder, 35 years' service.

The Women's Union (N. F. F. E.) of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has nominated the following members for delegates to the national convention: Margaret Garry, Ollie G. Greer, Nora James, Gertrude M. McNally, Mignon Miller, Nicie B. Perrell, Minnie D. Stevens and Mary Willard. The election will be held at the regular meeting in June. The national convention will be held this September in San Francisco.

The next performance of the Union Playhouse (N. F. F. E.) will be held May 25 in the Agriculture auditorium and will feature the Playhouse Chorus. Lee H. Shugar, the manager of these enterprises, writes this column:

"A highlight of the last show that might be interesting was when J. Elliott Ferry, dressed as a Union soldier, appeared singing several Union marching songs. He was hissed by many in the audience. When Gordon Barnes, attired as a Confederate soldier, appeared, he was roundly cheered. The irony of the situation is that Ferry was born in the South, while Barnes came here from the North."

Bob Burns Says—

Sometimes I'm just struck dumb when I read about the progress that science has made in the last few years. I can remember just a few years back when chewin' gum was a novelty. Today if a person ain't seen with their jaws movin' up and down all day it's either 'cause they ain't got no gum, or they ain't kissable.

Now if the human race could progress as fast as science brings out new things this sure would be a great world.

The trouble is, we got to be educated slowly to these new things. Old Doc Meier's down home told Uncle Hod if he'd take them Vitamin D pills, it would add 15 years to his life. But you can't teach an old dog new tricks. Uncle Hod sort'ta shied away from 'em.

Doc said, "You're not afraid to take them pills are you?" Uncle Hod said, "No, it's them 15 years that bothers me. I'm just wonderin', on what I've got saved, if I can afford to live that much longer."

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Peg's finger flew to her throat, where a pulse suddenly hammered. Then she realized that neither Mazie nor Doris knew about Hewitt and herself

Synopsis

Peg Patterson, orphaned ward of Otto Nelson, Washington broker, works in her godfather's office. Hewit Gill, ambitious salesman in Nelsons' office, who professes to love Peg, is not liked by the girls in the office. At an auction, Peg meets Anthony Covington, State Department attache. Also present is Mrs. Demarest Polk, wife of a newly rich Senator. In seeking to avoid Anthony later, Peg dashes into a garage just in time to see a woman shoot a man. Terror-stricken because she feels she was witness to a murder, Peg rushes back to the office and phones Mr. Nelson. Maizie Darton, another typist, is still at the office.

CHAPTER V

Maizie looked up and her long, dark lashes threw shadows on her cheeks. Her smile was bright, but there was wanness in it, too. She said softly: "It's all typing, Peg, and you don't know how yet. Mr. Gill asked me to get these reports out tonight. I could have done it just as well tomorrow. They don't go to the committee until next month."

In that moment Doris Murphy, one of the stenographers, came back from the ladies' room to get her purse. Her eyes were dark and sullen. She said: "If I didn't have a very ill mother I'd do that for you, Maizie. You know that, don't you?" And then she swung around toward Peg. "Maybe you'd like to help me break Mr. Gill of one of his habits which I don't like, Peg."

Peg tried to smile: "And what's that, Doris?"

"Breathing," said Doris, evenly.

Out in the hall Peg pressed her finger to the elevator button and stood waiting, conscious that everything seemed wrong tonight. All at once she wanted desperately to see her father, to hear that voice which she would never hear again, to touch his hand and hold to it for the protection she had always found in it. All her values of life were somehow distorted now. She couldn't quite gather around her the world her father had taught her to love; a world of poetry and music and beauty, where loyalty was set with pearls, where honor and character and kindness were the finest things of all.

No Appetite

Peg ordered dinner that night on a high stool at an F street drug store. A bowl of steaming soup, steak with small mushrooms around it, peas and beets and a cup of black, strong coffee. Behind the counter the red-headed fountain boy regarded her, grinning.

"Not interested in the old feed bag tonight, Miss Patterson?"

"Not specially," said Peg. Fantastically she could see him in a witness chair, could hear him saying: "On the night of November 15 Miss Patterson came into the drug store and scarcely ate a thing. She looked nervous and frightened and kept glancing over her shoulder, as if she expected someone to come up behind her . . ."

Peg ate most of her dinner, paid her check and hurried around the corner to the big brick building with its windows flat and golden in the night. The name of the business school blazed and blinked in neon lights across the roof. Upstairs a young girl, hanging out of the window, yelled lustily, "Hiya, Peg. Better step on it, kid. You got about two seconds flat to mooch up those steps, and if they aren't the best little indoor set of Alps I ever climbed I'll eat my favorite fur-lined sirup mug."

But two hours of sitting in a small hard chair typing "qwert" and "Yuiop" and "the lazy red fox jumped over the high brown fence" in perfect orderly little columns does something to the morale. Thoughts began crowding Peg again, shattering the defense she had gathered around her. Thoughts of a garage, of an old woman who wasn't an old woman at all, of a revolver shining through the shadows . . .

After school Peg walked home wanting the sharp wind in her face. But neither the wind nor the walk helped. That feeling of suspense, that odd sense of helplessness, walked with her. Georgetown's quaint and romantic atmosphere was lost in the darkness, in the icy chill of her thoughts. It seemed robbed of its colonial beauty by the bald efficiency of progress; shabby and dirty, even a little sinister. The chain stores and Negro shanties and hovels of the poor stood out like decayed teeth between the rows of old Georgian homes.

"I'm just making a tragedy out of something that doesn't concern me at all," Peg railed at herself as she hurried through the little picket gate at Aunt Mehalie's. And then she saw the first floor was lighted. That Miss Suzy-Q, a newly painted red jallopy, was parked at the old carriage entrance on the side of the house, which meant that Duncan had arrived a day early to spend his usual week-end with them.

Duncan

Peg dashed up the steps and flung the door open. Her lips parted to call Duncan's name and then closed soundlessly.

Duncan Patterson, in the full dress regalia of the Air Corps, was in the wide high-ceiled hall, standing far back in dark shadows. He had not heard Peg come in. He had been talking evidently on the telephone for he was putting the instrument back on its cradle.

In that unguarded moment he seemed somehow utterly weary. His body sagged; his shoulders and his head and his hands were all collapsed and inert. There was a gray and rigid line along his jawbone.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Valedictory — BY MILTON CANIFF

I CAN'T SEE ANY WAY OUT! IF I TOOK APRIL TO TH' GOVERNOR'S PARTY-THEN COULDN'T DANCE WITH HER - SHE'D BE ASHAMED OF ME!..
GUESS I SHOULDN'T HAVE HOPED T' HOLD A GRAND GIRL LIKE HER... IT'LL KILL ME T' DO IT - BUT I'D BETTER WRITE HER A NOTE - THEN GO 'WAY TO AUSTRALIA, OR INDIA, AN' FORGET...
THERE... MAYBE SHE'LL THINK OF ME SOMETIMES... AN' CRY A LITTLE WHEN SHE WONDERS WHY I DID IT!
Dearest April
I have reached a great decision. I had better go out of your life. That Crispin guy can take you to the Governor's party after all.
Yours truly
Terry
P.S. I have gone to Australia or someplace.

Synod Will Mark 100th Anniversary of Flight From Saxony

Celebrating the 100th anniversary of their forbears' flight to America for religious freedom, local Missouri Synod Lutheran churchmen will hold special rites here next Sunday.

Climaxing morning programs in Trinity, local; Trinity, Mount Rainier, and Christ Lutheran churches, a joint service is scheduled for 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, with Dr. Walter A. Maier as principal speaker.

Faculty-member of Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, Dr. Maier is a noted radio preacher and leader of the Sunday afternoon Lutheran hour of the Mutual Broadcasting Company. "The Church and the Present Crisis" will be his topic.

Ridiculed and oppressed in Germany, their homeland, and especially in Saxony, a group of 700 men and women sailed from Bremen in the latter part of 1838 in five chartered vessels, one of which was lost at sea.

Organized in 1847 as the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of Missouri, Ohio and Other States, the synod is now spread over North America and South America, India, China, Europe and Africa, and has a membership of 1,320,000; 5,000 congregations and preaching stations, with over 3,000 pastors; 1,350 schools, with over 2,000 instructors, and about 5,000 Sunday, Saturday and summer schools.

American U. Dramatic Club To Stage Play

Shakespeare's, "The Taming of the Shrew," will be presented by the Dramatic Club of American University at 8 p. m. today in the University gymnasium, Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues northwest.

Catherine Knockey will play Katharina, and Frank Meloy will be Petruchio. Other members of the cast are, Rene Beard, Vivian Yeager, John Abbadessa, George Brown, William Culp, Kenneth Fox, Burke Hertz, Gene Hoover, Fred Horton, Victor Purse, Hector Sherertz, Hank Shields, Kimber Shoop, Douglas Stephenson, Charles Stewart, Harold Toner, and Jack Tulloss.

The play is directed by Prof. Will Hutchins. Mary Louise Klaas is stage manager; Rene Beard, costume manager; Carroll Vigeant, property manager, and William Persons, carpenter.

Salvation Army Head to Be Feted

Lieut. Commissioner William C. Arnold, newly appointed leader of the Salvation Army in Washington, and Mrs. Arnold will be honor guests at a welcome meeting tonight in the Temple Corps Auditorium, 606 E street northwest. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will speak.

Former District Commissioner Sidney F. Taliaferro will present Commissioner and Mrs. Arnold. The program will include talks by Dr. William Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Maj. Gilbert S. Decker, welfare and public relations director of the Army. Music will be furnished by the divisional band and Temple Songsters.
